After a conference Mr. and Mrs. Griffin came to the conclusion that Zeb had been cornered in some way and had yielded to temptation. They cared little for the gold that was missing, but regretted that one they had grown fond of should have robbed them. Mr. Griffin told Zeb that they must part and handed him $500 for immediate use. Zeb declined to take the money.

Mr. Griffin decided to take his gold to New Orleans and succeeded in getting his family across the isthmus without one of them coming down with any of the fevers then prevalent in that region. On reaching the Crescent City he had the treasure carted to a bank and asked for a draft for its value on New York. The gold was counted and the draft made out. When Mr. Griffin saw it he remarked that there must be some mistake. He had figured the amount himself from the weight and had made it much less. The amount of the draft was the same as it would have been had the gold missed at Panama not been taken, whereupon he received the following statement:

"Gold sent from Washington to the mint at New Orleans has been found to weigh less at the latter than the former place. This is because New Orleans is nearer the equator than Washington, and the centrifugal force arising from the revolution of the earth is greater the nearer one approaches the equator, rendering objects lighter."

Here was an explanation of the missing four pounds of gold. Mr. Griffin hurried at once to his wife and daughter to announce that there had after all been no robbery. Zeb was communicated with and money sent to bring him to New Orleans. When he arrived he was received with open arms and from that time forward was a member of the Griffin family, taking their name in lieu of his own, which he never knew.

BRYAN OPPOSED TO FREE TOLLS

PARTY NEVER FOR SUBSIDIES

Secretary Sustains President's Position in Issue of Commoner—Says the United States Holds Proud Position Among Nations—Tells About Great Britain.

Washington, April 13.—Secretary Bryan has thrown himself in the canal tolls fight and by doing so has raised another issue which will increase the bitterness in the Democratic party.

He charges in effect that the tolls exemption plank in the Baltimore platform was inserted through subterfuge without the convention realizing the full meaning of the declaration.

For the first time also Mr. Bryan asknowledges that the diplomatic relations of this government with the other nations of this earth are seriously threatened by the exemption clause in the Panama canal act and that it involves the question of the United States arraying itself against the world.

His views were given out at the state department with the explanation that they are expressed through the issue of the Bryan publication.

Inserted by Subterfuge.

Secretary Bryan justified the repudiation of the tolls exemption plank not only on the ground that it was inserted through subterfuge, but also because it is in contradiction of another plank in the same platform against direct or indirect ship subsidies. The latter he described as the larger plank of the two.

Occupies Proud Position.

Secretary Bryan, in his statement, also gives for the first time his own appreciation of the standing of this nation under the present administration of the state department, in the eyes of the world.

"We occupy today," says he, "a proud position among the nations. We are foremost advocates of peace and arbitration. We are becoming more and more a moral factor throughout the world."

What England Has to Do With It.

"What has Great Britain done to justify the accusation that she is trying to dictate to this country. She has simply called attention to the terms of the treaty and asked for arbitration of the questio nof construction in case this government differs from the British government in the construction to be placed upon the language.

"In the controversy over the Welland canal Canada withdrew a discrimination which she had made in favor of Canadian ships in order that no cause for friction with the United States authorities in regard to the matter shall exist.

"Why cannot the United States withdraw a discrimination for the same reason? The 'Surrender to England' argument is being used now just as it has been used in the past and for the benefit of the same selfish interests, but now that the people have secured tariff reduction they can no longer be frightened by this subterfuge."

M'NAMARA HAS PAROLE RIGHT

Given Equal Standing with Abe Ruef by Court Decision.

San Francisco, Cal., April 13.—By a decision of the state supreme court, Abraham Ruef, former political boss of San Francisco, who is serving fourteen years in the state penitentiary at San Quentin under conviction of having accepted bribes, becomes eligible for immediate parole. The decision, however, although making it mandatory that his application be considered by the state board of prison directors, in no way directs them to grant it.

This construction of the statute also makes eligible John J. McNamara, former secretary of the International Brotherhood of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, convicted in Los Angeles of an attempt to dynamite the plant of the Llewellyn Iron works.

BANDIT ESCAPES AND MOCKS PROSECUTOR

"See Me Later" He Scribbles Under Office Window.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., April 13.—Frank G. Carroll, alias Wilson, the confessed bandit, who robbed the Union bank of Altoona and shot Cashier A. P. Rupert, and Pennsylvania Railroad Foreman W. E. Blackburn, on March 23, wriggled through a six inch window opening in his cell in the Blair county jail at Hollidaysburg, climbed up the outer wall to the roof and then fashioned a forty-foot rope out of his bed clothing by which he descended to the street below. He then walked to the district attorney's office directly opposite the court house and there scrawled in chalk marks on the brick under the window of the district attorney's office this message: "See me later—F. G. C."

Nearby residents declare that a high-powered car was stationed in the street close to the jail at the midnight hour and that the prisoner had the aid of accomplices in making his successful dash for freedom.

I. W. W. ADOPTS PANKHURST IDEA

Woman Commits Sacrilege at Easter Church Service.

WOULD INSTRUCT PARKHURST

Disturber Proclaims Article by Raster Is Not Written in Spirit of Christ—Drowned by Organ and Congregation—She Says Heaven Is Her Home.

New York, April 13.—Miss Jane Est, who has taken a leading part in recent I. W. W. disturbances, tried to break up the Easter services at the Madison Square Presbyterian church. Her effort failed in the face of the organ's heaviest tones, the voices of the congregation uplifted in song and the determined physical exertions of James H. Tibbets, the sexton. The agitator said she came to instruct Dr. Charles R. Parkhurst in theology.

Dr. Pankhurst was confined to his rooms at the Hotel Ansonia by a cold and his assistant, the Rev. George R. Montgomery, conducted the services. As usual on Easter Sunday there were many strangers in the church and the gallery especially was crowded. Many prominent persons were in their pews.

The collection had just been taken and Mr. Montgomery was about to announce the next hymn. Then from her seat in the front row of the gallery above the reading desk the woman arose waving a copy of a newspaper. In a high-pitched voice she shouted:

Criticises Parkhurst.

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I have here an article written by the pastor of this church in regard to the I. W. W. This article is not written in a Christain spirit. It has nothing to do with the spirit of Christ."

There was an uneasy stir in the congregation. Some one in the rear of the church shouted, "Sit down, shut up."

Mr. Montgomery seemed inclined to pay no attention. He announced the hymn, but his voice was not heard. The woman had raised her voice to its highest pitch and she was so angry that her words were not distinguishable. It was just one scream after another. The congregation remained quiet but Howard Parkhurst, the organist, pulled his stops for full organ and the church rocked to the sonorous tones of "Lift Up Your Voices in Triump on High."

The choir and congregation responded vigorously and the voice of the agitator was lost in the chorus. Meanwhile those near the screaming woman saw Saxton Tibbits seize the woman and summarily eject her and turn her over to the police.

Heaven Her Home.

On the way to the East Twenty-second street police station, Miss Est continued to scream her denunciations of Dr. Parkhurst. In giving her pedigree she said that Heaven was her home. As for her occupation she said she had none, but that she preached the word of God. She was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Curious Wedding Ring Custom.

There is an old tradition at Tours to which brides adhere strictly, according to Comte Austin de Croze, who delivered a lecture on French folklore in London. When the ring is being put on her finger at the altar the bride takes care that it does not pass beyond the second joint. Otherwise she would never hope to be absolute sovereign in her new home.

WASHINGTON IS BACKING MAYO

Mexico Will Salute the United States Flag.

HAS UNTIL TO-DAY TO ACT

Step taken by Rear Admiral in Crisis at Tampico Is Heartily Approved—Time for Adequate Apology Extended from Friday Ends Today—Demands to Be Complied With.

Washington, April 13.—The American flag will be given a national salute of twenty-one guns by the federal forces at Tampico.

It became known here that Admiral Mayo's demand for this salute as part of the reparation for the indignities put upon an American naval officer and marines at Tampico is supported vigorously by this government and that the rendering of the salute will be insisted upon. If necessary a demonstration of force will be made to convince President Huerta and the commander at Tampico that this time the United States is backing up its word to the limit.

Must Salute at Once.

An extension of time for consideration of the demands of Admiral Mayo for an apology and for the salute was granted the Huerta government, but it is not likely that this period will be extended further. Admiral Mayo originally specified that the salute must be given the American colors not later than 6 o'clock on Friday night.

The attitude of officials here with regard to the Admiral'ss demand for a salute was notably stiffer than it was the day before. The more vigorous tone adopted is commonly attributed to the fact that a message has been received from President Wilson expressing his approval of Admiral Mayo's action.

COURT VICTORY FOR "DRYS"

Confiscation of Liquor Shipped Into Kansas Is Upheld.

Topeka, Kan., April 13.—The Webb-Kenyon law, which gives the states control over liquor shipments, was upheld by the Kansas supreme court. As a result of the decision Kansas will take charge of all liquor shipped into the state.

The case was that of a St. Louis brewing company, appealing from a decision of a district court. The St. Louis company shipped a car load of beer to Corona, Kan. State officials confiscated it under the Webb-Kenyon law.

STILL HOPE FOR PEACHES

But the Crop Appears Worse Than a Year Ago.

Muskegon, Mich., April 13.—"Peaches now look much worse than they did a year ago at this time, but if April remains cold and there are no storms or frosts or other reverses after the buds begin to swell, there will be a larger crop than last year."

This is the almost unanimous opinion of growers and other experts who have made careful examinations in western Michigan.

PRESIDENT IS BACK ON WHITE HOUSE JOB

He Wants Antitrust Legislation Hurried to Fore.

Washington, April 13.—President Wilson arrived here in time to put in a full day on the strenuous program of work he has set for the week.

The house judiciary committee will be called to the White House to report upon the progress made with the bill to supplant the Sherman antitrust act and to consult with the president upon the steps necessary to be taken before that measure together with that creating an interstate trade commission may be reported into the house.

During the week the president plans to hold a number of conferences with senators on the situation with regard to the tolls repeal. He will make a determined effort to bring the opposition to his program to a head as soon as possible realizing as he does that the upper house will be pressed for time in completing the anti-trust program if the Sims repeal bill is allowed to drag along.

MINERS RUSH TO GET JOBS

Calumet, Mich., April 13.—As the result of the announcement that the strikers would be given opportunity to vote on the question of ending the copper strike, the strikers have been deserting the Western federation by hundreds and all the operating copper companies recruited their working forces up to normal.

The Calumet and Hecla and Superior were about the only companies that did not take on additional men. Between 800 and 1,200 men applied for work and it is expected many more will do so.

PETITION FOR RATE BOOST

"Round Robin" to Capital to Favor Increase in Freight Charges.

Gary, Ind., April 13.—Presidents of the various commercial bodies of the Calumet region will hold a joint conference in Hammond to adopt a plan of conveying to President Wilson and the interstate commerce commission the sentiment of 40,000 mill workers and railroad men, praying for an early settlement of the freight rate question and favoring the granting of the 5 per cent increase.

It is assured that a "round robin" message will be sent to the president and the commission.

Mrs. Hazen I. Sawyer.

Keokuk, Ia., April 13.—Mrs. Hazen I. Sawyer, vice regent of the Iowa D. A. R. and wife of a prominent lawyer, died in Keokuk, aged forty-one years. She was the daughter of Dr. G. F. Jenkins, one of the founders of the Keokuk College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OLD JAPANESE ART

Swords of Perfumed Steel That Cannot Now Be Made.

MARVEL OF A CRYSTAL BALL

Steel made more than 800 years ago with a sweet odor put in so that the metal still retains the scent—that is one of the secrets of an old Japanese sword maker described by Reginald F. St Fere Valle of London. Mr. Valle is an amateur collector and his enthusiasm for the beauty of old Japanese art has carried him far back into the centuries.

Mr. Valle actually owned a sword of scented steel one time, but it was stolen from the office of his lawyer several years ago. He regards this loss as the greatest a collector could face and feels sure that he will never get that sword back again.

"The perfume was delicate and pleasing," he said. "It is not the only sword of the kind in the world. The royal collection at Vienna has one, and there are two or three more which have retained their fragrance for all these hundreds of years.

"The scent is actually a part of the steel. The sword was incased in a wood sheath, which gave forth no odor. The handle of the sword was of wood, which was easily removed and which gave no odor. The makers' names, father and son, were on the steel of the handle.

"I entertained a group of Sheffield steel men at my home several years ago and just as a surprise for them I had the sword on the table. They were boasting about what great steelmakers they were, and then I asked them to smell the sword. They were the most surprised men you ever saw.

"'Steelmakers,' I said, 'There is some real art in making steel; let us see you equal that.' They could not, of course."

Mr. Valle said that there are hundreds of mechanical tricks of the Japanese artisans of hundreds of years ago which have been lost. These men have made many articles which can not be duplicated with modern machinery.

"I have in my home a crystal ball six inches in diameter," he said. "It is as round as a billiard ball; it will stand any test for roundness. That was made by hand several hundred years ago. It would be difficult to make it now with machinery, if it is possible; but think of the years of toil and the special ability required for a man to rub a block of crystal into a perfect sphere."

Mr. Valle said that old Japanese princes kept hordes of men at work, paying them fairly well. These men had food and lodging assured for the rest of their lives, and they didn't have to hurry with their work.

He told of one cabinet started by one man for the prince who employed him but who failed to finish it. He died and the prince died. The son of the artisan took up the work, expecting to finish it for the son of the former prince. They both died, and the cabinet was finally finished by the grandson of the original cabinetmaker and presented to the grandson of the original prince.

"There was one swordmaker who had the trick of making a dagger with a very hard steel point, which gradually grew softer toward the handle. He did this by taking a dagger blade of uniform hardness, packing it in clay which was thicker toward the handle. In this way when he heated the pack the heat was graded, being strong at the point and soft near the handle.

"The secret lay in the temperature of the water he put it in after heating it. No one could discover how hot the water was or how long he kept the mass in the water.

"He had several young men working for him, and one of these men, a trickster, was anxious to learn the secret. The old man prepared his bath in a private tent. One day he was coming out of the tent with a newly finished sword under his arm when the young man darted past him and stuck his hand in the water.

"The old man wheeled and struck out with his sword. He cut so quickly that he severed the young man's arm before the young man's nerves could convey any idea of the temperature of the water to his brain—or so they say."

One of the old swordmakers had the peculiar knack of making swords which, of themselves, continually searched for trouble. "Blood drinkers," these swords were named. There was one of them in the Bowes collection, which was sold in England seven or eight years ago.

"One of my friends bought this sword," said Mr. Valle. "He was explaining its peculiar nature to some of us. One of the men laughed at the superstition. Just as he was in the middle of a guffaw the sword slipped out of its sheath, the handle struck the floor and the point fell against his leg. He was severely cut. I saw this and, while I myself don't attach any supernatural power to the sword, that series of facts keeps me from laughing at it."—New York Sun.

The Practical Side of Music.

He was a lover of music who had just been to hear Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and he was expatiating upon its beauties to an unresponsive friend whom he observed to yawn. The music lover was hurt. "Look here, John," he protested, "don't you think that music is of some practical benefit in life?"

"Oh, yes," said the unresponsive one. "Why, judging from the portraits I have seen of eminent musicians, especially pianists, I should say that music is great to keep the hair from falling out."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not Guilty.

Lawyer—You understand what you are to do in court now, don't you? Client—Yes, I guess so. Lawyer—When the court asks you whether you are guilty of manslaughter or not you say "guilty." Client—But I can't do that, my conscience wouldn't allow it. Lawyer—Why? Client—Because it wasn't a man I killed, it was a woman.—New York Globe.

DIAMOND JUBILEE

Tecumseh's First Baptist Church Friday April 10, 1914.

The celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Baptist church was held Friday with a large attendance. Following the pot-luck dinner which was served at noon, the company assembled in the audience room of the church and the program as published in a former issue of the Herald was given.

Letters were read from Rev. C. E. Conley, Detroit; Rev. B. S. Hudson, Atlantic City; Rev. H. A. Smith, Pasadena, Cal., and Rev. T. W. Kamm of Marianetta, Wis.

A memorial service was a very impressive ceremony in memory of departed members. While Mrs. Moore sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" a number of young girls scattered flowers upon a white drapery on the platform as tribute to the dead. Dr. Hartzog gave a memorial prayer to which Mrs. Moore responded with a solo-prayer.

The addresses and papers were very interesting. A large chorus choir furnished delightful music during each session. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one throughout.

May 21st, 1824, a party of 15 men, four women and six children settled here when all was wilderness. In the previous year Mosgrove Evans had explored this region and decided that this spot on the bank of the Raisin was the most desirable for a settlement. He returned to Jefferson Co., N. Y., and interested his friends in the project. The most important character of this company of pioneers was Gen. J. W. Brown who was a farmer, miller, lawyer, judge and a military officer.

Fifteen years later the founding of this settlement, on the 10th of April, 1839, 28 Baptists entered into a covenant to organize a Baptist church and were duly recognized as such by a council of delegates from surrounding settlements. Ministers were present from Adrian, Brooklyn, Rome, Manchester, Mooreville, Franklin and Saline. It was nearly two years before the church felt financially able to call a pastor, in the meantime Elder J. I. Fulton who was pastor at Brooklyn frequently visited Tecumseh and conducted services. Elder T. H. Moore became their first pastor receiving $300 salary, $100 of which was paid by the Baptist Convention Board of the State of New York. After a pastorate of 16 months he was succeeded by Elder J. I. Fulton who ministered for three years and four months.

The congregation had previously erected a small house of worship at the corner of Pearl and Logan streets. During Elder Fulton's pastorate this building was removed to the West side of Ottawa Street between Logan and Chicago Streets and enlarged.

Up to 1862 the Church was in the midst of a constant struggle. In that year Reverend J. L. McCloud appeared in the Church on a certain Sunday in August and was invited to preach. The congregation was so well pleased with him that they called him. The Church numbered fifty-five members. Two years later the membership numbered seventy one. Pastor McCloud led in erecting a new house of worship being ably assisted by Dr. W. C. Fisher, John Benedict, Adrian Yawger, Dr. J. S. Hamilton, S. J. Fulton, Isaac Adams, John Fisher and John Margesson. In the midst of this effort the pastor's health failed and he was succeeded by Reverend T. S. Hill. November 30th, 1865 the present house of worship was completed, Dr. Gregory then President of Kalamazoo College, delivered the dedicatory sermon.

In 1868 Reverend J. Moxom became dastor. It is said that he organized the first Young People's Society in the church. Fifty-seven members were added to the Church. In 1870 he was succeeded by Reverend P. Olney. Under his administration the Chapel was erected. He was succeeded the following year by Reverand H. E. Hayne whose pastorate continued nearly seven years and was very prosperous. In 1878 Reverand C. E. Conley became pastor, then a young man of twenty-eight years. His pastorate extended over a period of seven years and was prosperous. In 1886 Reverend Frank Adkins became pastor. His pastorate continued for three years. In September, 1890 Reverend Frank Arnold became pastor. In 1893 he was succeeded by Rev. H. A. Smith who served until May 31st, 18[illegible]. In July of that year Rev. B. S. Hudson became pastor. After a pastorate of a little over three years he was succeeded by Rev. W. L. Farnum in the Fall of 1898. Two years later, November 19th, 1900 Pastor Farnum died. In February, 1901 Rev. Leslie Bower became pastor and continued in the pastorate until October, 1905. In March, 1906 Rev. W. F. Kamm assumed the duties of pastor closing his work August 15th, 1909. The present pastor, Rev. W. B. Hartzog, began his labors October 1st, 1909 and is well on his fifth year. During this time many improvements have been made in the church property and parsonage and quite a number of new members have been added to the Church. The attendance at the public services have been good, the Sunday School and Young Peoples' Society now have a larger attendance than at the beginning of his pastorate.

Feminine Limitations.

There are few women that equal the greatest men in the field of art. Women have a genius for mothering. But they seldom carry over the greatness of their motherhood into the field of art. They have not been interested—have not thrown their whole natures into artistic forms of expression.—Maud Powell.

Not Enough.

"What do you think of Fielding?" she asked young Mr. Ashby. "Oh, it's important, of course, but it won't avail anything without good batting."—Exchange.

New Parish House

The Gift of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hicks to St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

An announcement was made at St. Peter's church on Easter Sunday that the funds for the building of a new parish house had been promised and that the work of erection would be begun at once.

At the annual parish meeting held last evening the matter was brought formally before the parish and plans were discussed for the work.

The new parish house will be located just south of the church and will front on Mill street, near enough to the church so a passageway can be built from the audience room of the parish house to accommodate overflow meetings.

The ground is being cleared and made ready for the work of erecting the new building. The dimensions will be 24 x 26 feet, built of frame construction to conform with the other buildings. It will have an audience room 14-6 x 23 6 capable of seating 50 people, a kitchen 10 x 15 feet, vestment room 6 x 10, ladies' coat room 4 x 6, woodshed 8 x 14. There will be an enclosed porch 5 x 6. This building will be used by the church societies choir, Guild and various clubs of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Hicks have through this gift placed at the disposal of this society an up-to-date parish house, which will be a much appreciated addition to the church.

This generous gift to the parish is an expression of their love and devotion to this church, of which Mrs. Hicks has been a life member and Mr. Hicks a member for nearly forty years and for a number of years a vestryman.

It was also arranged at this meeting to repair the present parish house to be used as a rectory. Extensive repairs will be made including the installation of a furnace and an up-to-date bath room.

THE HICKS LIGHTNING ROD CO.

The Hicks Lightning Rod Co. is the name of a new organization recently incorporated and doing business in Tecumseh with a capital of $10,000. John Hicks is president and general manager and Raynor K. Anderson Secretary and Treasurer. This is the out growth of a business which was organized and has been conducted for many years by John F. Hicks and the great success which has attended it has been due to the able management and good business judgement of Mr. Hicks. The business has been extended through the southern portion of Michigan.

Mr. Hicks came to Tecumseh in 1840 when about fourteen years of age. His first business venture was in a Nursery business under the firm name of Hicks Strong & Hicks. Later he was in the hardware and lightening rod business with Lebbeus Drew. He then succeeded Barnes & Jones in the Clothing business but soon desposed of this. A few years since he was a member of the firm Hicks and Son in the jewelry business, his successors being E. J. Peters & Co. During most of these years he has clung to the lightning rod business, employing severel men and horses to carry on his extensive work.

Mr. Hicks has long been identified with the Masonic fraternity and helped with money and influence in the building of the Masonic temple. For fifteen years he was High Priest of the R. A. Chapter and at the age of 80 years filled one of the chairs at the recent Past Masters meeting. Mr. Hicks is of a genial happy nature enjoying life as much as in his younger days. The Herald joins his many friends in wishing this new venture success.

Mrs. Kendrick catered; Mrs. McNeil gave a welcoming address to the boys after which Rev. W. B. Hartzog acted as toastmaster. European Experience With Unemployed

Germany, with her well organized system of labor exchanges, is bringing the manless job and the jobless man together. Likewise England, with her more recently established chain of labor exchanges, is acquiring a fairly definite knowledge of the number of jobs available; of their nature and their location; of the number of men out of work; of the kind of work that they can perform. Not only is this information published but England is advancing the transportation of the jobless man to the manless job. Like wise other foreign countries have provided systems of insurance against unemployment.

Denmark has worked out a very successful system on the contributary basis, the members of the Union, the community and the State contributing to the fund. This plan is now beyond the experimental stage and has been developed according to scientific principles. Similar progress has been made looking toward the regularization of employment in certain so called seasonal industries. In England, one of the most irregular of occupations is that of the longshoreman, has been converted into a fairly regular employment. Some progress in this direction has been made in the United States.—From "Our Army of the Unemployed" by Hon John A Kingsbury in the American Review of Reviews for April.

Eighty Years of Faithful Service to the American Public

The Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company has the enviable record of eighty years of faithful service to the American public. Bear this fact in mind when you get ready to buy a car, for it operates as insurance of quality.

No thoughful business man ever buys a commodity or a luxury or a necessity without looking into the character of the men who make it. This rule of trade is more imperative in the purchase of an automobile than almost anything else you can name.

Eighty years of faithful service is an asset of no uncertain value. This company held the respect of the early settler of the western country because of absolutely honest merchandise in the shape of farm wagons. It established its standing before automobiles were known when it embarked in the automobile business, it clung to the policy that made its farm wagon business famous. And its automobiles are famous, for the same satisfying reason.

That Easter window of Heesen and Heesen was a very attractive one and was a delight to the small boy, who watched the antics of the half dozen "bunnies" who occupied the ground floor in a most satisfied manner. These rabbits were owned by master Marcus Fisher who takes great pride in his pets

EASTER

AT THE CHURCHES.

Holy Week was most fittingly observed in all of the churches with meetings on nearly every evening. Special Good Friday services were held at the Episcopal church, a three hour meeting being most solemn and impressive.

Easter morning dawned bright and beautiful and at 6 o'clock a sunrise service was held at the Methodist church, full of joyous song and thanksgiving for the blessed assurance that Christ has risen.

At 7 o'clock the bell of St Peter's pealed forth and Easter Morn was heralded with songs of praise to the risen Savior. A brief sermon and Holy Communion closed this early service.

Regular services were held at the churches at 10 o'clock with Easter music. At the Baptist church a class of fifteen received the rite of baptism

At 8:30 p. m. the Sunday-school of St Peter's church gave a fine program of music, the singing of the young boys being exceptionally fine

At 5 o'clock the M. E. Sunday-school gave a program of recitations and song under the leadership of Mrs. Geo. Field, and a choir of some 25 voices, under the direction of Mrs Kenrick and Alleen, sang a number of anthems and choruses. Master Archie Waring as a soloist was great

At the regular Sunday-school hour at the Presbyterian church a program of recitation and song was given by the Juniors and the Primary Department which was very good indeed.

The Easter services at the Friend's church Sunday were a success in every way. A fine congregation greatly enjoyed the services both morning and evening. The program rendered by the primary department and the young people of the Sunday school, together with a good chorus, was highly commended by those present The morning sermon was on "The Resurrection of Christ" and in the evening the subject was "Hope" based on the theme of the morning. A number were helped and greatly encouraged in their Christian life by the services of the day.

At 5:15 p. m. the musical entertainment at the Baptist church opened with a grand processional with over fifty in line. They were led by little Cuyler Williamson bearing the Cross. Each one carried a spray of lilies and sang with glad accord as they made their way through the church. The antiphonal singing was most beautifully rendered as were all of the selections.

From here the vast crowd that had listened to this program passed to the Presbyterian church, where another grand program was given under the leadership of Mrs Fred Dickinson.

Each church was beautifully decorated with drapings of white and trailing smilax, ferns, palms and many lovely flowers being used freely,

Surely Easter Day was a day of gladness in Tecumseh, bringing joy to many a sorrowing heart and peace to the troubled soul. Said one of our pastors, "For a town of its size Tecumseh has some remarkable musical talent," and another remarked, "I'm sure there is not another town in Michigan with so many sweet singers as we have here."

The 9 o'clock train was two hours late Monday evening owing to a car being derailed in the yards at Jackson.

Henry Conklin who has been spending the winter in Washington D. C. with his daughter Mrs Dewey returned home Monday. He left for Detroit today for a visit with relatives.

MOTHER OF CHILDREN SEEKS OWN MOTHER

Mrs. Maud Lawson Is Wanting Word of Quakeress Parent.

Chicago, April 13.—Mattie Barnes, now grown up and a mother of six, is searching for her mother, a Quakeress, who, in 1882, left her with a family in Richmond, Ind., because she could not support her. She is now Mrs. Maud Lawton of 2150 Horton avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I am quite an old girl trying to find a 'mamma,' but I think I have one somewhere," she says in a letter to a Chicago newspaper.

"A very dear lady by the name of Lucinda Kelly adopted me from a Quaker home in Richmond, Ind., about the year 1882. I was then about two years and a half old. My mother left me there as she had no other place for me, and I suppose she expected to keep up the payments for me, but failed. So we drifted apart. However, this beautiful woman, Mrs. Kelly, gave me as good a home as any child could want, but as I am a mother now of five dear little girls and one boy, I have a longing for a glimpse at mother or a picture of her."

A Revolutionist

She Passed Through Hairbreadth Escapes

By KATHLEEN EVERSHAM

Henry Cummings, an American, traveling on a train between London and Dover on his way to Paris, left London by an evening train soon after dark. There were four passengers in his compartment when he started, but at the first station two left the train. The remaining passenger besides Cummings was wrapped in a long ulster, with a broad collar turned up about his neck and a felt hat pulled down over his eyes. As soon as the train started after the second stop he roused himself, yawned, cleared his throat with a cough, looked out of the window, peering into the darkness; then turned to a bag beside him and took out a box of cigarettes.

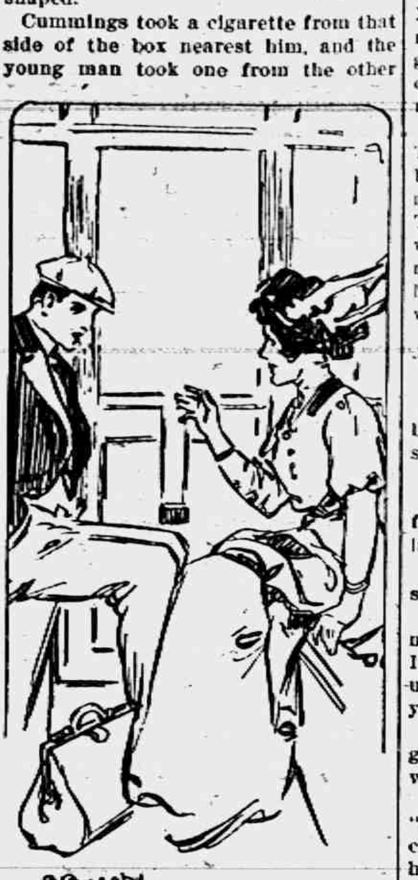
"Do you object to smoke?" he asked of Cummings in broken English.

"Not at all. I am a smoker myself."

"In that case, there being no one else in this compartment except ourselves, I suppose we may smoke."

When the man turned toward Cummings to ask the question the American got such a view of him as was afforded by the dim light from the lamp in the center of the ceiling. He saw a youthful, feminine face, without the sign of a beard, hair of a very light hue and steel gray eyes. The voice, too, was very soft for a man's. He offered his box of cigarettes to Cummings, who noticed that the hand holding it was round and exquisitely shaped.

Cummings took a cigarette from that side of the box nearest him, and the young man took one from the other side before closing and putting it in his bag. Cummings took a silver box from his pocket and, scratching a match on it, held the match for the other to light his cigarette. This gave a better illumination of his fellow passenger's face, and Cummings was very much struck with it. He was sure if he ever saw it again he would know it. It was a serious face, the face of one who might be expected to have some great object in life, and had it not been too feminine it would have been handsome. But only a glimpse was to be had while the young man lighted his cigarette, and Cummings lighted his from the same match. Then the American leaned back to enjoy his smoke.



"YOUR PASSPORT SAVED ME FROM ARREST."

"I fancy," he said presently, "there is a trace of opium in these cigarettes of yours."

"Do you think so?"

"I am quite sure of it. But nearly all cigarettes that are made now contain some opium. I don't mind a little of it."

A very pleasant languor came over Cummings, and, not having anything in common with the stranger to talk about, he permitted himself to fall into a doze.

He was awakened by a rough shake.

"Wake up!"

A man in police uniform was bending over him. Cummings found it hard to keep his eyes open and closed them again, whereupon he was shaken anew. This time he roused himself and began to take in the situation.

The train was at a standstill. There was no one in the compartment except himself and the policeman, though he could see several persons standing without. On the seat opposite him was an ulster which he recognized as belonging to his fellow passenger. His bag lay open beside him.

"Where is the young man who was in the coach with me?" Cummings asked.

"Was there a young man with you?" asked the policeman quickly.

"Yes; there is his ulster. He gave me a cigarette to smoke, and it put me to sleep." Diving into the open bag, he pulled out most of the contents. "My passport!" he exclaimed. "It is gone!"

"We're too late," said the policeman, and, taking Cummings' name and nationality that he might identify the passport if found, he withdrew. Cummings felt for his money, and it was safe. He called to the policeman to ask him for what the missing man was wanted, but the guard slammed the door, locked it, and the train moved on.

The next stop was Dover. Cummings while passing on to the Calais boat asked certain railway officials he met if they knew of what had occurred in his compartment, but none of them could give him any information. Fortunately passports are not needed in most European countries nowadays unless called for specially, and Cummings found no difficulty in entering France without one. He heard nothing from the one that had been taken from him or the person who had taken it. Indeed, no explanation of the matter came to him. There was only the supposition that the young man who had put him to sleep was some one attempting to evade the law.

Two years passed when by a singular freak of fortune Cummings encountered the fugitive from the law again. He was a globe trotter and during the interval had been to America but once and then only for a few months. It is to be admitted that traveling continually he was far more likely to meet any particular person than if he remained in one place.

He was traveling northward from Italy. Leaving Lugano one morning for Lucerne, in the same compartment with him was a lady twenty-two or twenty-three years old, who the moment he looked at her attracted his attention. He was sure that he had seen her before, though he could not tell when or where. Then suddenly it dashed upon him that she was the counterpart of the man who two years before had stolen his passport. From this he came very soon to the conclusion that she was the same person, and that person was not a man, but a woman.

Now that he met her again and knew her he had a great advantage, for she didn't seem to know that she had ever met him before. He looked at her steadily. She looked away, as any lady would when being stared at by a man, but showed no embarrassment. Not caring to let her know that he recognized her, he turned away his glance. He desired to satisfy his curiosity with regard to her and determined not to lose her.

She was evidently traveling alone. There was a man in the compartment besides Cummings and another woman. The woman soon left the train. There being no notice that smoking was permitted in the compartment, the man went to another to light a cigar, leaving Cummings temporarily alone with the lady.

"Madame or mademoiselle," he said, "do you object to smoking?"

"I do not."

"This is not a smoking compartment, but if you don't object I will avail myself of your permission."

"Do so, by all means."

Cummings took a box of cigarettes from his pocket and handed it to the lady.

"Thank you very much, but I never smoke."

"You mean that you do not smoke now, not that you have never smoked. If I mistake not, I have had the pleasure of smoking with you and one of your own cigarettes."

The woman gave him a piercing glance, and her face became a shade whiter.

"It was in a coach," he went on, "between London and Dover. The cigarette you offered me was rather heavily charged with opium or some other drug. At any rate, it put me to sleep, and when I awoke you were gone. I have always been curious to know how you left the train."

The young woman's gaze was fixed upon Cummings without reply for some time. She was evidently much frightened, but as he proceeded appeared to gather confidence. Presently she said:

"You are an American."

"Yes. How did you know that?"

"I should know it and not forget it. Your passport saved me from arrest, and arrest for me meant a return to Russia, and that meant Siberia."

"Then I am more than pleased."

"Had I known that you were an American I would not have put you to sleep with a cigarette. I would have confided my situation to you and asked you to help me. America, as your national hymn says, is the 'land of the free,' and all oppressed peoples may find sympathy there."

"How did you leave the train?"

"I committed my soul to God and jumped in the darkness. There was no stop after I put you to sleep till the train reached Dover. I must jump or be arrested when I reached the terminal. I landed, fortunately, in a ditch beside the railroad or I should have been killed. I finished the journey on foot, but not to Dover. On reaching the coast I crossed the channel in a fishing boat."

"The passport—how did that help you?"

"Not then; later. I have traveled to Russia for consultation with fellow revolutionists as Henry Cummings and returned by using your passport."

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the American. "What sacrifices are made for liberty!"

The two parted at Lucerne, and Cummings never saw the lady again. But she gave him her name, and long afterward he learned that she had illustrated the truth of the adage, "The pitcher that goes too often to the well is at last broken." He learned from a fellow countryman of hers that she had at last been caught and was in the Kara prison.

FOUR DIE IN CHAIR

New York Gunmen Go to Deaths Without Confessing.

"WHITEY" IS NEAR COLLAPSE

Prisoner Is Lifted to Chair and Denounces Witness Until Deadly Current Chokes Him—Three Shocks Are Needed to Kill Louis Rosenberg.

OSSINING, N. Y.—Just as the dawn broke over the gray walls of Sing Sing prison the four young gun men, convicted of assassinating Herman Rosenthal in front of the Hotel Metropole in New York City on the morning of July 16, 1912, were put to death in the electric chair.

None of the men confessed in the death chamber. True to their predictions, they died "game."

It required just thirty-nine minutes to execute the gun men, who went to their death in this order:

First, Frank Cirofici, alias "Dago Frank."

Second, Jacob Seidenschner, alias Frank Mueller, alias "Whitey Lewis."

Third, Harry Horowitz, alias "Gyp the Blood."

Fourth, Louis Rosenberg, alias "Lefty Louie."

"Whitey" Denounces Witnesses.

"Whitey Lewis" alone made a statement in the death chamber. It was a hasty, jerky assertion that the witnesses who swore that he had shot Rosenthal were perjurers.

"Whitey was on the verge of collapse. He suffered an emotional breakdown in his cell. This compelled the order of execution to be changed at the last moment.

"Whitey" was shaking and his face was ashen. Only the sounds of the electricians strapping the electrodes upon the condemned men broke the deathly stillness of the death house.

Warden Clancy had been told that the gun men had something to say, but it was not known whether or not it was a confession. As soon as he was seated Seidenschner began:

"Gentlemen, I am convicted of murder. I am not guilty of shooting Herman Rosenthal. I did not fire the shot. I am innocent and I am about to be electrocuted. People who said they saw me shoot Herman Rosenthal were perjurers. I want you all——"

The man's voice died away in his throat to a choking sob, for the deadly current had suddenly been turned on. The body writhed in the straps and heaved until it seemed to be bursting. Suddenly it went limp.

Witness Is Overcome.

Though the doomed men, comforted by ministers of their faith, betrayed no emotion the strain upon the witnesses was intense.

One man collapsed and had to be assisted from the chamber. "I left there because I was too sick to stay longer," he said, as he was supported out of the gate by a guard.

The official time for each execution was Cirofici, 5:38 to 5:44; Seidenschner 5:48 to 5:53; Horowitz, 5:57 to 6:02,; Rosenberg, 6:08 to 6:17.

The mother and sister of Frank Cirofici and the father of Rosenberg arrived at the prison short after 4 o'clock. The old man lingered outside, refusing to enter. The women went to stay until the last moment with the condemned so nand brother. They had come on an early train from Albany, where a last appeal had been made to Governor Glynn to act. The prison officials showed the women to the death house. There they remained, within a few feet of the grewsome electric chair, until guards in a kindly manner led them away to a reception room in the office of the warden.

Cirofici Is First.

Frank Cirofici was the first to enter the death chamber. He was making an effort to walk upright, but there semed a weight at his knees which dragged him down. A Roman Catholic priest intone dihs service quickly. No time was lost by the four guards. They placed the gun man in the chair and quickly fastened on his head the metal hood, and to his limbs the electrode that completes the fatal circuit. Then the gunman lost the bold front of the underworld. He was utterly unmindful of the activities about him and the stares of the spectators. His face was chalk white. Two shocks were given Cirofici As the prison doctor pronounced him dead "Whitey Lewis" was carried to the chair. The current shut off his denunciation of the witnesses who had sworn he fired the shot that killed Rosenthal. Two shocks were given Cirofici. Horowitz was the next gun man to go. His nerve was better and repeating a rabbi's prayer, met death stoically.

Nine minutes were required for the execution of Louis Rosenberg, or "Lefty Louie." Three shocks were necessary to end his life. Finally he too met the fate of the others and his corpse was lifted out and borne away.

Dr. Mereness later declared the executions the most successful in the history of the prison. The same voltage was used on all four men, the maximum being 1,920, and the minimum 200. From eight to nine amperes were used.

BRYAN ON TOLLS

PARTY NEVER FOR SUBSIDIES

Secretary Sustains President's Position in Issue of Commoner—Says the United States Holds Proud Position Among Nations—Tells About Great Britain.

WASHINGTON. — Secretary Bryan has thrown himself in the canal tolls fight and by doing so has raised another issue which will increase the bitterness in the Democratic party.

He charges in effect that the tolls exemption plank in the Baltimore platform was inserted through subterfuge without the convention realizing the full meaning of the declaration.

Occupies Proud Position.

Secretary Bryan, in his statement, also gives for the first time his own appreciation of the standing of this nation under the present administration of the state department, in the eyes of the world.

"We occupy today," says he, "a proud position among the nations. We are foremost advocates of peace and arbitration. We are becoming more and more a moral factor throughout the world."

What England Has to Do With It.

"What has Great Britain done to justify the accusation that she is trying to dictate to this country. She has simply called attention to the terms of the treaty and asked for arbitration of the questio nof construction in case this government differs from the British government in the construction to be placed upon the language.

"In the controversy over the Welland canal Canada withdrew a discrimination which she had made in favor of Canadian ships in order that no cause for friction with the United States authorities in regard to the matter shall exist.

"Why cannot the United States withdraw a discrimination for the same reason? The 'Surrender to England' argument is being used now just as it has been used in the past and for the benefit of the same selfish interests, but now that the people have secured tariff reduction they can no longer be frightened by this subterfuge."

Wanted—Town Postmaster.

LANSING, MICH. — The term of Seymour Foster, postmaster, has expired. There seems to be no indication that the Democrats will get together in the near future and agree on a man to take the job.

Harris E. Thomas now stands appointed, but he has refused to serve, and Foster will remain in the office until a successor is agreed upon. Mr. Foster has served four terms.

Peach Buds Are Nipped.

LANSING, MICH. — Wheat did not suffer much damage last month according to the state crop bulletin issued by Secretary of State Martindale, as 389 correspondents report that no damage was done while 159 say that wheat suffered some during March

Trip to Sick Wife Kills.

MARIETTE, MICH. — After having driven ten miles to Mariette to see his wife, who is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George King, William Hurlburt, a well known farmer, dropped dead from heart trouble.

The shock has so affected his wife that her recovery is not expected.

INHUMAN PARENTS ADMIT BRUTALITY

Prison Sentence Imposed for Treatment of Boy.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Johnson, fifty-four and forty-six years old, respectively, were sentenced, the man to a year in the Ionia reformatory and the woman to the Detroit house of correction for the same length of time, when they pleaded guilty to cruelly treating Johnson's six-year-old son Wesley.

Wesley has been beaten and abused for some time, a heavy strap being used by the woman until his body was cut and broken. It was charged further that she would tie the child in a chair and leave him at home.

The Johnsons worked on a farm about a quarter of a mile from the school attended by the boy. At first, he was one of the brightest pupils. Then he appeared to lose interest in his studies. Miss Adams, the teacher, began an investigation. She found that the child was provided with only scanty food for his noonday lunch. Other pupils shared their lunch with him.

Some time ago, Wesley began to limp badly. Then he was taken into a farmhouse and examined. It was found that not only was his body cut and marked, but that his feet had frozen and from lack of attention had burst open.

A neighbor made a complaint and the Johnsons were arrested. The father admitted that the boy had been beaten and expressed regret. The step-mother, however, was defiant and manifested no interest in the boy. Wesley, who lived with his mother's father, Ben Ransom, of Vermontville, after his mother was devorced from a's father, was taken home on the father's second marriage.

GREAT DEMAND FOR TUBERS

Michigan Must Raise 10,000,000 More Bushels to Satisfy It.

EAST LANSING, MICH. — According to Michigan agricultural experts, Michigan is facing the big problem of supplying upward of 10,000,000 more bushels of potatoes this year than were on hand last season.

The college authorities are co-operating with the Michigan Potato Growers' association in urging all school crops clubs to raise potatoes this year, and when the national potato show is held in Lansing next December the state will enter into competition with the rest of the country.

HIS FORTUNE WAS VERY BAD

Likewise the Judgment of Farmer Who Gave Gypsy $5.

FLINT, MICH. — John Coles farmer, telephoned the police that a gypsy woman who started to tell his fortune took $5, all the money he had in his pockets, and fled.

He stated that she had him place a coin on each hand and extend his arms. While standing in this position she placed a cloth over his eyes, took what money he had and ran to the wagon which was standing near the house and drove down the road.

REV. KING GETTING WIDE ADVERTISING

Attacks Purgatory and Police Outwit Enraged Mob.

JACKSON, MICH. — With a score of policemen and special officers present Rev. L. J. King, anti-Catholic, delivered the fourth of a series of addresses at the Oddfellows temple, his subject being "Purgatory."

The hall was filled and a crowd equal to that of the previous night gathered outside. During the address two stones and a chisel were thrown through the windows.

Following the lecture the police outwitted the crowd by taking the speaker into the patrol auto by way of the rear door. King was rushed into the machine while it was still in motion. It is said that no further meetings will be held this week but commencing next Monday evening they will be continued at the Haven Methodist Episcopal church.

A meeting for women only was held in the afternoon at the Oddfellow temple by Rev. King, who spoke on the confessional.

TASTE SAVES $1,000 ON HEAT

It Own Plant Results in Fuel and Help Economy.

LANSING, MICH. — State officials, headed by Superintendent of Public Property Charles Pierce, are beginning to figure on whether or not the operation of state boilers for heating this last winter has saved the state any money.

While the figures are not complete, it is plain that at least $1,000 has been saved, and possibly more. The cost of the coal, plus the wages of firemen and engineers, will run close to $5,000. The flat contract which the state had with the Michigan Power company for heat last year was $6,000.

PAYS STATE $1.50 YEAR LATE

Grand Rapids Man's Conscience Worried Over Use of License.

LANSING, MICH. — Secretary of State Martindale received a money order for $1.50 from a Grand Rapids man and the money will be turned into the "conscience fund" of the state treasury.

The Grand Rapids man purchased a second-hand motor truck last year and operated the machine under the license issued to the original owner instead of securing a new license as required by law. He says that his conscience has troubled him.

FRUIT UNHARMED BY FROST

Michigan Growers Say Buds Had Not Advanced Far Enough.

GRAND RAPIDS MICH.—Reports from the western Michigan fruit belt indicate that practically no damage was done by the freeze.

Owing to the cold weather the buds had not advanced enough to be damaged by frost or ice.

His majority over William A. Cullop, of this city, is believed to be seven votes.

The official count may make some changes, but it is thought the unofficial count is correct. Hunt received 5,288 votes to 5,281 for Cullop.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FALL PLANTINGS

BY SAM JAY.

An Interesting Tale of Oranges and "Homesuckers."

Old Sam Slater was one of the original homeseekers who drifted down from Arkansas into Oklahoma during the land boom some years ago and, failing to grab a prize package of dirt, continued drifting farther south until he reached the open prairies of the immediate Gulf coast where he found an unclaimed tract of rectangular shape and thereupon squatted.

No one seemed to have a yearning for this particular piece of soil, although it was near a lively shipping point with three main line railroads, for the reason that it was situated between the railroads and a willow fringed bayou which drained a large area of rice fields to the northward and overflowed its banks at least twice a year, making the land unfit for anything but grazing except in dry seasons. There being no roads or bridge in either direction, an occupant or homesteader was obliged to ford the stream of water or mud as it chanced to be in order to reach the town of Joslin a quarter mile away.

Now, in the State of Texas where this incident occurred, there is an ancient law to the effect that anyone fencing in a tract of land, large or small, and holding same for a period of five years without legal contest—physical contests don't count—may then have a clear title. The five years elapsed without any serious interference—if one was inclined to think lightly of gun fights—the title was secured and old Sam was jubilant. Only ten acres in all but the old man was growing old and desired a home, "a dry place to lay down" as he expressed it and now he felt as rich as Croesus.

It should be mentioned that old Sam was a widower with seven sons ranging in years from four to sixteen and his overworked wife had murmured when she departed for a more peaceful world: "Be good to the boys, Pap. Be good to 'em."

So by dint of much privation and hard work among the neighboring ranches, hay camps, strawberry fields and nurseries, they managed to make a living and save enough to erect a cheap pine shack large enough to accommodate them all. And with the completion of the home, Industry ceased to be a constant companion; just a casual visitor.

The pear boom came on and, following the lead of prominent men in that section, the old man dreamed of easy money and planted pear trees. They grew of course in that fertile soil and produced large luscious fruit, but a blight swept through the orchards—caused by the climate, some said—and after several years of experimenting with various remedies recommended by horticulturists and entomologists, the enthusiasts grew weary of repeated failures and dropped the pear game.

For several years those prairies remained stationary; that is, the raising of cattle, cotton, corn and other staples went on smoothly as before and the conservative class were happy and contented.

But the boomers were restless. Their chief ambition was to exploit, to shout and sell land at a fictitious value. Someone suggested oranges and the suggestion came in a roundabout manner from nurserymen who had been experimenting for several years and really had small groves of the Satsuma variety in full bearing.

Again the enthusiasts threw their hats in the air—some of their heads and contents thereof went skyward also—and planted oranges in blissful ignorance of its culture or marketing. By much exploitation in various ways the people of other states and sections began to come in, buy land and plant orange trees of course. During the years of [illegible] the boom was in full blast.

Outside capital coming in, stores, houses and barns being built, land changing hands rapidly at a high price and all the small towns in the orange belt so full of "homesuckers" and "come-ons" that eats and sleeps were at a premium. Front door-yards decorated with young orange trees loaded with golden fruit, the soft Gulf breeze whispered gently and the siren song of the semi-tropics was luring the unwary.

Old Sam Slater and his seven sons were among the first to try this new branch of horticulture which gave so much promise of easy living and money aplenty. Where they bought or secured those several hundred young trees was a conundrum to some but the wise ones said that the entire family worked hard and fast in the hours between dark and dawn.

The aftermath came early the next January. Tall timbers for the blatant boosters. Everything froze up or down. During those cold nights old Sam went to bed with the sound of crackling frost in his ears and in his nostrils was the rank odor of crude oil and baled hay that his neighbors were burning in a vain attempt to heat the atmosphere and save their orchards. He had nothing to burn and he cursed himself and all of his seven sons up hill and down dale.

The tale of that freeze is soon told and perhaps the youngsters of that period will tell their descendants of the good skating they enjoyed on the bayou. A few growers saved some trees but the major portion went the way of all vegetation.

In a few weeks however the boomers began to shout again: "This was only an incident! Stick to it and win out! Don't be a quitter! Come on, you homesuckers!" And they did come, not in crowds as on former excursions but by twos and threes and they were wary.

As old Sam was walking along the bayou one September day casting a gloomy eye over his half dead orchard and throwing smell-melons at the twitles in the stagnant pools, an idea struck him and hit him hard. Why not? By Jiminy Cripes! Why not? He picked up a large yellow smell-melon stuck it on the branch of a live two-year-old orange tree and then stepped back to size it up from different angles.

"By Cracky!" said he in an audible tone, "Looks like the real thing! If I could only fool some 'homesucker' and sell my land!"

Now the smell-melon is a pestiferous vine growing on a great variety of soil throughout the South and producing a near round golden yellow melon about the size of a large lemon and not unlike some varieties of oranges. By some it is called the wild pomegranate or wild lemon but the common name is just smell-melon and the old man conceived the idea of sticking these on the young orange trees in such a manner as to resemble natural fruit.

Gathering and placing several dozen on the tree rows adjacent to the railroad, Old Sam sat in his shack chewing his quid and watching the trains go by.

"Why!" he could almost hear the passengers exclaim as they pointed to the bogus fruit, "Look there! There's oranges!"

Grinning like a chessy cat the old man scrambled through the fence and up the track to Joslin where he accosted one of the overzealous land dealers in a rancous bellow: "When's the next crowd o' homesuckers comin,' Jawn?"

"Trainload due heah abaout dinnah time," John replied. "Why?" he asked. "Anythin' p'ticklah?"

"Ai-yah! I reckon," said Slater. "I wanta sell my lan.' Send some o' them daown to see me."

"Charge yuh muh usual commission," grunted Jawn as he moved toward the postoffice.

The visitors came, saw and conquered or were conquered. The first party to visit Old Sam's place looked at his land, trees and fruit with a critical eye. "Nope," they said, backing away, "Don't look healthy."

The second man felt and smelled of those smell-melons and then remarked, "Queer lookin' oranges. I didn't suppose they growed thata way."

"They aint ripe yit," said Sam, "Next month's pickin' time."

The third caller was an Arkansaw widow with $500 in her stocking and three children in tow. And, let it be recorded here, that she was a sure enough relative of the finny tribe for she wore such a jaunty, cheerful air as if she really enjoyed being led up to the harpoon. In her haste and anxiety to secure a home in a mild climate, the widow overlooked many necessary details and it was an easy matter for Old Sam to close the deal, securing the five hundred and giving her a title and deed in exchange.

"Yo-all c'n git along heah fine, widdah," said he, as he stowed away the first yellow-backs he had seen for many a day.

"The's strawberries planted in between them tree rows an' yo-all c'n easy plant mo' truck an' mo' trees. Goo'-bye!" he called as he crossed the bayou, "Ef yo-all see my boys, tell 'em I've gone travelin'."

Not a dollar would Old Sam part with as a fee for the land broker; not a cent did he leave for his younger sons who were unable to do for themselves in a hostile community; nary a word to anyone except the station agent to whom he remarked, "Smell-melons air a good payin' crop," and then boarded a Gulf Coast rattler bound for Mexico.

In that land of continuous rough-house vaudeville his troubles began, increased and multiplied a thousand fold. He was shot at by Federal soldiers, potted by Insurrectos, captured and robbed by bandits and then cast aside as a useless gringo. In vain he tried to reach his eldest son by mail, but mails and trains were uncertain, as was life itself, and he was obliged to beg food and assistance as he skirmished about in spasmodic efforts to reach God's country again.

In the meantime, how were the widow and her three children getting on? Oh, she soon discovered the deception, had a good long cry over it—irrigating her smell-melon patch—and then sought a local lawyer who advised her to stick and make the best of it.

"The land's good for something, I know," said he, "And the country's goin' to put through some deeper ditches. Take care o' them strawberries and plant some more with other truck. Never mind the oranges 'Taint a game for pore folks."

The winter following was unusually damp. In fact, the moisture descended so fast and became so deep that mudscows, hip boots and slickers were actual necessities, but the widow brought herself and children through those trying weeks without a scratch or even a hard cold. Along in February the waters receded, rain came less frequent, the sun shone warm and all vegetation began to send out shoots of green as if trying to recompense the toilers, for it is a well known fact that floods are always followed by unusually productive seasons.

The silt deposited by high water had fertilized the widow's land and the strawberries began to grow and blossom and form fruit. In March she was picking—the earliest of the earliest—and when there was enough for a full crate she sent it over to the Joslin Fruit Co.'s agent who auctioned it off to the highest bidder as was the custom. Ten dollars for the first crate! Whew! "Glorious!" said the agent, "Come again!"

That strawberry field, originally planted with pears, then oranges and afterward with smell-melons to catch the unwary "homesucker," proved to be a small gold mine and there's many an old timer down there who will relate how the widow made $600 above the purchase price of the land.

During the busiest picking time old Sam Slater's seven sons came "nodgin' 'raound" looking for work.

"Outa heah!" said the widow, flourishing a piece of barbed wire. "Got all the he'p I want an' don't want none o' yo' trash nohow."

And the seven sons disappeared. Where they went or how they existed thereafter is not to be chronicled here.

One day in late summer a bedraggled and bewhiskered wreck of a man came limping up the railroad track from Galveston way, crawled through the barbed wire fence and approached the widow who was industriously hoeing out weeds from young Cape Jessamine.

"Widdah, I've come back," huskily spoke the caricature.

"Come back? Was yo-all evah heah befoah?" she asked.

"Yeh. This was my lan' oncet. Don't yo-all rek'let me? I'm Sam Slater."

At this the widow straightened up and eyed him sharply with rising wrath.

"Why, yo ole crook!" she spat at him, "Yo got a gall to kem raound heah! Git off'n my lan."

And she made for him with uplifted hoe. But Old Sam's strength was spent. He started on but stumbled, fell and was unable to rise again. And the woman, seeing the weakness and utter wretchedness of the figure called a man who had once flimflammed her, helped him to a seat in her shack and brought him food of which he ate ravenously.

After a matter of two hours the old man had recovered sufficiently to talk in a rational manner—or shall we say irrational—and then he began in a full length tremulo.

"Widdah, this was my home fo' a long time an' I jes' couldn't stay away. I hed to come by agin. Ef I'd a met up with yo all ten yeahs agone I moughta bin a differnt man."

"Moughta bin a man oncet," she snarled, "but the brand's all growed ovah."

Deep silence.

"Say!" he blurted out, "let's hook up and pull double. I aint a bad man."

"Abaont 's good 's them oranges yo' sold me," she replied sneeringly, "An I reckon 'ts abaout time fo' yo-all to travel. Mosey! Git!" And she stretched a long boney arm toward the open door.

Old Sam got.

It has been mentioned before that the widow was some near kin to a certain kind of fish and her subsequent and final act in this little drama proves the assertion, for when Old Sam returned two days later, she married him.

Eighty Years of Faithful Service to the American Public

The Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company has the enviable record of eighty years of faithful service to the American public. Bear this fact in mind when you get ready to buy a car, for it operates as insurance of quality.

No thoughful business man ever buys a commodity or a luxury or a necessity without looking into the character of the men who make it. This rule of trade is more imperative in the purchase of an automobile than almost anything else you can name.

Eighty years of faithful service is an asset of no uncertain value. This company held the respect of the early settler of the western country because of absolutely honest merchandise in the shape of farm wagons. It established its standing before automobiles were known. When it embarked in the automobile business, it clung to the policy that made its farm wagon business famous. And its automobiles are famous, for the same satisfying reason.

Most men are capable of eternal devotion—to pleasure; of a pure, sweet, changeless love—for themselves, and of exalted moral ideas—for their wives.

There isn't a new sorrow in the world—there're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way.

A BUSINESS MAN OF MINNEAPOLIS

MR. E. M. TAYLOR,
No. 250 Nicollet St., Minneapolis, Minn.

Minneapolis is a city where they do things. Stimulated by a vigorous climate, surrounded by a fertile country, peopled by the best blood of the over crowded east, it is a city of hustle, of great achievements conceived and wrought out.

Mr. Taylor, of Minneapolis, Minn., is one of this sort of men. A newspaper man. A political worker. An Englishman by birth. He has been in this country nineteen years. He has resided in the northwest, Winnipeg, Fargo, and for the last ten years in Minneapolis.

Mr. Taylor is a friend of Peruna and does not conceal his friendship. He is thoroughly enthused with the belief that Peruna is a great remedy. He has a right to feel so. For several years he suffered with dyspepsia. This caused him to have very bad health.

Newspaper advertisements would never have influenced him to take Peruna. It was friends that persuaded him to try the remedy. In less than a week he needed no more persuasion. He saw that Peruna was doing him good. He is able to say in a letter to the Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio:

"To-day I am in excellent health. Never felt better in my life. I am glad of this opportunity to say something to all men or women who suffer from dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I consider Peruna a great remedy. It is a godsend."

A new book of interest to all, sick or well, sent free by the Peruna Company.

THE MOTOR GHOST

It Took a Busy Little Woman to Lay It

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Did you see it go past?" shrilled Miss Ducey from her bedroom window.

"Yes, without a sound. My, it gave me such a start!" returned Mrs. Weems from her bedroom window next door. "Whatever can it be?"

"I don't know. Don't seem natural, whatever it is, streaking past here every night for a week without a sound, going up the street and never coming back again. Who ever saw a motorcar behaving like that? I never did till a week ago."

"No more did I."

"Shall you tell Mr. Weems?"

"Of course, but he won't believe a word of it," said that skeptic's fat wife as she closed her window and retired for the night.

Finally Miss Ducey went to bed, determining to arise early and trace the black automobile to its lair wherever it might be.

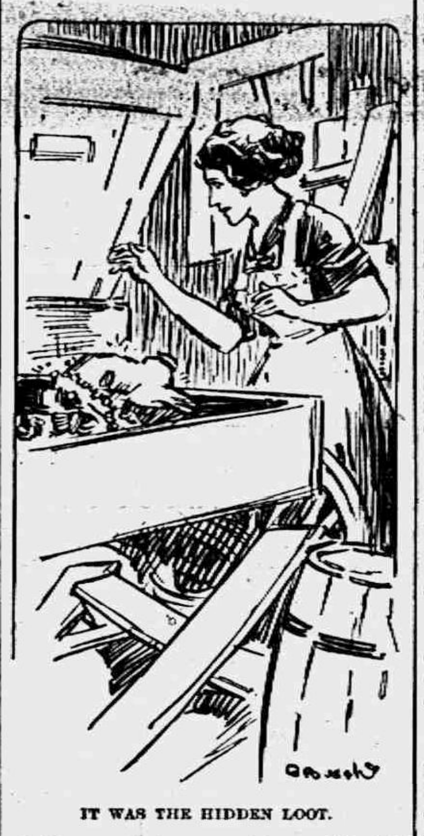
It was shortly after daylight when Miss Ducey swallowed a hasty breakfast and marched up Block street.

Block street was rightly named, for, although once it had been a small thoroughfare in the heart of the village, when the railroad had built a stone viaduct and the trains raced through the place over the heads of the distracted populace a great stone wall had blocked the street a few hundred feet beyond the boundary line of Nettie Ducey's land.

"Drat the blocking!" muttered Miss Ducey as she hurried through her orchard toward the railroad embankment.

"Drat the automobile!" she added in a little while as she stood at the grass grown end of the street, where there was not the faintest sign of wheel marks. "I'd like to see one of them city detectives down here. I'll bet he'd be stumped! Good land! I don't believe I'll ever get out of this hole. I'll not be able to pay off the mortgage now that my boarders have all left, and what shall I do?"

Miss Ducey forgot all about the black automobile as she tramped back to the house. Absorbed in her own troubles, she cared not what became of the mysterious machine. She did not even attempt to pursue the white hen that had stolen a nest somewhere toward the railroad, at the very edge of the orchard, among a heap of old, broken down wagons and the shed that crumbled on top of them years and years before.



IT WAS THE HIDDEN LOOT.

"Likely as not the dratted critter's laying eggs on the railroad track and the trains are breaking 'em, and eggs 60 cents a dozen! If I don't have the worst luck!" groaned Miss Ducey pessimistically.

Mrs. Weems bustled in with a New York paper of the day before.

"I brought this over, Nettie; thought you'd like to see it. Did you see the car come back?" she asked eagerly.

Miss Ducey shook her head.

"Not a sign of it. Did you tell Mr. Weems?"

"Yes; as soon as he came in from lodge meeting. What do you suppose he said, Nettie?

"He just laughed and said if we wimmen didn't drink so much strong tea at night we wouldn't be imagining such things."

Mrs. Weems exchanged indignant glances with her friend and then departed to prepare dinner for her lord and master.

Nettie Ducey, who had no lord and master save the mortgage on the house—and she would have added the railroad for good measure, so strongly did she hate it—picked up the newspaper and read it from the scare head on the front page to the little advertisement of Linderholm's cough balm in the lower right hand corner of the last page.

And reading so conscientiously brought reward to Nettie Ducey, although she did not dream of it when she read a little item of news just above the cough balm advertisement:

"A large reward has been offered by Buffam & Jiggs, the jewelers, for the discovery of the valuables stolen from their shop last week. There is a quantity of solid silverware, gems worth many thousands of dollars, and the reward of $10,000 for the apprehension of the thieves and the recovery of the stolen property should attract the attention of all detectives, amateur and professional. It is believed that the job was accomplished with the aid of a motorcar."

"Ten thousand dollars reward!" groaned Miss Ducey, tucking the paper away. "One thousand dollars would be a whole lot to me. Wish I lived where things were going on. Nothing ever happens at the end of a blind street. I declare, if that white hen ain't cackling again!"

She tied a veil over her sandy hair and darted out to the orchard and beyond the fruit trees to a little grove of young locusts that had grown up around the heap of broken down wagons.

Miss Ducey poked around in the rank grass, now flattened in a peculiar way. Certainly those were the marks of wheels.

How did they come there? Were they the tracks of the black automobile? Nettie Ducey ran to and fro like a hound on the scent, and in fifteen minutes she had discovered the mystery of the motorcar that disappeared at the end of Block street every night.

From Block street the machine turned into the lot beyond her orchard, and some one must have been there to carefully obliterate all traces of its passing. Through the lot it had gone to the farthest confines. A fence rail had been lowered and replaced, and, lo, the machine had sped through another vacant lot into a street that ran parallel with Block street and so disappeared.

"Ha!" cried Miss Ducey, just like a great detective who has made a marvelous discovery. Then she added in a puzzled tone, "But what in time does any man want to cut such capers for?"

After awhile, finding this question unanswered, Miss Ducey went back to the heap of old wagons and nosed around in search of the white hen's stolen nest. She crept down on all fours and jeopardized life and limb among the weather worn vehicles, but there was no sign of the hen's nest.

"I'll have a spell of rheumatiz after this!" she groaned, bowing her head in her hands.

Presently she lifted her head and looked up at the bottom of the box body of the old buggy under which she sat. Her gaze became fixed on something bright that was wedged in a crack. She put up a hand and pulled, and down into her lap there tumbled a silver spoon—a solid silver teaspoon!

Nettie Ducey scrambled out from under the buggy and peered under the lifted lid of the box. In order to do this she had to raise the decaying hood of the vehicle.

In the box was what looked like a pile of dirty canvas. Nettie Ducey investigated and discovered that they were bags filled with solid silverware, and a small leather bag contained jewelry hastily huddled together.

It was the hidden loot of thieves!

What thieves? Why, the ones she had read about in the paper, of course! Ten thousand dollars reward! Almost any of her modest dreams might come true—she might take a trip to Washington some day!

Nettie Ducey never ran so fast in all her life as she did when she left the rubbish pile in the lot behind the orchard.

At last she reached the constable's office, where she poured out her marvelous tale, exhibited the newspaper and before witnesses laid claim to the reward. The constable telephoned to the city police, and then he swore in a score of deputies.

Constable Bigley, accompanied by Nettie Ducey and trailed by twenty deputies all armed to the teeth, swarmed up Block street, through Nettie's orchard to the rubbish pile.

And when the constable and his men had brought out the missing stuff and identified it beyond doubt as that belonging to Buffam & Jiggs Miss Ducey told them the story of the motor ghost and showed them the mysterious tracks across the lots to the parallel street, establishing beyond a doubt that the black car was the vehicle of the thieves and that the cleverness of the observing spinster had resulted in her finding the hiding place of the thieves.

The city police arrived by an afternoon train, and at night, when the motor ghosts essayed another mysterious flight through Block street, they met a warm welcome.

It was a happy day when Nettie Ducey met Messrs. Buffam & Jiggs in their palatial offices and received the promised reward. There was money enough to make her comfortable the rest of her life and to help many of her relatives and friends, and that was what Miss Ducey had always wanted to do, only she couldn't afford it. She didn't sell the cottage after all, but she rented it and went to live in a quieter street.

When Miss Ducey took the trip to Washington Mrs. Weems and her husband went along as her guests, and it is a matter of interest to note that Mr. Weems handsomely apologized for his remarks concerning "tea drinking wimmin," "because," he added suavely, "if you and Annie hadn't indulged in strong tea and sat up late at night you would never have discovered that there motor ghost, and we wouldn't be sitting here now."

And Miss Ducey and her friend were so happy that they didn't care a bit because Mr. Weems had the last word after all.

New Year Calls in China.

New Year calls are the custom in China, and you have to pay them in festive attire of silk or satin.

These fine clothes (says Archdeacon Moule in the Chinese People) can be hired, the price being gradually lowered as the hours of the first six days pass by. We complained once of the very late arrival of a caller, who should have been among the first to salute us. He replied that money was scarce, and he was obliged to wait for the cheapest day to secure a fine robe already donned and doffed by a dozen of others. During these ceremonial days the whole community seems to give itself over to indiscriminate gambling, a practice illegal and condemned both by Chinese law and standards of morality, but winked at during this season.

American Charge Who Has Been Negotiating with Huerta.

HUERTA SPLITS HAIRS WITH U.S.

Dictator Schemes to get Himself Recognized.

PRESIDENT REJECTS REQUEST

Mexican Provisional President Yields on Gun for Gun Salute and Demands that President Wilson Assure Him in Writing that U. S. Will Keep Its Word.

Washington, April 20.—The time limit in the Wilson ultimatum expired at 7:36 p. m. It is believed that Huerta's failure to yield to the ultimatum of the United States will make it impossible for President Wilson to pay any further attention to future advances from the Mexican dictator.

The most significant fact is the ordering of the full torpedo flotilla at Pensacola, Fla., to get under way at once for Tampico.

Dispatches from the City of Mexico state that Huerta fears he will lose his slender hold on the Mexican people if he salutes the United States flag.

Washington, April 20.—The state, war and navy departments which usually on Sundays show about as many evidences of life as a country cemetery were astir before 8 o'clock in the morning. Not since the days of the Spanish war have there been such feverish excitement and hustle among the clerks and officers in the great gray building. All night in the operating room of the state department a telegrapher kept vigil waiting for messages from Mexico City. In the next room an expert translater was ready to decipher any communication that might reach the department, a sentence at a time, and transmit by telephone to Secretary Bryan, who retired at his home with a telephone at his bedside.

Only one message reached the department in the course of the night from Charge O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City. In this communication O'Shaughnessy said that Huerta had raised the question as to how the United States could expect him to render a salute when President Wilson had refused to recognize his government.

Long before President Wilson had arrived at White Sulphur Springs a direct wire had been set up between the White House executive offices and the hotel at the West Virginia resort.

Another dispatch to the state department from O'Shaughnessy contained the definite information that Huerta had yielded on his demand that the United States fire a salute simultaneously with the one rendered by the Mexican guns. Instead of this demand, however, he insisted that the United States should give him assurances in writing preferably from the president himself that a return salute would be fired by the United states in acknowledgment of the twenty-one guns by the Mexicans.

The president refused flatly to give any assurances in regard to the firing of a return salute beyond the statement contained in Admiral Mayo's original demand upon the Mexican general at Tampico. in that demand Admiral Mayo had said that the salute to the American flag would be returned by the guns of American an warship.

Huerta's reply to the president's refusal to give written promise regarding salute was unfavorable and the demand of the United States at 10 p. m. had been rejected.

The final word went to Mexico City Saturday after Huerta had parleyed for the last time and reiterated his demand for a "simultaneous salute," and the leaders in congress declared President Wilson would immediately be clothed with all the authority necessary to take action.

The climax came with dramatic intensity when a third message came from Huerta insisting on his own conditions for a simuletaneous sulute. A conference between the president and cabinet members resulted in a prompt decision to brook no more temporizing or dilatory tactics.

Tentative Plan of Action.

Seizure of Vera Cruz and Tampico, of the Mexican warships in these waters and of a section of the railroad from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico as far as a trestle twenty miles west of Vera Cruz, and a pacific blockade are features of a plan of action President Wilson has outlined to his closest advisers.

Such a course, authorities on international law describe as one "short of war" and yet not an act of war. Huerta, however, might construe it as an act of war.

NO WAR IN 1914 SAYS OCCULTIST

Frau Von Heymam Gives Out Many Prophecies.

SHE SAYS WILSON WILL SLIDE

German Seeress Predicts Bryan Will Not Remain in Cabinet Through Year—Catholic Will Be Next President—German-British Alliance to Come to Pass.

Berlin, April 20.—Interesting to those who believe in occult revelations are the prophecies of future events in the United States made by Frau Nelly Von Heyman of Bremen, the "Madame Thebes of Germany."

Among the prophecies just issued by Frau Von Heyman for this year are the following:

"There will be no military intervention in Mexico by the United States—not this time. America will be for peace and think long and deeply before declaring war. The disorders in Mexico may continue another three months and will then cease.

Wilson Will Slide.

"President Wilson will be much honored yet 'und dann wird er rutschen' (and then he will slide.)

"Secretary of State Bryan will not remain in office much longer, you can depend upon that. In any event he will go before the end of President Wilson's term.

"Colonel Roosevelt will not be president of the United States again.

Catholic Will Be President.

"The next president of the United States will be a Catholic. He will be a Democrat.

"It will not soon come to war between America and Japan, but there will be much controversy and a serious disagreement long drawn out. Japan eventually will give way, but should America lose her rudder then will come confusion.

"New York will stand for twenty-one years yet. 'Dam verliert es seine stuetzen und rutschtein' (Then it will lose its supports or foundation and slide in).

"In general, the United States has a great future, but 1914 will be dull in business and financial circles."

Prophecies on Germany.

Of Germany Frau Von Heyman prophecies in rather enigmatical language. Among the prophecies she makes regarding Germany are the following:

"Germany will make an alliance with England during 1914.

"Germany will lose much this fall and weep many tears.

"Three monarchs will die during 1914.

"It can be said that no European war is approaching in 1914.

"There will be rapid development in aerial navigation, but also many deaths. The ocean will not be crossed by airship or aeroplane during the year. Zeppelin will lose his principal ship."

SOLDIERS BALK ON OUSTER

Will Fight Removal of Civil War Veteran from Office.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 20.—Civil war veterans declared that not until Governor Ferris has a chance to investigate the case will George Larned, a Civil war veteran, be removed as sealer of weights and measures.

The council voted Larned out of a job and his comrades state that they intend to see the law which provides that no Civil war veteran be removed from office without cause is enforced.

BANDITS ARE SIGHTED BUT STILL UNCAUGHT

Escanaba Chase Looks Like Comedy at the "Movies."

Escanaba, Mich., April 20.—Escaping in spite of the heavy guard from the swamp fifteen miles north of this city, Joe Parent and Clyde Smith, the Gladstone bandits, were seen late in the afternoon within eight miles of Escanaba. The new trail of the men was taken up by a posse of fifty men, but with the heavy rain and darkness little hope is entertained that they would be captured.

When last seen, the bandits were without hats or coats, their trousers were torn to shreds below the knees and one had but one shoe.

It is believed they are making an effort to reach the home of one on the outskirts in the city to procure clothing and a line of deputies encircles the city. Bloodhounds were brought here and placed on the trail.

STOCK BROKER TAKES POISON

G. H. Holden, Minneapolis, Ends Life at Battle Creek.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 20.—George H. Holden, a Minneapolis stock broker, en route from Minneapolis to Buffalo, left a train here and ended his life in a lumber yard by drinking poison. A note was found in his pocket, it is said, in which he expressed fear of arrest because a woman had lost $11,000 through business dealings with him. Holden carried a through ticket to Buffalo.

The note had been hastily written on wrapping paper. Its contents were as follows: "To the coroner: I have taken poison to kill myself. When you find me, notify Mrs. G. H. Holden, 728 East Sixteenth street, Minneapolis, Minn. I cannot bear the thought of being arrested. I got $11,000 from Mrs. Ketchell. Give her some shares of stock and give (name not legible) $500."

CHASE "FAINTING BERTHA"

Rock Island, Ill., Authorities Give Her Time to Leave Town.

Rock Island, Ill., April 20.—"Fainting Bertha" Liebke, known throughout the country as a diamond thief, was arrested here, charged with the theft of a set of diamond-studded cuff links from a local jewelry store.

A fine of $200 was suspended on her promise to leave the city.

BOY PLAYS SAILOR; DROWNS

Girl Companions on Raft Barely Escape Their Friend's Fate.

Belleville, Ill., April 20.—While "playing sailors" while they should have been at school, Henry Calbreath, Jr., eight years old, was drowned and his three girl companions narrowly escaped similar fates at Belleville.

The children were attempting to guide a raft across Brandenburger pond when the craft sank.

BOWERS-TAFT FAMILY UNION

Engagement of Former Chicago Girl to Ex-President's Son Announced.

Washington, April 20.—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Martha Bowers, daughter of the late Lloyd W. Bowers, formerly of Chicago, to Robert Taft, the eldest son of former President Taft, was made here.

Mr. Bowers, up to the time of his death, was solicitor general in the Taft administration.

ORANGE KING, DYING, REVEALS HIS IDENTITY

Was Runaway Boy and Leaves $500,000 for Aged Father.

Thayer, Mo., April 20.—The story of a boy who ran away from home at the age of 16 years, and died a few days ago leaving a fortune of $500,000 for his aged father, was revealed here when J. N. Noyes, the father, departed for Vernon, Cal., to take charge of his son's body.

Noyes was 16 years old when his mother died. His father married again and soon after the son disappeared leaving a note that he had gone west to seek his fortune. The father instituted a nation-wide search, but failed to get even a trace of the boy. A few days ago the father received a letter from a law firm of Vernon apprising him of the death of his son who had assumed the name of Frank L. Henderson. Henderson had made a fortune in oranges, the attorney's letter said.

A few minutes before he died, Henderson asked that his father be notified. According to the letter received by the elder Noyes, his son in 1909 married a society belle of Vernon, who had a small fortune in her own name. She died a few months ago.

THREE CADETS ARE DROWNED

Six Are Rescued When a Squall Upsets Their Shell.

Delafield, Wis., April 20.—Three cadets, members of the St. John's Military academy crew, were drowned, but six were rescued after a violent squall capsized their shell on Lake Nagawicka. The dead: I. W. Kelly, St. Louis; Donald Mogg, Hinsdale, Ill.; Fred Sprute, Farmington, Minn.

The accident was seen from the cottage of Walter Rugee on the shore of the lake. Mr. Rugee and two others immediately rescued six, who were clinging to the side of the shell. The three others had disappeared in the water.

JUDGE SCHOLFIELD CHOSEN

Marshall Man Named to Succeed Late Solon Philbrick.

Springfield, Ill., April 20.—The Illinois supreme court appointed William B. Scholfield of Marshall, Clark county, a judge of the fifth judicial circuit to the position as judge of the appellate court, third district, sitting in Springfield, to succeed the late Judge Solon Philbrick of Champaign. Judge Scholfield's term will extend to June, 1915, when the term of Judge Philbrick would have expired.

GIRL DIED OF PERITONITIS

But Prosecutor's Statement Makes Somebody in Bad Axe Uneasy.

Bad Axe, Mich., April 20.—The coroner's jury investigating the death of Ethel McComber, nineteen years old, returned a verdict that death was due to peritonitis, cause unknown. The McComber girl died under rather mysterious circumstances several weeks ago. It was alleged that on her death bed she made a statement accusing a local physician, but the next day she appeared better and denied the statement. Her strength, however, lasted but a few hours, and she rapidly failed.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A DARING PATRIOT

Feats of a Little Known Hero of Revolutionary Times.

JACK JOWETT'S BRAVE RACE.

It Saved Jefferson and the Virginia Assembly From Capture by Tarleton's Dragoons and Gave General Washington Valuable Information.

Most of the Revolutionary heroes have been immortalized in song or story, but there is one whose fame has never spread, as it should, beyond the region of his birth. His name was Jack Jowett. In the little city of Charlottesville, Va., there is a tablet on the building that stands on the site of his old tavern. But that simple bronze is the only memorial of his name and deeds.

In Revolutionary days young Jack Jowett kept the Swan tavern in Charlottesville. He was a patriot at a time when patriotism was dangerous, for Cornwallis was in possession of tidewater Virginia, and Tarleton and his cavalry were sweeping back and forth over the inland counties.

In June, 1781, the Virginia assembly abandoned Richmond, which Cornwallis threatened, and came to sit in Charlottesville. Among its members were such men as Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee and Benjamin Harrison, and the governor was no other than Thomas Jefferson. One bright morning when the state assembly was in session Jack mounted his thoroughbred mare and rode out to look over his farm outside the town. As he rode along he caught through the trees a glimpse of a British uniform flashing down a crossroad. He put his horse over the low stone wall and confronted the rider. It was one of Tarleton's troopers.

With a big pistol pointed at his head, the Englishman thought it wise to obey Jack's command to turn in at the gate of a nearby house and change clothing with him. Under threat of death the soldier divulged the fact that Tarleton was in the vicinity. Jowett at once galloped away in search of the enemy. The day passed without result, and Jack stopped at an inn to take a few hours' rest.

In the night he heard the tramp of horses and, looking out of his window, saw that the yard was full of British soldiers, led by Tarleton himself. The troopers entered the tavern and sat down to drink and talk, quite unconscious that an enemy was on the stair above listening to every word. From their conversation Jowett learned that Tarleton commanded an advance guard that was halting to wait for the rest of the troop. Then they planned to dash on to Charlottesville and capture the Virginia assembly.

Jack Jowett set out at once in the cool of the dawn. Once he was chased by some troopers who trotted in from the pike that crossed his path, but his bay mare soon outpaced theirs. Like the wind he raced through lanes, over low stone fences, up the side of the hill to beautiful Monticello, the home of Governor Jefferson. He warned Jefferson of the approach of the British, and then, with a fresh horse, he dashed down the steep mountain road into Charlottesville. Rushing into the hall where the assembly was in session, he called to the members to flee, for Tarleton's dragoons would soon be at their heels. In a few moments the hall was empty, and the members were on their way across the mountains to Staunton, where they would be safe from pursuit.

Jack rode on to his tavern, but found there a wounded officer of the Continental army—General Stevens. He dressed the sick man in a suit of his own clothes, carried him downstairs and put him on the fresh horse, with bags of corn in front and behind—the very picture of an old farmer going to the mill. Side by side Jowett and Stevens rode out of town, which by 10 o'clock was in the possession of Tarleton's men. Pausing as he reached the top of a hill, Jack saw his own tavern in flames.

The British, who had reason to suspect the young man in a uniform, set out in chase of him, but Jack's horse was again too speedy for them, and he got safely away to Washington with the news that Tarleton was no longer acting in support of Cornwallis—a bit of information that was of the greatest value to the commander of the Continental army.

To Jack Jowett's quick wit and daring the author of the Declaration of Independence and many another hardly less famous patriot owed their liberty and perhaps their escape from a traitor's death upon the scaffold.—Youth's Companion.

MICHIGAN STATE FAIR.

In order to be as nearly independent of the weather man as possible and put on a more varied and instructive exhibition the Michigan State Fair has decided to lengthen its 1914 exhibition to two weeks. The dates set are Sept 7-18.

This will enable the Fair to stage a great many more out of door attractions, say the officials, as the chances are there will be at the least ten days of fair weather under the new arrangements.

The parades of prize winning live stock, the judging of the horses and cattle in the show rings which were practically missed by visitors last year because of the bad weather, will be made big features this year. Also the open air band concerts which the fair officials counted on, as well as the night horse show were all wet blanketed because of the inclement weather in 1913. Needless to state the big night fireworks displays were rendered much less brilliant and sensational by the continued rain which pelted down four of the six nights during the 1913 Fair.

The added week this year will also permit of a much longer and more varied speed program Gen. Mngr. Dickinson is planning even a more sensational horse racing auto speed program than last year. Muddy tracks hampered the turf champions and all but prevented any auto races.

The added attraction of bigger purses and a longer stay will induce the cream of the light harness world to compete at the Sept. 7-18 exposition. Gasoline history is sure to make at this year's Fair as the liberal purses and prizes are sure to attract the history makers in the auto racing world.

"We are convinced that with $125,000 for premiums and purses and the big open air free attractions we are planning on this year's State Fair will eclipse any of its predecessors by a good margin," said Gen. Manager Dickinson in discussing the outlook for 1914. "I am firmly convinced that the additional $100 we are offering cattle associations for shipping and maintenance expenses will cause not only present Michigan cattle organizations to exhibit but will encourage the organization of new ones."

Variety.

Variety is the spice of life, but it isn't particularly good in a poker hand. —Puck.

The Missing Window Pane.

"Every kitchen has a window with one pane out in the Brazilian town of Rio Grande do Sul," said a cook. "That town is a servants' paradise. Servants live in their own homes there, as they should everywhere. They come to work at 7 in the morning, and they quit at 7 at night, a twelve hour day. Quite long enough. The paneless window is for the milkman, the baker, the butcher, so that these traders can leave their supplies—they usually come early—in a safe place. The Rio Grande servant is, of course, not there to receive them. She is in bed at her own home."

Sizing Him Up.

An eminent Scotch astronomer tells this excellent story against himself. He once explained in a lecture that a certain star looked no bigger than a threepenny bit a hundred miles away. After the discourse one of the audience said to him:

"You must be a Scotsman, for no one but a Scotsman would trouble about a threepenny bit a hundred miles off."

Sign of the Times.

"Business is pretty slow here just now," confessed the Squam Corners merchant.

"That's what I call hush money!" remarked a father as he put down the cash for a bottle of paregoric for the infantile members of his family.

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVAS

A committee composed of the trustees and session of the Presbyterian church assisted by some others, made a canvas of the church membership both in the village and surrounding country between the hours of 2 and 5 Sunday afternoon, soliciting funds for the general support of the church and its benevolences for the coming year.

They reassembled at the church at 7 o'clock and the ladies had a lunch awaiting them. The amount pledged for the support of the church was between $2600 and $2700, the amount asked being about $2600. A general feeling of unity and enthusiasm was shown by all the members.

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY

A Proclamation by the Governor

One of my dearest memory pictures is father sitting in the cooling shade of a beautiful pine that he and I planted long ago. The sweet, plaintive music of this tree comes back to me in moments of solitude. Trees are real friends of man, beast and bird. In recent years we have realized this. It is hoped that Americans will acquire enthusiasm in preserving useful and beautiful trees by the roadside, in school yards, about their homes, in parks and farm fields.

Let us cherish a loyalty and love for our feathered songsters; yes, a tender regard for the birds who can t sing, birds that destroy in the aggregate millions of destructive insects. The economic and aesthetic value of bird life is beyond calculation. The hearts of boys and girls and "grown ups" become more human, more helpful, as they come to read aright the Creator's message in the lives of trees and birds

Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate Friday, May 8th, A. D. 1914, as Arbor and Bird Day, and do request the this day be observed by all schools, public and private, and other educational institutions by the planting of trees for promoting the spirit of protection to trees and birds.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this first day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen; and of the Commonwealth the seventy-eighth.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
[SEAL] Governor.
Frederick C. Martindale,
Secretary of State.

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY

Schools are to Observe May 8th in a Practical Way.

Supt. Fred L. Keeler has compiled a bulletin to assist teachers in the observance of Arbor and Bird Day. The plan this year is to combine a program of school exercises with work—cleaning up the school grounds, planting trees and shrubs, beautifying roads and home grounds, putting up bird houses, etc. Valuable information concerning suitable trees and shrubs, directions for planting, the value and habits of birds, etc., is given to assist the teachers in carrying on the work. Citizens of the various communities are urged to co-operate with the schools.

Willing to Be All.

She (coldly)—"A kiss? Certainly not! Don't you know that kissing breeds disease?" He—"Well, who cares! You've studied nursing, haven't you?"

SAFETY FIRST

TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF MICHIGAN:

Do not walk on railroad bridges or tracks.

Do not crawl under lowered gates.

Do not loiter about railroad stations or cars.

Do not jump on or off trains, cars or engines.

Do not crawl under, between or over cars

Do not cross tracks without stopping, looking and listening to see whether a train is coming.

Do not play on or around turntables.

Never take chances. The safe course is always the best and it is the quickest in the long run.

Be on the alert,
Get the Safety Habit,
Practice it every minute,

FRED L. KEELER,
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

To these we would add a few "Do nots" for men as an example to these boys and girls.

Do not when waiting for the train on the street corner, stand in the middle of the track until the engine is within 20 ft of you.

Do not cross the track with such extreme deliberation when the train is right in sight

Do not forget that the small boy and girl take you for an example and think they can do just as you do, with safety.

TO BE A BARON?

We clip the following from a late issue of the Omaha Daily News. Harry Gordon Selfridge is well known to many in Tecumseh. He was a nephew of the late B. L. Baxter and has visited here many times:

"I hear on good authority that one of these days we will read in the 'honors list' that Gordon Selfridge has been made Baron Selfridge, first becoming a British citizen, of course. The story goes that this would be the crowning of his ambition, after he has bought up a little more of Oxford street. Society is not quite so uninteresting to the former Chicago man as it is to the typical business man from the United States. He goes to parties occasionally, but only with a view to business—either to find some smart woman who is willing to become a buyer or take up some other post in the establishment. He is firmly of opinion that the gentlewoman has the best taste in dress and that consequently she makes an ideal buyer for almost every department.

"Though he does not often appear in the shop, keeping almost entirely to his own private office, I met him recently escorting a duchess around the house and quite 'to the manor born'—as if he had been doing that sort of thing every day of his life. Indeed as a matter of fact, it was the duchess that appeared to be flattered. Various great ladies have a way of popping in on him for checks for their pet charities, and they often get them, though, if the charity does not appeal to him, the dollars are not forthcoming."

Nice Distinction.

Lawyer—"Do you mean to tell me that the plaintiff was drunk?" Witness—"Well, no; but you couldn't call him ostentatiously sober."—Judge.

Self-Improvement.

Tecumseh H. S. Defeats Britton in an Unexciting Game.

Score, 21 to 8

The base ball game with Britton proved an unexciting game after the first inning. Britton scored one in the first half of the opening inning and the local boys came back with five. After this the issue was never in doubt. Both sides played a listless game, there being numerous errors for each. Bachman the high school slab artist pitched a steady game outside of a couple innings when he was put in tight places through errors.

The Britton boys did'nt do much work with the bat, only hitting four flies to the out field. All of these went to the center and were all safe ones. The wind was a large factor in allowing these to go for safe ones, for it was very difficult for the fielders to judge them. The next game is Friday with Addison.

PRACTICAL GARDENING.

This is to demonstrate the value of the instruction received along the line of agriculture by the class.

Most men are capable of eternal devotion—to pleasure; of a pure, sweet, changeless love—for themselves, and of exalted moral ideas—for their wives.

There isn't a new sorrow in the world—there're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way.

"DRY" ISSUE COMES UP AGAIN IN ILLINOIS

Election Tuesday Involves 236 Saloons in State.

Chicago, April 20.—Whether "wets" or "drys" shall control the next Illinois legislature may be one of the side questions decided in local option elections to be held on Tuesday in thirty-one cities and villages. The possibilities of four more counties being added to the fifty-two already "dry" counties is agitating the saloon advocates. Two hundred and thirty-six saloons are involved in twenty-two villages and cities which will test the "dry" issue in the coming election.

These are the four counties that may go "dry" as a result of battles in cities and villages: Bond, Cass, Menard, Pulaski.

These five places are in townships which went "dry" at the recent election, but will vote separately on the question: Algonquin, Cabery, Milan, Reddick, Wamac.

In order to swing Bond county into the "dry" list it will be necessary to eliminate the four saloons in Pocahontas, in Burgess township. This township went "wet" on April 7, but the "drys" under the law, have a second try at the village of Pocahontas.

To drive the "wets" entirely from Cass county the "drys" must win the Beardstown and Arenzville elections, while to make Menard county barren of oases Athens' three saloons must be eradicated. Whether Pulaski county becomes "dry" territory depends on the results in Mounds and Mound City. There are thirteen saloons in the two villages.

LAKEWOOD SWEEPT BY FIRE

Seven Cottages Destroyed and Many More Threatened.

Muskegon, Mich., April 20.—Fire swept a large section of the Lakewood resort, eighteen miles north of here, destroying seven cottages and for a time threatened a large number of other summer homes.

A gang of twenty men worked from early in the morning until late at night in an effort to check the flames. The high south wind made this work difficult and the fire had spread over a wide area. Through back firing and by plowing wide strips through the dry grass and leaves the fire fighters finally managed to stop the flames.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

EXTREMES IN DAYLIGHT.

There Is, In Reality, No One Longest or Shortest Day.

It is usual to regard Dec. 21 as being the shortest day in the year and June 21 as the longest. But this impression, like so many others that are ingrained in the popular mind, is not a strictly accurate one.

True it is, of course, that on Dec. 21 and June 21 respectively the sun reaches its most southerly and most northerly points in the zodiac and begins in the one case to ascend and in the other case to decline. But this is in theory only, because for two or three days preceding and following these dates there is no observable difference in its position or its hours of rising and setting.

This question of latitude, by the way, is extremely important when speaking of the shortest or longest day or days of the year.

In London and its neighborhood, for instance, the shortest days are seven hours and forty-five minutes and the three or four "longest days" around June 21 are sixteen hours and twenty-six minutes. At Tornea, in Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours long and Christmas one less than three hours in length. In St. Petersburg the longest day is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours, while at Spitzbergen the longest day is three and a half months, the shortest being counted in seconds only.—London Answers.

FEATHERED SCAVENGERS.

Crows as Track Cleaners and Gulls as Government Workers.

As unique a crew of track cleaners and police as could be found anywhere is enlisted in the service of the Southern Pacific railroad. The members are neither Americans nor foreigners. It is a crew of crows.

The big black birds built their nests near Hornbrook, Ore., on the northern division of the road. They have become fat and sleek living off the generosity of tourists and of dining car employees.

When the trains arrive at Hornbrook the crows leave their roosting places and circle about the depot. As the limiteds pull out the birds follow them for five or six miles. Scraps are thrown to them, and they devour every bit, policing the tracks and acting as scavengers. The section hands and other employees of the road realize the value of these birds and keep them from being molested. Trains crossing the Great Salt lake are followed by sea gulls, the latter, like the crows, feasting on scraps thrown from the diners.

In a similar way the great lakes are patrolled by white winged gulls. The government protects them, appreciating the work they do in following the ships or hovering over the fishing grounds and keeping the waters free of pollution.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Four Footed Poultry.

A certain old man in the Wynchope settlement named Bickley was exceedingly fond of "big words." He was riding his horse over the country one bright spring day, apparently intent on some important business.

Whenever he met anybody he gravely asked: "Have you seen anything of any stray poultry today? I've lost mine and am hunting it." When they told him "No" he would proceed on his way.

After spending several hours in what seemed to be a vain search he at last rode up to the door of a farmhouse and called, "Hello!" A lady came to the door, and, doffing his hat very politely, the old man inquired if she had "noticed any stray poultry around?"

After a moment's thought the woman told him she had seen no chickens.

"Oh," he replied, "it's my hogs that I've lost, not my chickens."—Youth's Companion.

A RESCUE

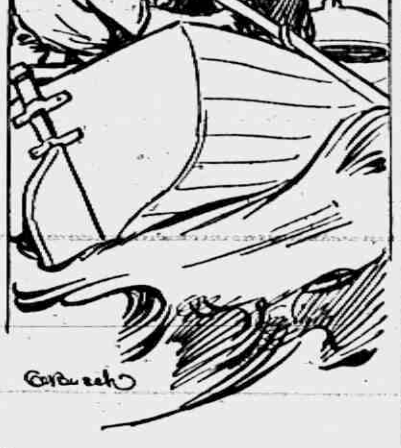
A Girl Led the Way, and a Man Followed

By F. A. MITCHEL

Have you ever been at the seashore on a clear, cold day in winter with a stiff gale blowing? There is something exhilarating in buttoning your coat up to the chin and breasting the wind. Out on the water as far as you can see the waves seem to be tumbling over one another, like wild animals playing leapfrog. Near by at regular intervals a huge billow comes rolling in curves. Its crest breaks into a white foam like the mane of a gigantic horse and surges on the smooth beach.

It was such a day as this that I stood on a dune looking seaward. It was all ocean and beach, except for a dock built of planks and spiles, the waves rolling under the former and past the latter. Back of the dunes was a village, of which the inhabitants were fisher folk, making a precarious living out on the inconstant waters.

Nevertheless I envied them on this breezy morning, when the air was full of stimulating elements, for I was born for a sailor and, mistaking my calling, had got attached to a desk instead of a boat. And now I was taking a rest from indoor labor, spending a week end by the waters I loved so well. The cold wind struck my cheek, tingling, and made me for the moment forget the dingy place of my daily occupation.



"I PICKED UP THE OARS AND PULLED DESPERATELY."

I looked upon the ocean over a bay, a point of land extending outward on either side. There were a few ships riding at anchor, and here and there was a sail out on the farther waters. Not far from shore I noticed a fishing smack coming before the wind under a single jib. She seemed to be laboring, and the only person in her was not sitting still at the tiller, but bailing desperately. Another eye than mine was on him, for below me, hurrying along the beach toward the dock, I saw a girl, her skirts fluttering in the wind, a shawl about her shoulders, a boy's cap on her head, seemingly unconscious of the cold, intent on the man fighting the waters in the boat.

I took in the situation and, descending from my perch, made toward her at an angle, joining her before she reached the dock.

"The man out there seems to be having a hard time of it," I said to her.

She heard my words, but otherwise seemed to be unconscious of my existence, for she said:

"It's Bob. The boat is an old tub. There!" She caught her breath as the bowsprit ducked and stabbed a wave, seeming inclined to continue to point downward, while the water swept the deck. "Thank heaven!" she went on when she saw that the boat righted. "But I'm afraid the next wave will sink her."

"What are you going to do?" I asked as we hurried on, she leading, toward the dock.

"Going out for him."

"Going out for him! What in?"

The boat put its nose down into another wave, and the girl was too intent upon it to pay any attention to my question, but a few minutes later we were out on the leeward side of the dock beyond the breakers, where a rowboat was fastened, rising and falling. The girl seized the rope tied to its nose, but I took it from her and pulled on it myself. When I got the boat to the dock I sprang in as it rose on a wave, followed by the girl. Loosening the forward line, then the stern line, I picked up the oars and pulled desperately to keep from being blown upon the breakers. It was a hard pull, but I succeeded.

Meanwhile the laboring boat outside had drawn nearer and was passing on a line parallel with the shore some 500 yards from the end of the dock. Had I been compelled to pull against the wind I could not have reached her. The man in her was evidently trying to make the dock or had seen us and was doing what he could to enable us to reach him, for he went about in a half circle and stood against the wind, easing his boat as best he could whenever he saw a heavy wave coming. Our boat was broad and strong, and, although we were every moment in danger, I believed she would keep right side up.

The girl was sitting in the stern of the boat and after considerable effort had succeeded in shipping the tiller. As soon as she had done this I made better headway, not having to keep the boat on her course. My helmswoman was evidently used to boats and knew how to steer a course which, since both we and our object were at the mercy of wind and tide, was most likely to bring us together. But the strength of the wind alone was so great that it was constantly blowing us off our course.

The object boat kept sinking out of sight in the hollow between two waves and in one of these depressions seemed to have gone under.

"Can he swim?" I asked.

I received no reply to my question till the boat appeared on the crest of a wave, when the girl gasped that he could swim, but not very well.

"Can you swim?" I asked, looking about the boat for something on which to float, for I was beginning to fear we should be capsized.

"Like a duck," was the comforting reply.

"If we go over try to catch one of the oars."

Again the boat, which was now not more than 100 feet from us, went between two waves, and when seen again there was only her mast above the surface, and that was slowly settling. But Bob's head appeared, and he was swimming for his life. I had been in hopes that if his boat went down before we reached him he would find something to cling to, but evidently he had not.

"Keep her straight toward him!" I shouted to my pilot.

She did not faint, and he did not lose his head. She kept her eye fixed on him—that is, when he was riding high—and exerted all her strength on the tiller ropes, now shouting to me to "pull strong on starboard," now "strong on port," then, after losing sight of our object for quite awhile, "back water!"

She had scarcely spoken the last words when I saw the struggling man not a dozen yards astern. I obeyed the order, but gained nothing. Shipping the oars, I turned and took up a coil of rope I had noticed behind me and had kept in mind for an emergency.

Holding fast to one end, I threw the coil toward the swimmer, but did not reach him. Passing the line to the girl, I took up the oars again and backed water with all my strength. But I had lost distance, and it was some minutes before I could get near enough to warrant her making another throw.

Twice she threw the rope, and twice it fell short. On the third throw it lay within a few feet of him. By a desperate effort he grasped it, and, I backing, the girl pulling on the rope, we got Bob beside us, when, dropping the oars, I pulled him in, though I was obliged, for fear of upsetting the boat, to wait till the side he was on was tilted upward.

As soon as I got him in he lost consciousness; but, leaving him to the attention of the girl, who took off her shawl and put it over him, I bent my efforts to getting ashore. But we had drifted near the rocky coast and would have been lost had we not been seen from the shore and a boat put out for us. So intent was I on the rescue that I did not see it till I had looked about me. Our friends reached us when we had drifted to within a quarter of a mile of the rocks and I had not sufficient strength left to pull away from them against the wind. They took us in tow, and in due time we were taken on the dock.

Fortunately they had brought a stimulant, which was given to the person we had saved, and he recovered before we left the boat. When all was over the girl collapsed, but only for a few moments. Then for the first time she seemed to realize her indebtedness to me, and with a world of gratitude on her features, but not spoken in words, she put out her hand to me.

My other hand was grasped by the man we had rescued, he, too, expressing by look rather than word his gratitude. He was about the same age as the girl, though I could not tell whether he was older or younger. Both seemed to be about twenty. I proposed that we go where he could be warmed after his cold bath, and I led the way at a brisk pace up the dock and over the beach to the dunes, then back of them to the village, where, entering a house, he was put to bed with hot water bottles without and hot punch within. Before leaving I said to the girl:

"He must be very dear to you or you would not have risked your life for him."

"And yours," she replied.

"He is"—

"My brother."

And so this story by this one word is prevented from being, despite its exciting incidents, no story at all, for had I, under an impulse, risked my life to save a girl's lover I should have been deprived of experiencing that tenderness toward her which might otherwise be expected under the circumstances. Indeed, I said to myself, "Any girl who will do all that for her brother surely would stand by a lover." And then and there I became ambitious to be her lover.

The time came when I was rewarded for the service I had rendered in the way I desired. By saving a man I got a wife.

LAKE WINONA COTTAGES BURN

Twenty-Three Houses Destroyed at Indiana Summer Resort.

Warsaw, Ind., April 20.—Fire that started shortly before noon destroyed twenty-three cottages at Lake Winona, a summer resort near here. Fort Wayne was appealed to for aid and a fire engine and hose wagon were rushed to the scene on a special train.

Dynamite was used in an attempt to check the flames, but a high gale, blowing off the lake carried the fire across the cleared space. Only a few of the houses were occupied. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Issue Is Only With Dictator President Declares.

U. S. IS A FRIEND OF MEXICO

Purpose of American Government in Crisis is to Help Mexicans and Not Hinder Them, President Counsels—Plans to Make Impossible Incidents Such as Occurred at Tampico.

WASHINGTON. — President Wilson began his address to the joint session of congress at 2:05 p. m. He said:

"Gentlemen of the congress:

"It is my duty to call your attention to a situation which has arisen in our dealings with General Victoriano Huerta at Mexico City, which calls for action, and to ask your advice and cooperation in acting upon it. On the 9th of April a paymaster of the United States steamship Dolphin landed at the Iturbide bridge landing at Tampico, with a whaleboat and boat's crew to take off certain supplies needed by his ship, and while engaged in loading the boat, was arrested by an officer and squad of men of the army of General Huerta.

Released After Long Wait.

"Neither the paymaster nor anyone of the boat's crew was armed. Two of the men were in the boat when the arrest too place and were obliged to leave it and submit to be taken into custody, notwithstanding the fact that the boat carried, both on its bow and at its stern the flag of the United States.

"The officer who made the arrest was proceeding up one of the streets of the town with his prisoners when met by an officer of higher authority, who ordered him to return to the landing and await orders, and within an hour and a half from the time of the arrest, orders were received from the commander of the Huertista forces at Tampico for the release of the paymaster and his men.

"The release was followed by apologies from the commander and later by an expression of regreat from General Huerta himself. General Huerta urged that martial law obtained at the time at Tampico; that orders had been issued that no one should be allowed to land at the Iturbide bridge, and that our sailors had no right to land there.

Cites Admiral Mayo's Demand.

"Our naval commanders at the port had not been notified of any such prohibition, and, even if they had been, the only justifiable course open to the local authorities would have been to request the paymaster and his crew to withdraw and to lodge a protest with the commanding officer of the fleet.

"Admiral Mayo regarded the arrest as so serious an affront that he was not satisfied with the apologies offered, but demanded that the flag of the United States be saluted with special ceremony by the military commander of the port.

"The incident can not be regarded as a trivial one, especially as two of the men arrested were taken from the boat itself—that is to say, from the territory of the United States; but, had it stood by itself, it might have been attributed to the ignorance of a single officer.

"Unfortunately it was not an isolated case. A series of incidents have recently occurred which can not but create the impression that the representatives of General Huerta were willing to go out of their way to show disregard for the dignity and rights of this government, and felt perfectly safe in doing what they pleased, making free to show in many ways their irritation and contempt.

Other Insults Enumerated.

A few days after the incident at Tampico an orderly from the U. S. S. Minnesota was arrested at Vera Cruz, while ashore in uniform to obtain the ship's mail and was for a time thrown into jail.

"An official dispatch from this government to its embassy at Mexico City was withheld by the authorities of the telegraphic service until peremptorily demanded by our charge d'affaires in person.

"So far as I can learn, such wrongs and annoyances have been suffered only to occur against representatives of the United States. I have heard of no complaints from other governments of similar treatment. Subsequent explanations and formal apologies did not and could not alter the popular impression which it is possible it had been the object of the Huertista authorities to create, that the government of the United States was being singled out and might be singled out with impunity for slights and affronts in retaliation for its refusal to recognize the pretensions of Genertl Huerta to be regarded as the constitutional provisional president of the republic of Mexico.

Perils Are Pointed Out.

"The manifest danger of such a situation was that such offenses might grow from bad to worse until something happened to so gross and intolerable a sort as to lead directly and inevitably to armed conflict.

"It was necessary that the apologies of General Huerta and his representatives should go much further, that they should be such as to attract the attention of the whole population to their significance, and such as to impress upon General Huerta himself the necessity of seeing to it that no further occasion for explanations and professed regrets should arise.

"I therefore, felt it my duty to sustain Admiral Mayo in the whole of his demand and to insist that the flag of the United States should be saluted in such a way as to indicate a new spirit and attitude on the part of the Huertistas.

Asks for Approval and Support.

"Such a salute General Huerta has refused, and I have come to ask your support in the course I now purpose to pursue.

"This government can, I earnestly hope, in no circumstances be forced into war with the people of Mexico. Mexico is torn by civil strife. It we are to accept the tests of its own constitution, it has no government. General Huerta has set his power up in the City of Mexico, such as it is, without right and by methods for which there can be no justification. Only part of the country is under his control.

"If armed conflict should unhappily come as a result of his attitude of personal resentment toward this government, we should be fighting only General Huerta and those who adhere to him and to give him their support, and our object would be only to restore to the people of the distracted republic the opportunity to set up again their own laws and their own government.

Would Avoid War.

"But I earnestly hope that war is not now in question. I believe that I speak for the American people when I say that we do not desire to control in any degree the affairs of our sister republic. Our feeling for the people of Mexico is one of deep and genuine friendship, and everything that we have so far done or refrained from doing has proceeded from our desire to help them, not hinder nor embarrass them.

"We would not wish even to exercise the good offices of friendship without their welcome and consent. The people of Mexico are entitled to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way, and we sincerely desire to respect their right.

"The present situation need have none of the grave complications of interference if we deal with it promptly, firmly and wisely.

"No doubt I could do what is necessary in the circumstances to enforce respect for our government without recourse to the congress, and yet not exceed my constitutional powers as president; but I do not wish to act in a matter possibly of so grave consequence except in close conference and co-operation with both the senate and the house.

Wants Army and Navy.

"I therefore come to ask your approval that I should use the armed forces of the United States in such ways and to such an extent as may be necessary to obtain from General Huerta and his adherents the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States, even amidst the distressing conditions now unhappily obtaining in Mexico.

"There can, in what we do, be no thought of aggression or of selfish aggrandizement. We seek to maintain the dignity and authority of the United States only because we wish always to keep our great influence unimpaired for the uses of liberty, both in the United States and wherever else it may be employed for the benefit of mankind."

BANDITS ARE SIGHTED BUT STILL UNCAUGHT

Escanaba Chase Looks Like Comedy at the "Movies."

ESCANABA, MICH. — Escaping in spite of the heavy guard from the swamp fifteen miles north of this city, Joe Parent and Clyde Smith, the Gladstone bandits, were seen late in the afternoon within eight miles of Escanaba. The new trail of the men was taken up by a posse of fifty men, but with the heavy rain and darkness little hope is entertained that they would be captured.

When last seen, the bandits were without hats or coats, their trousers were torn to shreds below the knees and one had but one shoe.

It is believed they are making an effort to reach the home of one on the outskirts in the city to procure clothing and a line of deputies encircles the city. Bloodhounds were brought here and placed on the trail.

STOCK BROKER TAKES POISON

G. H. Holden, Minneapolis, Ends Life at Battle Creek.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—George H. Holden, who was a Minneapolis stock broker, en route from Minneapolis to Buffalo, left a train here and ended his life in a lumber yard by drinking poison. A note was found in his pocket, it is said, in which he expressed fear of arrest because a woman had lost $11,000 through business dealings with him. Holden carried a through ticket to Buffalo.

The note had been hastily written on wrapping paper. Its contents were as follows: "To the coroner: I have taken poison to kill myself. When you find me, notify Mrs. G. H. Holden, 728 East Sixteenth street, Minneapolis, Minn. I cannot bear the thought of being arrested. I got $11,000 from Mrs. Ketchell. Give her some shares of stock and give (name not legible) $500."

SOLDIERS BALK ON OUSTER

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The Civil war veterans declared that not until Governor Ferris has a chance to investigate the case will George Larned, a Civil war veteran, be removed as sealer of weights and measures.

The council voted Larned out of a job and his comrades state that they intend to see the law which provides that no Civil war veteran be removed from office without cause is enforced.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHRISTIANITY AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Is there any sanction for capital punishment in the New Testament? No. On the contrary the whole spirit of the New Testament would seem to be decidedly against it. Jesus referred to the old standard: "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," and replaced it by a higher standard of forgiveness and service. By his spiritual discernment and authority he prevented the stoning of a woman convicted of a crime punishable under the Mosaic Law by death. Paul refers to the bearing of the sword by the civil power, but this does not necessarily sanction the killing of offenders. He is merely urging Christians to keep the civil law, saying that if they do righteously they will not come into conflict with it.

Armenian Peasant Life.

Among the Armenian peasants the old patriarchal system prevails. The entire family of a score or two of people of several generations lives beneath a single roof. Together both men and women till the fields in a primitive manner, and when the grain is ripe, they take a sheaf to the roadside that the passing stranger may give a present and thus bless the crop. Their houses are of stone roughly laid or of mud, or frequently they are half underground, and from a distance their domelike roofs resemble the mounds of a prairie dog settlement.—Christian Herald.

Rev. J. A. DeSpelder

In the last few moments of Tuesday, April 14, 1914, John A. DeSpelder, minister of the gospel, having fought the good fight, entered into rest. Near him hung a poem he had always loved, Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar,"

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

And even so was his passing, as he sank quietly into the long, dreamless sleep which brings surcease from all sorrow and all pain; which freed his brave and glorious spirit from the fettering earth—freed, that he might be nearer to the Master whom he had so loved and so served.

A never-to-be finished letter he was writing the day before ends with these words, the last he ever penned: "How blessed Easter has been and continues to be to my heart. I hope the same feeling to your lot. O, the glorious triumph of our dear Master! And what comfort and hope there is in Easter for us."

Rev. DeSpelder's parents were both natives of Holland, but he was born March 21, 1851, in Allendale township, Ottawa county, Michigan, where his boyhood days were spent. In 1863 he entered the preparatory department of Hope College and in June, 1870, graduated from the institution.

Even at this time there were harbingers of the ill health which later became his lot and for a time he engaged in railroad survey in the western part of the state, in hope of bettering himself physically—a part of his life of which he often spoke, for "to him who in the love of Nature, hold communion with her visible forms, she speaks a various language," and no man, perhaps, has ever loved God's big out-of-doors more than has Mr. DeSpelder.

And yet, for the call was upon him, he, in 1871, entered the Western Theological Seminary, where in June, 1873, he graduated with the degree of A. M.

On December 3, 1873, he became pastor of the Reformed churches of Macon and South Macon, and, declining meanwhile many calls to larger fields, remained until the close of 1883. It was during these years that he began holding the meetings in a little country schoolhouse in East Macon which interested the people so that they established and built a church which seems destined to perpetuate his name and memory, being known, as it always has and doubtless always will be, as "DeSpelder Church"—a fitting memorial to a beautiful life fully consecrated to the work of his Master.

July 16, 1884, at the Slayton homestead in Tecumseh, he was united in marriage by the Rev. Wm. Babbitt, to Myrtle E. Herriott of Macon, who, with one son, R. Finley, survive him.

From 1884 to 1889, Mr. DeSpelder was principal of the Northwestern Classical Academy at Orange City, Iowa, resigning to become pastor of the American Reformed church of that place where he continued until 1894. For two years following he was pastor of the Reformed church at Constantine, Mich., after which, in failing health, he preached again at the churches of his first church until 1898. For five years following he was connected with the Presbyterian church of Raisin.

Later, in 1906, in quest of the health that so eluded him, he engaged in the land business in the West for two years, becoming much better—and then resumed the work so dear to his heart, organizing the American Reformed church of Maurice, Iowa. In 1910 he resigned the pastorate of this flourishing church—his last charge—since which, in failing health, he has made his home in Tecumseh, where he has many warm friends who will long remember his unassuming manner and wonderful personality. He was much sought after in literary circles and for many years was a member of the Wit and Wisdom Club, where he was greatly appreciated for his keen intellect and ready wit.

We shall miss his genial smile and kindly words of greeting and, most of all, his example, for his life, in its living and its ending, is truly a benediction, and, like one of his favorite poems, a call to us to

"So live, that when thy summons come to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

The funeral services were held at the home on Union street Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A life-long friend of Rev. DeSpelder, the Rev. John W. Beardslee, D. D. L. L. D., president of Western Theological seminary, officiated assisted by Rev. Wm A. Rex, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh. Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans sang. Burial took place at Brookside.

RUMBLEY TRACTOR IN OPERATION.

The editor had the pleasure of a ride in the country Thursday afternoon through the courtesy of Chas. A. Slayton. In company with several others he visited the farm of Fred Ives where a Rumbley Oil Pull Tractor with a gang of five plows attached was in operation. The field being plowed was of clay soil and was plowed to the depth of seven inches, an inch deeper than ever plowed before.

The work was as easily done as one team could have plowed one furrow, and one can plow from 10 to 15 acres per day. The tractor can use a high grade or a cheap grade oil with a mixture of water for fuel. Mr. Ives has nearly 500 acres of land under cultivation and he expects this tractor will minimize his work this coming season. This tractor and plows were purchased through C. A. Slayton & Son.

CLASS BANQUET

On Tuesday evening the class of ladies taught by Miss Nannie Kyle in the Presbyterian Sunday school gave their annual banquet at Miss Kyle's home with their gentlemen as their guests. Preceding the big feed Mrs. H. S. Bredow, the class president, welcomed the guests and in behalf of the latter, Rev. Rex responded.

Following the feast, the hours passed all too swiftly with guessing contests, a literary feast, recitations by Mrs. Ed Gillen, songs by W. S. Dickinson and Mrs. Hugh Ager and funny stories and jokes by the rest. Miss Kyle is a royal entertainer and the ladies and their guests certainly enjoyed her hospitality and await with pleasure another such gathering.

THE MEXICAN TROUBLE

If not war, near war has been declared against Mexico by our American government.

It is a matter of deep regret that we are obliged to spend our millions and offer up our American blood in deadly conflict. That our flag has been insulted not once, but repeatedly in Mexico is a well known fact.

The events of the last few weeks have stirred our patriotism and we are willing to back up our Government insisting upon full recognition of the right and dignity of the United States.

But if it is given, what right have we to believe that Mexico through Huerta, Villa or the people will keep faith with the United States?

Have they in the past?

It would seem as if this trouble would ripen into war, and that the United States will be obliged to conquer Mexico and establish law and order within its confines.

What then? It will mean that our forces will have to police this rebellion riddled country, and try and establish a government for them that will be just and permanent and it may take years to accomplish this.

Would it not be better for Mexico as well as for the United States, to take this country as spoils of war and give its people the advantages of our own government so that they could enjoy peace and liberty as we enjoy it, and the protection of our flag, the glorious stars and stripes?

It is truly to be hoped that this trouble will soon be ended, and that the outcome will be final, establishing peace order and happiness in Mexico.

DAWN OF PLENTY.

The lecture, "Dawn of Plenty," under the auspices of the Tecumseh Commerce Club was given at the Bradley opera house Wednesday evening. The full house that greeted the lecturer must have been very gratifying to the Commerce Club. Mr. Stockdale proved himself a speaker of ability and his clear full voice was heard distinctly in every part of the house. He was assisted by H. E. Cleveland who produced the motion pictures and views that illustrated the lecture

We traveled with Mr. Stockdale all over the world; in fact, he took us back centuries ago when the ancients sought empires, fame and genius, but failed to realize the simple truth that the basis of civilization is bread.

In the earlier days the cultivation of the soil was so slow and laborious that the people could scarcely raise enough to sustain life, so that when times of famine came, they died by thousands of starvation.

A few centuries ago it required five days of drudgery to raise a bushel of wheat. Today it takes ten minutes' labor to produce the same results.

He showed us how, a few years ago, San Francisco and Chicago were villages and the great west had scarcely been developed. Now these cities are teeming with thousands of people and this great western land is covered with ripening harvests.

The most important business is farming. Every sunset sees the fertile fields of America bring forth harvests worth $24,000,000.

Our lecturer spoke of Lincoln who never said, "Hello, Central," never dodged an automobile, never held a strap in a trolley car, never pushed a button for light, never heard of an aeroplane and never listened to a phonograph or posed for motion pictures and yet he died only 48 years ago.

He took us through the period of the development of farm machinery, from the time people stirred the soil with crude wooden instruments to the present day when the reaper cuts the grain and binds it, and in some places where the machine cuts the grain, threshes it and delivers it all prepared for market. He showed the modern mower that cuts the hay, the self loaders that plie it on the wagons, the immense forks that grapple the load, lift it clear of the wagon and carries it into the hay loft, The western farmer plows his fields with his traction engines which carry behind them 55 plows turning 55 furrows.

Surely it would seem that our methods of agriculture had been developed to the maximum. We live in the greatest hour of the greatest day and in the greatest country the world has ever seen, made possible by the progressive American farmer. Mr. Stockdale argues that the most important business in the world is farming and that the greatest nations on earth are great because they are rich agriculturally.

Don't Sleep Well
No Good Reason
Just Can't Sleep

Some people can't sleep. There seems to be no special reason. They have no disease of the nervous system. Digestion is fairly good. Their habits are pretty good. They may smoke a little or drink a little, yet their habits are fair. Still they can't sleep well.

Just a little unbalanced in the nerve centers. That is all. They should have a little "righting up."

A tonic will generally do this. The right sort of a tonic. Peruna is exactly the tonic. Digestion is hurried by Peruna. The stomach is empty and ready to rest for the night. The circulation is equalized. The brain is relieved of all congestions and irritations.

The Peruna acts on every blood vessel in the system. It acts on all of the nerve centers. One begins to sleep and hardly knows why.

Take a teaspoonful to one tablespoonful of Peruna before each meal. Sometimes another tablespoonful at bedtime is necessary, where the sleeplessness is very pronounced.

Just try it, neighbor. You will be glad if you do. One bottle will convince you. Peruna is no sleep medicine. It is not a nervine. It contains no narcotics. It is nothing of that sort. It is simply a regulative tonic. ●Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Dance Invitations.

As for the etiquette which governs invitations to dances, let it be said that if the affair is to be a formal one the invitations are issued from two to three weeks in advance. If the party is an informal one then a short note may be written by the hostess herself to each guest a week or so before the affair is to take place, or if she prefers she may extend the invitation over the phone, which is considered quite proper for informal parties.

Notes of Sympathy.

A note of sympathy should be sent to friends in whose family death has occurred. Excepting in the case of intimate friends this note is even more acceptable than a personal call. In the case of mere acquaintances the sending of a calling card takes the place of a note.

A Marshal's Retort.

It is on record that the Prince of Orange, filled with rage because he had been beaten at Fleurus, Leuze, Steinkerque and Nerwinda, alluding to the Marshal of Luxembourg:

"Can it be that I shall never beat that hunchback?"

"How does he know that I am a hunchback?" said the French marshal. "He never saw my back; I always saw his."

Whooping cough is about everywhere. Measles and scarlet fever almost as bad. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for inflamed throats and coughing. Mrs. L. C. Check Your April Cough

Thawing frost and April rains chill you to the very marrow, you catch cold—Head and lungs stuffed—You are feverish—You need Dr King's New Discovery. It soothes inflamed and irritated throat and lungs; stops cough, your head head clears up, fever leaves, and you feel fine. Mr. J. T. Davis of Stickney Corner, Me. "Was cured of a dreadful cough after doctor's treatment and other remedies failed. Relief or money back. Pleasant—Children like it. Get a bottle today. 50c and $1.00. Recommended by C. A. Most men are capable of eternal devotion—to pleasure; of a pure, sweet, changeless love—for themselves, and of exalted moral ideas—for their wives.

There isn't a new sorrow in the world—there're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way.

Sometimes it seems as though a man can only be constant to the kind of girl who keeps him constantly on the ragged edge.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Bares His Breast for Shot.

CALUMET, MICH. — While in a drunken rage Victor Makki, thirty years old, shot and killed his brother, John Makki, twenty-three years old, in their boarding house at Painsdale, it is alleged. This was Victor's first debauch in seven years, and his brother upbraided him for his conduct. Victor then drew a revolver and fired three times through the ceiling.

"I'll give you the same if you don't shut up," he shouted, it is said.

"Go ahead," answered John, tearing open his shirt and bearing his breast, and Victor, the police say, shot John through the heart, killing him instantly.

Both Sides Given Recount.

CADILLAC, MICH. — The board of supervisors accepted recount petitions from the "drys" who asked it in seven other precincts.

Prospective saloon men in Cadillac are aroused over the passage of an ordinance preventing them from opening their saloons after May 1, before 7 o'clock in the morning and requiring them to close at 9 p. m. The rule requiring them all to locate on one street and the wide open limit to 17 saloons was enough to discourage several, but the reduction of open hours, two more than ever before, may discourage still others.

2,500 Miners Ask for Work.

CALUMET, MICH. — It is estimated that applications for work have been made at offices of the mining companies by 2,500 men since last Friday afternoon, and probably 800 have been given work.

A thousand more will eventually be given work as places can be opened for them. Three hundred men, mostly those who were imported by the Western Federation of Miners before and during the strike, and men who have been refused work by the companies, have left the district, spreading to all parts of the country.

Is Burned Fighting Blaze.

ALPENA, MICH. — Edward Gokel, fifty-six years old, a pioneer resident of Leer, was brought here suffering from burns received during a fire at his farm, when a large barn, three head of horses, five head of cattle, eighty chickens and fifteen tons of hay were destroyed.

Mr. Gokel had a narrow escape from death and was found just outside of the barn unconscious with his coat burning off and his underclothing burning. His clothing caught fire while he was attempting to save his cattle and horses.

13-Year-Old Gunman Held.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Walter Lindemann, thirteen years old, was arrested for carrying concealed weapons. Lindemann was employed by N. S. Mitchell on his farm in Northfield. Recently he was discharged. Later Lindemann provided himself with a rusty revolver, it is alleged, and sat down in the barn to await his employer.

A young daughter of Mitchell saw Lindemann and his revolver and notified her father who in turn notified Deputy Sheriff Mat Max who arrested Lindemann.

Railroad Pays State $296,000.

LANSING, MICH. — State Treasurer Haarer received a check for $296,000 from the Chicago and first of its 1914 taxes. This 1 sthe first of its 1914 taxes. This is the first large corporation to pay. May 1 is the last day in which the corporations have to pay their taxes after which a penalty of 1 per cent a month will be added.

FAMOUS DIAMONDS.

The Cullinan in the Rough Weighed One and One-third Pounds.

Until 1905 the largest diamond known was the Excelsior, found in 1893 at Jagersfontein by a native while loading a truck. It weighed 973 carats and was cut ultimately into ten stones weighing from thirteen to sixty-eight carats. All previous discoveries were surpassed in 1905 by the finding of a stone weighing 3,025¾ carats, or one and a third pounds, in the Premier mine in the Transvaal.

The Transvaal government bought this stone and presented it to King Edward, it having become known as the Cullinan diamond. In 1908 it was sent to Amsterdam and there cut into nine large stones and a number of small ones. The largest one weighed 516½ carats and is the largest brilliant in existence. All are of the finest quality and flawless.

The Kohinoor in its earliest known state weighed 186½ carats, but was later cut to 106.

Other famous diamonds, some from Brazil, some from India or Borneo, others from Kimberley, are the Star of the South, weighing 254½ carats; the Regent or Pitt diamond, weighing 136 carats after several cuttings; the Daryai-nur, weighing 186 carats, in the possession of the Shah of Persia; the Tiffany, weighing 125½ carats; the Victoria, weighing 180 carats and cut from a stone weighing 457 carats.—Exchange.

Sunday while Mr. Loup of Adrian was bringing his sister Mrs. Colbath over from her home in Detroit they met with a bad accident in front of Will Brooks. In some manner Mr. Loup lost control of the machine and in order not to run in on the lawn turned the car into the road so short as to overturn it throwing Mrs. Colbath out, breaking her arm and dislocating her shoulder. She was taken into Mr. Brooks house, and Dr. Bearsley called who set the fractured bones, and reduced the dislocation making her as comfortable as possible. FLINT STONES WERE SCARCE.

"The war office calls upon all persons who know where flint stones can be secured to notify congress."

Was there aught of prophecy in this brief appeal printed four days after the signing of the Declaration of Independence?

A copy of the Pennsylvania Packet contains the advertisement. The newspaper bears date of July 8, 1776, and in the same column explains that the flints are to be used for rifles. And without the old flintlock there would have been no American independence—at least not for many more years after the Boston tea party, if indeed, the colonials unarmed could have mustered up courage to dump the lead lined boxes into the bay.

Further perusal of the old newspaper shows Jamaica rum and sugar were offered for sale by the hogshead; a reward of $6 was offered for the return of a horse that had strayed away from the range, and a woman who had lost two cows rushed into print with the statement that the individual who would lead the bovines home again would be remunerated to the extent of $4.

Sheriff's sales occupy a column and a half and the Packet's publisher takes space to announce "advertisements are thankfully received," adding that "unless subscribers pay their back dues at 10 cents a copy it will be impossible to continue publication after another month."

SOLONS BLUNDER IN WAR MESSAGE?

Session of Congress Declared a Disappointment.

WILSON MOVE LACKS "PUNCH"

Party Politics Disrupts Plans of Administration and President's Communication Is Criticised—Huerta "Stands Pat" and Awaits Action by Congress of United States.

WASHINGTON. — Perhaps no single day's session of congress ever presented to the consideration of the country a worse series of blunders than the one which met to consider President Wilson's Mexican communication. Politically and almost every other way the proceedings proved disappointing to the administration and its opponents, to say nothing of the spectators, who crowded the galleries of both houses.

To begin with, the president's message was a severe disappointment to the administration leaders of the house, and it is no exaggeration to say that early in the proceedings in the house of representatives there existed on the Democratic side a "blue funk," if not the germs of a real panic, over the situation. Democrat after Democrat privately expressed his disapproval of the message.

Thinks Message Lacks "Punch."

An analysis of this situation, after consultation with the Democratic leaders, indicated that the principal trouble with the message from the viewpoint of the congressmen was that it lacked a "punch." It was a rehearsal of matters familiar to the public. It did not tell what was wanted or expected. The bill of particulars presented by the president against General Huerta was not presented convincingly, although the desire to sustain the president was evident before the delivery of the message.

In fact, the message acted like a wet blanket on a smoldering fire of pent up patriotism, ready to break into a rousing flame, if properly fanned. Overcome, doubtless, by the heavy responsibility resting upon him and by the desire to curb the war spirit in and out of congress, the president in his message seemingly underplayed his hand.

Not until the reading the message and the nature of the resolution which had been prepared in the conference at the white house for the consideration of congress became known was there the slightest suspicion of rebellion against the president's plan of action, even on the Republican side. Thereafter the infection of partisanship was almost general.

CHIHUAHUA, MEXICO. — On instructions from Washington Consul Letcher is notifying Americans in this city and other towns of the state of Chihuahua to leave the country as a precaution against possible unfortunate eventualities growing out of the decision of the Washington government to seize Tampico and Vera Cruz. They will be sent out in small bodies if time permits, as a general exodus, it is feared, might precipitate trouble.

MEXICO CITY. — "General Huerta, replying to queries from the newspapers, gave out the following statement:

"Mexico awaits with tranquility the development of events growing out of the controversy with the United States, and in the remote case of friction between the countries the people of the republic will bear no animosity toward the people of the United States, whose neighbors they are."

WASHINGTON. — An international problem is presented in the war situation by the fact that a merchant ship, said to be of German nationality, is reported to be nearing Vera Cruz with 15,000,000 rounds of ammunition for Huerta. Without a blockade such a shipment could be held up only by seizure of the customs houses.

LAKEWOOD SWEPT BY FIRE

Seven Cottages Destroyed and Many More Threatened.

MUSKEGAN, MICH.—A fierce fire swept a large section of the Lakewood resort, eighteen miles north of here, destroying seven cottages and for a time threatened a large number of other summer homes.

A gang of twenty men worked from early in the morning until late at night in an effort to check the flames. The high south wind made this work difficult and the fire had spread over a wide area. Through back firing and by plowing wide strips through the dry grass and leaves the fire fighters finally managed to stop the flames.

BANDITS IN RUNNING BATTLE WITH POSSE

Little Town Shot up In Fight with Soo Robbers.

ESCANABA, MICH. — After a running battle through the village streets of Gladstone, seven miles north of here, two robbers who held up the Soo line agent there a week ago, and escaped with $700 were cornered in a nearby swamp by a sheriff's posse of fifty men and a desperate fight went on for some time.

The robbery was the last and boldest of a series on the Soo line stations here this winter, and the sheriff and his armed deputies have been following the trail of the bandits since the night of the last holdup.

It was reported here that the Gladstone marshal arrested two men, believed to be the bandits, but they escaped after drawing guns and firing several times into the air. Many shots were exchanged in the pursuit that followed.

The firing commenced just at sundown and many villagers grouped on the streets were driven panic stricken behind barricaded doors as the flying officers rode down on the gunmen. It was not until the dashing posse was out of sight that the frightened populace ventured out and learned of the encounter.

AMERICAN WOMEN FLEE VERA CRUZ

Seek Safety Aboard Refugee Ships as Boats Leave Port.

VERA CRUZ. — Most of the American women in this city fled to safety aboard the steamers Mexico and Esperanza, taken over here by the United States as refuge ships.

While there are not more than thirty or forty Americans of both sexes residents of Vera Cruz, more than 200 gathered in Consul Canada's office to learn the latest news from their home country.

The crowding of the consul's office was the result of a visit of Captain Huz to General Gustavo Maas, commander of the Federal troops at Vera Cruz, and to the commander of the port. He instructed them to order all American merchant vessels out of the harbor.

Commander Huz then went on board the Spanish and the British warships anchored off this port and informed their commanders of his action.

The tropical somnolence of Vera Cruz was scarcely disturbed by the situation between Mexico and the United States, so far as surface indications went.

House Noises at Night That Sound Like Ghostly Footfalls.

In old houses the boards and joists forming the floors are often in a somewhat unstable condition. Many floors are permanently bent with the traffic of generations. Others are still undergoing the warping process. It is easy to imagine a floor which is in a perfectly ripe condition for the production of ghostly sounds.

During the daytime the timbers get bent with the weight of the various inmates of the house walking to and fro, but the noise and bustle of the day drowns the starting and creaking which goes on until the floor has recovered its natural position, as it is bound to do in time, wood being of an elastic nature.

When, however, the stillness of night comes on, these little intermittent movements may become magnified into mysterious footsteps, according to the imagination of the hearer. I myself live in a house the landing of which exactly illustrates my argument. Some hours after all are in bed the sound as of one stealthily creeping along the landing is heard—loud enough to startle a light sleeper into wakefulness. "Who's that?" has often been the exclamation, but by good sense the natural explanation has as often been accepted.—London Times.

CAUSE FOR INDIGNATION.

Why Should a Man Return Home Too Late Safe and Sound?

An Oak Park man who has not been married a dozen years and who is engaged in a business that seldom keeps him in the city late at night recently attended a dinner that lasted longer than he had expected it to. In fact, it was after midnight when the last speaker closed his remarks. Then one of the Oak Park man's neighbors offered to take him home in an automobile if he would wait a few minutes. The few minutes were multiplied several times, and a punctured tire added to the delay, the result being that the man who was seldom out late at night reached home at 2:27 a. m.

He let himself in as quietly as possible, but he might as well have been as noisy as an auction bridge party. His wife was awake and had all the lights in the house going. She had telephoned to a number of her neighbors for their advice and was about to communicate with the police department for the purpose of letting it be known that her husband must have met with some terrible mishap. When he got inside the house the lady rushed toward him, crying:

"Charles, dear, what has happened? Are you hurt?"

"No; I'm all right," he replied.

She stopped, looked him over hastily and critically and then exclaimed:

"What do you mean by coming home at this time in the morning with nothing the matter with you?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Played No Favorites.

A gentleman was staying in a provincial town when he heard that Mr. Moneyboy, his partner in business, was at another hotel on the telephone.

"Is Mr. Moneyboy there?" he inquired.

"No; he is not," came the response.

"Well, has he engaged rooms?"

"No. We don't reserve rooms here. First come, first served, is our rule," came the sharp and somewhat airy reply.

He was rather taken back at the lofty independence they seemed to revel in in that town.

"Can you tell me," he asked, "if he will stay with you when he reaches the town?"

"It's possible he may. But we can't say."

"Look here," roared the irate gentleman, "you're the most impudent jack in office that ever spoilt his master's business! Go away and tell some one who knows more about the business of the hotel to come and speak to me."

There was a chuckle at the other end of the wire.

"This isn't a hotel; it's the town jail," said the voice.

Protection.

Two patrolmen were sitting in front of the steam heating plant in the basement of an apartment house. Suddenly the door opened and the sergeant stalked in.

"I suppose this means we're going to be busted," said one of the cops.

"Not necessarily," said the cold sergeant coldly. "You stay right here and watch the janitor and see that he keeps the boiler sizzling. If you fail I'll prefer charges against you. I happen to live in this house, and I'm going up to bed."—New York Press.

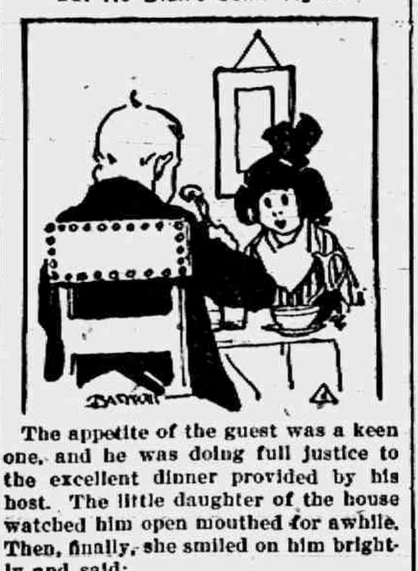
Warning Sign.

Mr. McCann went to have his photograph taken and took on a very grouchy expression.

"Try and look pleasant, please," said the photographer.

"Not on your life," answered McCann. "Me for the sullen ferocity thing. This is for the wife's mother, who wants to come and stay a month with us."—New York Post.

But He Didn't Come Again.



The appetite of the guest was a keen one, and he was doing full justice to the excellent dinner provided by his host. The little daughter of the house watched him open mouthed for awhile. Then, finally, she smiled on him brightly and said:

"Oh, I do wish you were here to dinner every day."

The guest beamed with satisfaction.

"Do you, my dear? Why?" he inquired.

"Because," came the unexpected reply, "there won't be anything cold to eat tomorrow."—Pittsburgh Press.

Fastidious.

Oldfam—Didn't see you at the reception last night.

Newgilt—You know, it was my first invitation, and I didn't want to make any breaks, and I couldn't decide which belt to wear with my evening clothes.—New York Globe.

A Bucket Line.

A seventy-five mile ride in a bucket high in the air will soon be possible in the Himalayas. An aerial cableway of that length—the longest in the world—is to be constructed on the plans of a Canadian engineer from the Punjab to the famous vale of Kashmir. The ruggedness of the country and the danger of rock slides and landslips makes a railroad track out of the question. Towers will be built nearly half a mile apart, and a cable will carry steel cars loaded with 300 or 400 pounds. The cable will be in five mile sections, but an arrangement has been adopted to automatically pass a car or bucket from one cable section to the next. Plenty of water power is conveniently at hand to develop electricity for hauling the buckets.—Exchange.

SIXTY-THIRD YEAR NO 34. TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN TUESDAY APRIL 28, 1914. WHOLE NO 4310.

HUERTA HOLDING ALL FOREIGNERS

British Commander Goes Capital In Their Behalf.

SITUATION IS OF GRAVE PERIL

Train of Refugees Fails to Arrive at Break in Railroad—Mexicans at Vera Cruz Surrender Loads of Guns—Admiral Fletcher Declares Martial Law.

Vera Cruz, April 27.—The officers on the staff of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, the commander of the British squadron here, and Captain Tweedie, commanding the British flagship Essex, left in the afternoon by train for Mexico City. They hope to be able to persuade President Huerta to permit all foreigners, particularly women and children, to leave the capital for Vera Cruz under the British flag. The officers were unaccompanied except by two British bluejackets carrying the colors. No Americans or newspaper correspondents were permitted on the train.

The admiral is hopeful of the success of the mission and that the federals beyond the break in the track will permit the men to go through. A telegram has been sent to Mexico City explaining the nature of the mission. The admiral will co-operate with Sir Lionel Carden, the British minister.

Rear Admiral Cradock has received many verbal messages by American refugees here who are frantic concerning the fate of their relatives and friends in Mexico City. These messages will be sent by the mission which would not dare to carry written messages as the men would undoubtedly be searched.

This scheme was arranged at a conference between Rear Admirals Cradock and Badger. Rear Admiral Cradock will represent through his officers that the Americans have no desire for war with Mexico.

A train sent out from here in the morning to look for refugees waited six hours at the break in the railroad line, but no refugees appeared. The gravest anxiety prevails here as to conditions in Mexico City.

Ensign Lowry, in command of a train sent out to meet refugees who failed to appear, reported that the federals, who have been operating the railroad, have more than a thousand peons at work tearing up the rails and throwing them into the water and are burning the ties. The peons and the Mexican federals are apparently working there in the direction of Mexico City destroying the railroad.

The belief is that Huerta does not intend to permit any more refugee trains to come to Vera Cruz and that he is planning to make the progress of the American armed forces toward Mexico City as difficult as possible.

The observations made by Ensign Lowry in the morning caused a strong guard with machine guns to be placed on the train that was sent out in the afternoon. Guards also were scattered by Ensign Lowry in the bushes along the track near the break in the railroad. It was observed that the federals were stationed on house tops and in trees to signal the approach of the train from Vera Cruz.

Admiral Fletcher sent a request to the federals to be transmitted to General Huerta, asking him to send a train to Vera Cruz with the refugees and offering to send mail to Mexico City. The admiral's request was ignored.

All the local officials, excepting the chief of police, agreed to resume their civil duties on Monday as a result of the efforts made by Rear Admiral Fletcher and United States Consul W. W. Canada.

The public schools have opened.

Commandant John McCluby has been named postmaster temporarily.

Refugees Quarantined.

Galveston, Tex., April 27.—Driven by armed bands of Mexicans, both federals and rebels, from their homes and from the property which in many cases they have worked years to accumulate and bringing horrifying stories of cruelties inflicted by Mexicans, 2,500 refugees from Vera Cruz, Tampico and interior points in Mexico, are awaiting the pleasure of the national and state governments in sending them to their destinations.

Governor Colquitt has ordered that all refugees be kept in quarantine for six days. The quarantine station will accommodate about 100. The remainder must endure the weather aboard ship. The refugees sent telegrams to Governor Colquitt and President Wilson, "thanking" them for the privilege of being permitted to stand in the harbor, drenched, cold, hungry, sick and unprotected.

Mexicans Raiding Arizona.

Nogales, Ariz., April 27.—Robbing ranches and firing on Americans along their line of march, a band of armed Mexicans are marching from Patagonia, Ariz., twenty-seven miles northeast of here toward the Mexican border.

Americans from Nogales and surrounding towns are organizing an army of home guards to drive the Mexican bandits from American territory. A long-distance telephone message from Duquesne in the evening stated that the Mexicans had been located about five miles out and were expected to arrive in that town during the night. The Mexicans number about 100 with more joining along the line of march.

Fletcher Proclaims Martial Law.

Vera Cruz, April 27.—Rear Admiral Fletcher issued a formal proclamation placing the city under martial law. This does not indicate that war or any serious trouble is feared. It will enable the local officials to resume their duties without endangering themselves with the Mexican government.

Wire to Mexico City Working.

Vera Cruz, April 27.—Communication by wire between Vera Cruz and Mexico City was established at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. This is the first communication with the capital in sixty hours.

PLANS STATUES AT CAPITAL

Art Board Would Erect Memorials to Lincoln, Grant and Douglas.

Springfield, Ill., April 27.—Should the plans of the Illinois state art commission, which met here, be consummated, the capitol grounds within a few months will furnish the setting for a triumvirate of imposing statues. They will be the likenesses, in bronze, of Abraham Lincoln, Stephen A. Douglas and Ulysses S. Grant.

Commission members have conferred with Governor Dunne. They inspected the capitol grounds and, although they did not definitely pick the sites for the proposed new statues, they reached the conclusion that the Lincoln statute, forming the central shaft, ought to occupy a position between the two east walks of the grounds, overlooking Capitol avenue.

DEMAND RECALL OF GOV. AMMONS

Denver Citizens In Mass Meeting Condemn Strike Killings.

LEGISLATURE TO MEET MAY 4

Governor Has Agreed to Call Special Session at Which Impeachment Proceedings Will Be Instituted—Tense Situation at Trinidad, Where the Strikers Are Armed and Entrenched.

Washington, April 27.—President Wilson has decided to send federal troops to Colorado to preserve order in the coal strike zone in the neighborhood of Trinidad.

Denver, April 27.—A crowd of men and women, from 1,000 to 6,000 in number, stood in a pouring rain on the lawn in front of the capitol building and heard the state administration denounced for permitting the killings in the southern coal strike district.

At the conclusion of the speechmaking, the mass meeting adopted resolutions condemning Governor Ammons as an accessory to the murder of babies and demanding his impeachment at a special session of the legislation which Ammons has agreed to call for May 4, or in the event of his failure to call the special session, those at the meeting are pledged to have him recalled.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one and was composed partly of Denvers most prominent citizens.

Tense Situation at Trinidad.

While this meeting was being held news was coming in from Trnidad telling of the tenseness of the situation there. Under a temporary truce the strikers are entrnched and ready to battle the soldiers at any moment. These facts were explained to the crowd by the speakers at the meeting.

At the meeting in front of the capitol building men and women cheered the resolution, prepared by George Creel, former police commissioner.

Four More Killed.

At the Chandler mine four men were killed in the fighting there and the battle was still raging at nightfall. There are 1,000 men engaged in this battle. The mine guards have one machine gun, but are at a disadvantage because the strikers are on higher land. Canon City is terrorized, lest the combatants carry the fighting into that town which is only a few miles from the mine.

The dead reported by a correspondent are all mine guards. It is not known how many of the strikers, if any, have fallen.

Deputies Hold Court House.

At Trinidad 102 armed deputy sheriffs with a gatling gun, are entrenched in the court house. This precaution was taken because it was understood that Judge Musser of the state supreme court and others of a committee appointed by the governor to investigate conditions were about to arrive. The truce lasts only until these men get there from Denver and announce what they will try to accomplish. Should this be unsatisfactory to the strikers, it is said nothing can prevent an immediate battle.

CONSPIRACY NO ACT OF ONE, SAYS BRIEF

If Mrs. Sparling Is Innocent, Can MacGregor Be Guilty?

Port Huron, Mich., April 27.—If Mrs. Carrie B. Sparling is innocent of wrongdoing in the death of her son, Scyrel, how can Dr. Robert A. MacGregor be guilty of having conspired with her to cause the death of the young man?

This is the principal point made in the brief of the doctor's attorneys in asking the supreme court for a new trial of his case. Dr. MacGregor is now serving a life sentence in Jackson prison, having been convicted of administering poison to Scyrel Sparling at Ubley, in conspiracy with the boy's mother. The mother, who was also under the charge of conspiracy, has been discharged without ever having been brought to trial. Some time ago the supreme court denied a new trial for Dr. MacGregor, but this was before the discharge of Mrs. Sparling.

"The respondent was convicted upon the theory that he and Mrs. Sparling committed the deed," the new brief declares. "Notwithstanding this, the case against Mrs. Sparling has been dismissed and she has been released. But where a man's life is at stake, we think that justice demands that the court should consider this fact. If Dr. MacGregor is guilty as found in this record, then Mrs. Sparling is equally guilty. If Mrs. Sparling is not guilty, then Dr. MacGregor was wrongfully convicted of conspiring with her."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MASS MEETING

At San Diego, Calif.

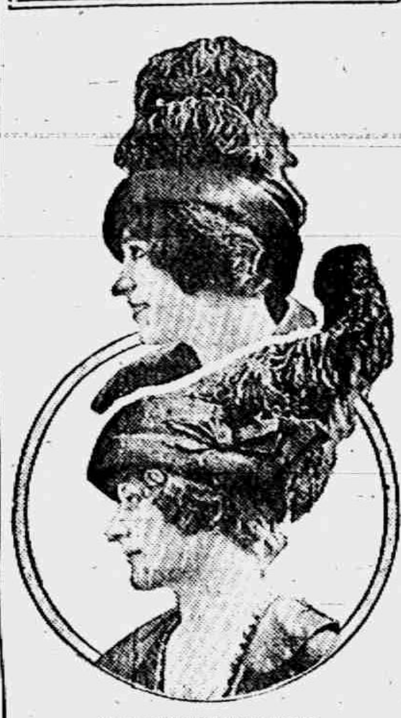
San Diego, April 25, 1914. What is doubtless the greatest movement ever inaugurated with the purpose of beautifying and adorning a city, was begun here at a mass meeting called by the officers of the San Diego Federation of State Societies this week. Representatives of every commercial and civic organization in the city, the schools, churches, fraternal societies, city and county officials and directors of the San Diego Exposition all pledged support for the movement, which has been systematically planned by experts in city beautification work.

Holding of the San Diego Exposition during the entire year of 1915, which is expected to attract hundreds of thousands of visitors from all over the world to San Diego, was the incentive for the movement, which has now assumed such form that those at the head of it feel safe in asserting that by January 1, 1915, the date of the opening of the San Diego Exposition, there will not be an unsightly spot in all San Diego. Fences and outhouses are to be overgrown with perennially blooming vines vacant lots will be cleared and sown with flowers that bloom the year around, houses will be freshly painted, streets cleared of all weeds and rubbish, bare walls adorned with window ledge flower boxes, and hanging baskets from roof ledges, and flower gardens will appear everywhere, until San Diego becomes one great, fragrant beautiful bouquet.

Already arrangements have been made whereby owners can secure a certain number of small ornamental trees in pots, cuttings of creeping vines and packages of flower seeds for the asking.

MODISH MILLINERY.

Hats and Feathers Divide Favor as Trimmings.



TWO NEW SPRING HATS.

The vogue for artificial flower trimmings and nosegays is at the very height of its popularity.

For two seasons past we have entertained these pretty imitations of real blossoms, produced to simulate the colors of the galaxy of garden blooms.

The cubist influence, so prominently evidenced in every department of women's dress, has also helped to reincarnate the vogue for artificial flowers.

These blossoms are offered to us in startling artistic conceptions.

Blue and purple roses made of velvet, silk poplin, taffeta or moire are outlined in leaf style with scarlet, orange or green worsted veinings.

Flowers of this type become especially effective when used for corsage decorations for evening dress or to provide contrasts of delightful charm when posing within the snug depths of dainty lace collars.

Ostrich plumes and feather novelties made from the plumage of domestic fowls are among the popular feather decorations for spring hats. These are usually combined with ribbon in trimming.

Illustrated here are two stylish new models. The upper one is of silk very much turned up at the left and adorned with a couple of short ostrich feathers. The other hat is of fine straw with moire ribbon and an ostrich plume that is wired to stand erect.

SCALLOPED SETS.

Sheets and Pillowcases For Beds Are Embroidered Simply.

While making sham sheets first fold in the hem which should be about four and one-half inches in width. The hem should be put in with hand sewing and the stitches should be very small and even.

Stamp the scallops about one-half inch from the edge so as to leave plenty of space for the embroidery. Before beginning the work sew a strip of goods along the edge so that the work can be done in an embroidery hoop. The scallops are worked through the two thicknesses of the material over a slight padding.

Pillowcases to match the sheet should be made and the hem in these should be put in before stamping the scallops. Pillowslips, made after the French method, open at both ends, are really worth the extra work, for the scalloped ends not only add to the beauty of the case but make it easier to adjust the pillow.

SAN TONE TANGO.

PERSONAL NOTE.

SanTone, Texas, April 20, 1914.

DEAR EDITOR:

I wrote the enclosed apology several weeks ago, but owing to other work did not put in readable shape. Since first writing I have seen several suggestions pictorial and literary, along the same lines. The characters and incidents are, in the main, facts and not fiction and not taken from any sketch.

The word "Tehanno" is Mexican for "Texan." The word "king snipe" means a railroad foreman.

I am getting the Herald regularly now and enjoy it too.

Sincerely,
SAM J. McCLURE.

SanAntonio, Texas.

As the brilliant(?) paragrapher of a Texas newspaper would say: "On this beautiful sun-kissed Sabbath morning we feel inspired to express a few thoughts in keeping with the salubrious weather and our most congenial surroundings, etc., etc." Life in the Lone Star State is still interesting, even strenuous and Old Progress is progging along with giant strides.

SanTone, the City Beauti—no, no, Augustus, not yet—is assuming the airs and appearances of a real metropolis. A recent bond issue of 'steen millions has enabled the city politicians, contractors and grafters to tear up the streets and make a bluff at the improvement of public utilities, making it necessary for average pedestrians to execute a series of tangoes, fandangoes and kangaroo jumps in attempts to reach any given point in the down town section. Street straightening and widening is also in progress.

The old-timers who laid out this village on the rolling plains evidently did not believe that a straight line was the shortest distance between two points, consequently we have many streets bordering on the sinuous or serpentine. Also plazas, squares, circles, paralellograms and right angled triangles without number.

And the architecture, medieval, modern and otherwise, added to the charm of a semi-tropical climate, attracts the traveler and tourist who brings us the kale that enables us to tote home the bacon or ham and—

Business of all kinds is improving and the number of automobiles and silk socks is increasing rapidly. The suffragette, hobble skirt and diaphanous gown are having their day and the dansante?—why, I've heard that there are some so blase that they tango from morn till morn. (This has no reference to "September Morn.")

The prominent theatrical stars from Noo Yawk stop here while the engine takes water, remarking the while on the outlandish appearance and customs of the uncouth Texican. It is a well known fact that the average Noo Yawkah is becoming as dense as our English cousins who cannot visualize or comprehend anything beyond the limit of their own habitat.

Huh! Some queer folks in this good old world which is about as John D says: "The best I ever owned."

"Talking about your Mulligan Guards"—er, I mean—well then, to continue our senseless babble about old Tee-ex-ess. I believe San Tone is destined to become quite a hamlet, ham and—let or an omelette.

There's from five to seven or eleven thousand autos here and we have advanced so far along manufacturing lines that we make more than 1700 different articles altho some of the unsophisticated Easterners would have us punching cows, consuming bug juice and conducting ourselves in a manner unbecoming to a real Tehanno. And we all tote guns, wear big hats and ride the best hoss in seven counties, b'gosh! Don't we?

During the winter season the average San Tone citizen works as a separator and harvester of coin from the tourist crop, taking his heavy sacks of golden grain to the bank with a motor truck. The "Good Old Summer-time" is devoted to preparation and planting for another season and so on.

The cowpunch? He has moved farther west or perhaps taken up the strenuous occupation of a mounted policeman. The handsome looking "bad man" and gay caballero who rode a wide range of territory rescuing females in distress, robbing banks or holding up travelers, is now selling or manufacturing some commodity—sometimes within a stonewalled enclosure.

Oh yes, there's plenty of ranches, ranchers and some cowpunchers around here but as far as I can observe, they seem to lack the much exploited equipment of "rings on their fingers and bells on their toes." And the 45 "gat" is not much in evidence. Romance has suffered a painful, lingering demise and everyone seems to be engaged in sordid pursuits. "Get the coin" is the slogan and it keeps us all on the tango.

Speaking of the tango-itus again—I happened to be one of a party of men who motored out—by the way, we all wore silk socks—to a ranchhouse some 12 miles from the city to spend Saturday afternoon which is usually taken as a half holiday. As we drew up to the house Charlie, the head of our crowd, saluted the rancher with a

"Hello, Jake! We tangoed—er—drove out on your daughters' invitation to spend a couple of hours in frivolous pastime."

"Come right in, boys," said the old man with a real Texican smile. "You'll find the gals tangoing in the kitchen."

And so it was. Dishes unwashed and the house in general disorder but the dansante in full swing.

"By all the horned toads of Texas!" I exclaimed with popping eyes, "Slit skirts, silk socks and the tango away out here in the mesquite and cactus!"

The old man laughed. "Sure thing," said he. "Gotta keep up to the minute. Neighbor of mine got it so bad he's teaching it to the cattle and goats and I expect I'll have to get silk pajamas for my gal's pet pony."

"Jumping jackrabbits of Jasper!" I gasped. "Has it got as far as that?"

"Funny, aint it?" said Jake. "Funny how we fall for this kind of stuff in our old age. At first I kicked about it and kicked hard but it aint no use. I had to get in the game myself or else leave my happy home and finally my daughter showed me a few steps. Why, I can—"

"You don't dance yourself?" I said doubtfully.

"You bet yuh. Come on, Gwen!" he called to his youngest. "Let's show these folks the real thing in Texas tango."

And they did show us. With artistic ease Gwendolyn and her papah executed the goose slide, worm wiggle, dippy dip, fish walk, turkey trot, kangaroo canter, hesitation hop, walrus waltz, sinuous slide and many other difficult feats of acrobatic contortion, concluding the performance with a loud and merry horse ha ha.

"Phew!" exclaimed old Jake as he mopped his brow at the finish. "This beats that cabaret show on Alamo Plaza. Say, why don't you dance?" he asked me.

"I got corns and rheumatism," I replied somewhat sheepishly.

"Well, why in blazes don't you dance it out of your system?" he shouted. "Wake up! Get some of the joy."

"Oh, you pap!" said his daughter, laying her hand on his half-bald pate. "Don't get so excited. This is not a rough-house reception."

The old man subsided.

"I reckon," said he after a pause and in a calmer tone, "this thing's gettin' my Angora."

The festivities and frivolities ended at last and we prepared for departure, but before we left I remarked to our host, "And I suppose you'll be tangoing over to church tomorrow, Jake?"

With a sober countenance and a lowering of the eyes he replied:

"That's something we've been neglecting lately in all this rush of so-called Progress, higher civilization, money and so on, but I reckon we'll all get back to it sooner or later. Mebbe sooner."

"Yes," I assented, "We all get back to our proper place some day. Law of compensation, you know."

A few days after this little episode another shock came to me in the form of a letter from my old friend Mackie Dee McGee, a man of 55 and a king-snipe from the "sticks" of East Texas where I used to hang up my hat and tittie. He is now in Louisiana and writes interestingly of his present life winding up with the following P. S. which I quote verbatim:

"I moughty neer fergot to tell you that I'm marred agen, this time to a 19 yr. ole gal. My other 4 wives wus wurkers but this wun don't wurk a lick. She kant cook a sody biskut haf as good as them we ust to git at ole Sody or Saleratus in Polk Co., but she can tango like a Texas tumble bug."

Apropos of SanTone life and—did I say something of sordid pursuits?—a recent acquaintance from Arkansaw has been located here for some time, doing well in a commercial sense and like Uncle John, has decided to tarry. He has become enamored of the luxurious flowers, handsome women and balmy air of a semi-tropical clime and altho he is not so fond of negroes, Mexicans and other rough citizens nor the unpaved, crooked streets, yet he does love the glitter of the coin that flows into his shop and when I asked him if he ever thought of returning to the sticks and brush of his native state, his reply was somewhat humorous and characteristic of the Arkansawyer. "No," he said, "Not while the sun shines, grass grows and water runs."

And, as Artemus Ward or Bill Nye or some other bygone celebrity once said: "Them's my sentiments too."

Sincerely yours,
SAM JAY.

The Bait.

"George," said Mrs. Smith, sitting up suddenly in bed, "there's a burglar in the place!"

"Nonsense!" replied her husband drowsily.

"I'm quite right," she returned. "I can hear him distinctly crossing the floor of the room below. Now"—excitedly—"he's lighting one of those cigars I gave you for your birthday. I heard him pick up the box and put it down again."

Then George sat up and listened.

"By Jove, Annie, you're right!" he answered. "He is! He's actually smoking one of those—er—er—those cigars!"

Then he nestled more comfortably beneath the blankets.

"Go to sleep, Annie," he said complacently. "We'll find the poor wretch in the morning!"—Pearson's Weekly.

KLAW & ERLANGER'S

Stupendous International Production of "BEN HUR" to be Staged in Jackson, Mich. Monday and Tuesday, May 4 and 5.

Spectacular magnificence, dramatic splendor and religious ecstacy are the most notable concomitants of Klaw & Erlanger's International production of "Ben-Hur", which will be the offering at the Athenaeum, Jackson, Michigan, Monday and Tuesday nights and Tuesday matinee, May 4 and 5. During the fourteen years which have passed since the original presentation of this noble drama its owners have not only kept it up to its original grandeur, but have elaborated and developed the possibilities of the production each season, until today it stands unrivaled in beauty of establishment, unsurpassed in dramatic significance and power. It was the "last word" of the stage craft of the nineteenth century, and into the new age it brought a bigness and perfection which will remain the standard for decades to come.

Dealing with the earth life of Jesus, the most important period in history, "Ben-Hur" shows the world at its most wonderful point in magnificence and wealth, for Rome ruled the world and Caesar Augustus was Emperor of the mightiest realm the earth had known. Into this time of display and pomp came the lowly Nazarene, the Christos for whom the nation had longed, and it is this personality of Jesus that, permeating the fabric of the Wallace Young drama, makes it a sermon as well as a drama of tremendous significance. The reverence with which the imminence of Christ is indicated has made "Ben-Hur" a religious pageant, while the sweep of story of Ben-Hur and Messala, Esther and Iras, carries audiences off their feet, the culmination of the dramatic plot being the chariot race, wherein Ben Hur conquers and degrades his enemy.

Nothing more realistic than this scene in the arena of the Circus of Antioch with Ben-Hur and Messala driving quadruple teams of equine thoroughbreds contesting for supremacy has ever been imagined by a dramatist or or executed by a producer. The race enthralls because on its outcome depends life, love, honor, riches to the victor and when Ben-Hur receives the victor's crown of wild olive audiences applaud with the greatest enthusiasm.

A Tecumseh Citizen Gives Information of Priceless Value

TECUMSEH H. S. DEFEATS ADDISON IN 10 INNINGS.

The local high school celebrated their initial appearance in their new uniforms by beating Addison in an exciting ten inning game by the score of 11 to 10.

The opening inning was a heartbreaker for Addison. The home boys started the game by pushing over five runs. After this inning the opponents never were within striking distance until the first half of the ninth, when with a great rally aided by poor playing on Tecumseh's side, let them have five scores. This gave them a one-run lead, but our boys came back with one more making it necessary to play an extra inning.

Addison's little pitcher had been weakening all along and a new pitcher greeted our turn at bat after we had put them out on a long fly to center a grounder to third and one to the pitcher.

The new pitcher wasn't as good as the other one in our mind, as every man up hit the ball safely and we had still three men on base when the winning run was shoved across.

Our boys made a good appearance in their new suits, but we are sorry to say that the necessity of sliding bases made the suits look as if they needed a washing.

By winning this game it makes Addison and Clinton tied for first. There is a possibility of a game with Adrian or Blissfield soon. The following is the score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	Runs
Addison	0	0	1	0	1	0	2	1	5	0	10
Tecumseh	5	0	0	0	3	0	0	1	1	1	11

GREATEST ARTILLERY FORCE IS AT BORDER

El Paso, Texas, Has Army of 6,000 Soldiers.

El Paso, Tex., April 27.—The largest forces of artillery at any one point in the United States is gathered here. It includes four batteries, three of the Sixth horse artillery and one of the Third field artillery, the headquarters of the two regiments, including field and staff officers, and the band of the Sixth. The first of the two batteries of the Sixth arrived early in the morning from Fort Riley, Kan., and the Second battery arrived in two sections at night. One battery of this regiment was already here and a battery of the Third arrived this week from San Antonio.

The three regiments of infantry from the Presidio at San Francisco, with Brigadier General John J. Pershing in command, began to arrive at night. All arrived before daylight. This will give El Paso a force of close of 6,000 regular troops. The city is patrolled nightly by the military and one battery of artillery is kept constantly trained on Juarez.

Absolute prohibition against the sale of ammunition to either faction in Mexico is being enforced.

PHYSICAL COURAGE.

At 2 o'Clock In the Morning Is the Time to Test It.

It is at 2 o'clock in the morning that man's vitality is at its lowest ebb; all the physical forces are then at their lowest ebb, and every military man of experience knows that the "2 o'clock courage" counts. He knows that if a soldier is really brave at that hour he need never fear of his becoming a coward, as he is really a remarkable man.

A well fed man will fight better than a half starved man, whether he be civilian or soldier. And this is the same principle as the so called "2 o'clock bravery," for the half starved man lacks vitality, just as the average man lacks vitality at 2 o'clock in the morning.

If you are anxious to know just how brave you are make the test some morning at 2, when you hear burglars in your house. If you crawl under the bedclothes you are probably quite a normal man, but if you rise boldly from your bed, grasp the nearest weapon and sally forth to meet the robbers you are indeed a brave man and should be proud of yourself.

Any veteran of some great war will tell you that the most difficult test of courage is to be aroused from his sleep by the shrill blast of bugle and long roll of drums and ordered to charge an enemy unseen or only dimly seen at 2 o'clock in the morning. Marching into battle under the bright sunlight is not so difficult, and the seasoned veteran enjoys the thrill, but even the most hardened veteran feels "creepy" and uneasy turning out at 2 o'clock in the morning to meet the enemy amid the shadows of night, and this is solely because of a natural physical weakness at that hour and has nothing whatever to do with that mental weakness called "cowardice."—New York American.

$1,330 FOR CARE OF CHILD

Woman Is Awarded Sum from Estate of Former Husband.

Chicago, April 27.—Mrs. Emma O. Jaquith gave birth to a daughter shortly after her husband left her in 1884 in Grand Rapids, Mich. Several years later she was granted a divorce on a plea of desertion. Jaquith, meanwhile, had come to Chicago and accumulated some property. He died intestate in 1912.

Mrs. Jaquith heard of this and filed claim against the estate for $1,660 and $1,015 interest for money spent by her in bringing up the child. Judge Cutting awarded her $1,600, but the case was appealed to the circuit court by Adele Gridley and Elizabeth A. Jones, relatives of the decedent. Judge Petit has just awarded Mrs. Jaquith $1,330.

THE ORPHAN

She Accepted an Unknown Husband

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

I lost my parents when I was very young—indeed, so young that I do not remember them—and was sent to an orphan asylum near my home in the east. That is the only home I ever knew as a child or until I was grown.

One day shortly before I attained an age to leave the institution a young man visited us. The matron brought him to me and told me to show him through the institution. I did so, but he did not appear to be especially interested in it.

When I reached my eighteenth birthday the matron called me into her room and told me that, though she was sorry to part with me, by the rules of the institution I must go forth to make my own living. The news was a crashing blow to me. I had never known any other home than the asylum, and there is always a dread at a change of condition. Moreover, I knew of no way by which I could make a living unless as a servant, and from what I had heard of a servant's life it was disagreeable.

A few days later I was called into a room used for meetings of the directors of the asylum, and there sat a lady, who said to me:

"My work in behalf of the institution is to find husbands for our girls who have grown to marriageable ages. The matron tells me that we cannot keep you here any longer; that your only way of making a living seems to be going out to service and that is not to your liking. She further thinks that you would make some man an excellent wife. I have an application from a farmer in the far northwest for one of our girls. Of course we consider no such applications that are not accompanied by vouchers as to the applicants' respectability. The man I refer to—his name is Nolan—has a farm consisting of a good many acres—farms are large in that country—well stocked with farming implements and money in bank. How would you like to go out there and marry him?"

HE CAME WITH A SMILE.

My first impulse was to decline any such cold blooded arrangement; my second, to get further information. I asked the man's age and was told that he was about thirty-five. Could I see a photograph of him? He had sent no photograph. Supposing I should find him so disagreeable that I would decline to marry him? The lady took a bundle of letters from a pigeonhole, selected the one to which she referred and said:

"This is a very advantageous case. The writer agrees, provided either party declines to accept the other, to pay the expenses of the girl who comes to him to this or any other city within the limits of the United States or Canada. Besides, he pays her expenses to his place."

I withdrew, telling the lady that I would think the matter over and give her an answer as soon as I could come to a decision. I passed a horrible week vibrating between two courses—the one to go out to service, the other to go to the farmer. If I chose the latter course, unless I found the man an ogre, I should feel constrained to marry him—if he wanted me—rather than put him to so much expense for nothing. Nevertheless I had the option to decline him, and it was this that decided me. I accepted his offer.

We hear a great deal about the bride adorned to go to the bridegroom, happy nuptials, honeymoons, and all that. My departure to meet my expected husband was more like going to my own funeral. I clung to the matron, the only mother I had known, and needed all her encouragement to induce me to go even after all arrangements had been made for my going.

"Trust me," she said. "You will find a good man who will love you, and you will love him. You will have a home and in time will be the mother of a happy family."

I passed the time during the journey wondering what kind of man I should find at the end of the route. I fancied a lean man whose exposure to all kinds of weather had made him prematurely old. He had probably lost some of his hair, and farmers seldom take care of their teeth. He would walk as if following the plow.

After crossing a river I noticed on the other side of the car a man reading a newspaper whose face seemed to be familiar to me. I thought I had seen him somewhere before until he looked toward me, when, since he showed no sign of recognition, I concluded that I was mistaken. Probably I had seen some one who resembled him.

After awhile, when there were but few passengers in the car, he offered me some periodicals to read, and this furnished him with a pretext to open conversation. I did not know it then, but there is a far greater freedom in the west than in the east between travelers, even those of opposite sex. There was something pleasing in the man's manner, and I should not have been sorry to while away the time chatting with him had I not been drawing near the end of my journey, and my heart was beginning to sink at the prospect of the meeting in store for me. However, my new found friend did most of the talking, telling me about the country and the amount of wheat that was raised in the state, dwelling especially on the new methods of farming which were then beginning to attract the attention of farmers. He had been to Washington, where he had gained from the agricultural department certain scientific methods of making the soil productive. On this subject he spoke with enthusiasm, but I noticed that when our conversation was turned on any other he was disposed to be taciturn.

One thing about him pleased me very much. He asked me no questions about where I came from or where I was going. He left the train at a station some ten miles from the one at which I would leave it, and my mind, now unoccupied, became filled with terror over the meeting that would take place within half an hour.

When the train drew up at the station and I left the car I was approached by a man who appeared to have recently emigrated from some country of northern Europe, who asked me in broken English if I were "the voman vat was comin' to be married."

Oh, heavens! Had I come all this way to marry this man? I would take the next train back. But I could not do that without funds.

"Yes," I replied in a voice scarcely audible.

"You come this way."

He led me to a side of the station where stood a two seated wagon and offered to help me in, but I balked.

"I'm going back," I said. "It was agreed that if I chose to go back you would furnish me with a ticket."

"I take you to Mr. Nolan's farm," he replied.

"You are not Mr. Nolan?"

"No; I Oscar."

I breathed thanks to heaven and stepped into the wagon, experiencing the relief of one who has been reprieved from sudden death.

It was twelve miles to the Nolan farm, and, the roads being bad, we were three hours on the way. I could not refrain from trying to pump out of Oscar some information about the man I was to meet, but the farm hand spoke but little English, and I was not very successful. I asked him why Mr. Nolan did not come to the station to meet me, and he said he did not know. Being disposed to borrow trouble, I at once inferred that he did not care to show himself till he had got me into a desolate country where I would be at his mercy.

The long drive was at last ended, and I drove up to a neat farmhouse, though plainly built. I was relieved to see a woman come out to meet me. She smiled on me kindly and kissed me.

"I am Mrs. Rogers," she said, "George Nolan's sister. I live a mile down the road and have come here to welcome you. I am sure you will be happy among us."

"But," I stammered, "maybe your brother will not be pleased with me."

"Oh, yes, he will," she said confidently.

"Why do you think so?"

"Well, first, because you are very lovely."

This was, to say the least, reassuring.

"And, secondly?" I asked.

"Because he has seen you and picked you out for his wife."

"Seen me!"

"Yes. A year ago, there being no unmarried women here to choose from, he went east for a wife. He saw you and applied for you."

"Applied for me?"

"Yes; he was desperately smitten with you. He has seen you once since then."

"When?"

"I will call him and let him speak for himself. He asked me to receive you and tell you before meeting him that he has loved you ever since you showed him through the asylum. It only remains for you to make up your mind whether you will remain as his wife. Meanwhile you can come to my house and be my guest."

She called her brother. He came with a smile, and I saw the man with whom I had parted only a few hours before. I married him and wrote to my former friends at the asylum, thanking them for providing a husband for me with whom I was more than well pleased.

Garden Specializing.

It is a good plan, so a successful amateur gardener has said, to try one new annual every year. Perhaps you may not care for the plant again. Perhaps it may not be just what you expected, but if you really do find one or more that seem to thrive particularly well in some spot, stick to those and try them year after year.

Try to improve on them, so that you will have some specialty which, after awhile, you will consider as your own flower. We can never give up all the old favorites, nor make up our minds to grow only roses or sweet peas or pansies, but by making a specialty of roses or pansies or sweet peas and studying their needs we shall develop at least one really valuable flower among the mass of blooms in our gardens.

Friezes Out of Style.

It is much better to have a picture molding close up to the ceiling unless the walls of a room are more than eight and a half or nine feet high. If above that drop the ceiling paper down a foot or so to the picture rail. The old-time deep border or frieze is seldom seen now, and it is a great improvement doing the walls this newer way. Satin striped paper in two tones of the same color is very good, especially for bedrooms. Pink is apt to fade as well as very light blue.

To Remove Tin Lids.

The following is a sure method of removing lids from small jars and round tin boxes. Place the article on the floor on its edge; then put your foot on it and roll it backward and forward. This never fails to remove the most obstinate lid.

MUST QUIT OR BE FORCED OUT

Violence Is Alternative Offered Huerta by Mexicans.

ONE ANTI-HUERTA PLOT FOILED

Reports of Refugees from Mexico City Are That Sentiment Is Crystallizing Against Provisional President—His Misrepresentation of Conditions Said to Be to Blame.

VERA CRUZ. — "I will not resign. I will take to the mountains with my men and my cabinet and I will fight."

That is the message sent out to the people of Mexico City by General Huerta, according to reports given by a staff correspondent of El Imparcial the principal Mexican newspaper of the capital and one of the chief organs of the Huertistas.

VERA CRUZ. — Refugees who arrived from Mexico City reported that General Huerta, fearing assassination, had hidden in a foreign legation after a demonstration in the capital following the circulation by rebel sympathizers of handbills denouncing him and calling upon the people to protect the Americans.

He was denounced as the cause of the landing of American naval forces at Vera Cruz and also as the author of false and inflammatory statements published in the capital.

VERA CRUZ. — Victoriano Huerta will voluntarily abdicate or will be forced out with violence within a few days, according to American refugees who arrived on a special train from the capital.

Frederico Gamboa, former minister of foreign affairs, once governor of Yucatan and candidate of the Catholic party at Huerta's election, is named as the man to supplant him.

According to the refugees anti Huerta sentiment has so crystallized at the capital that on Saturday the conspirators made an attempt to oust the dictator but failed. They did not go into details and admit that they have only a rumor of it. They are certain, however, that Huerta is becoming more and more unpopular because the the better class of Mexicans are finding out that the administration has deliberately deceived them with regard to the action of the United States. The truth about Vera Cruz has reached the capital and has aided in bringing about a revulsion of sentiment or at least an abatement of the patriotic frenzy. They know that the Americans did not butcher Mexican men, women and children when they occupied the town; they know that Spain is not at war with the United States. The change is so great, it is believed by a great many Mexicans at the capital that the Americans are not at Vera Cruz at all.

Diaz Followers Active.

As nearly as can be ascertained the anti-Huerta plots center about the strong faction which in the last week of January endeavored to oust the dictator. The leaders then were old followers of Porfirio Diaz, now followers of Felix Diaz and so-called Clentificoes of the Limantour group. The plot was revealed by a traitor and about twenty prominent Mexicans were either arrested or deported. Gamboa himself was taken at that time although the question whether he was concerned in the plot was never settled. He is regarded as a cool-headed, progressive Mexican, but it is admitted that he will have some difficulty in receiving the approval of the constitutionalists. His name was mentioned to them six months ago by those endeavoring to bring about peace and it was rejected.

Conditions at the capital are improving because of the change in sentiment say the refugees. There are still anti-American demonstrations, but they go no farther than the satirical stage. One of them was on Sunday just before the British train departed. A donkey was led through the street to the laughter and jeers of a mob. He had a picture of President Wilson swung from his neck and an American flag tied to his tail.

Twenty-one Americans arrived on the train in the afternoon and they came as British subjects, bearing British flags.

WASHINGTON. — The consular agent at Puerto, Mex., reports nearly 200 refugees on ships of the American-Hawaiian Steamship company, many of them without resources or clothing of a suitable character.

7 MORE MEN ARE DEAD IN MINE WAR

Hostilities Renewed at Walsenburg With Bloody Results.

ROCKEFELLER SPURNS PEACE

Representative Foster, Personal Envoy from President Wilson, Fails to Interest Young Magnate in Submitting Colorado Trouble to Mediation —Recommends Troops.

WALSENBURG, COLO., — Sheriff Jeff Farr of Huerfano county reported at 1:30 o'clock in the morning that firing continued spasmodically at the Walsen mine near here and that seven men had been killed. Four of tehse were said to have been killed before dark and the remainder since 7 o'clock.

All of the reported dead, he said, were mine guards. Troops arrived just before midnight and set out for the mine.

The battle at the Walsen mine followed an attack on the nearby McNally mine in the afternoon and early evening. The strikers are reported to have captured the McNally mine, from which the miners and others on the property were supposed to have escaped to the Walsen mine with the aid of the seventy-five guards at that property.

The battle began at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon when strikers attacked the mine. At 9 o'clock last night two unidentified men were lying dead on the field.

NEW YORK. — Acting as the direct representative of President Wilson, Congressman Martin D. Foster, chairman of the house committee on mines and mining, hurried here from Washington to urge John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to lend his support to the efforts being made to end the strikers' war in Colorado.

At the close of a three hours' conference with Mr. Rockefeller Mr. Foster said that nothing definite had been accomplished.

Appealed to J. D., Sr.

The sending of Mr. Foster to Mr. Rockefeller as the president's special representative followed a personal appeal on Sunday by the president to John D. Rockefeller, Sr., in connection with the mine strike situation. The president appealed to Mr. Rockefeller as the dominant factor in the Colorado Fuel and Iron company against which the miners are striking. At the Standard Oil offices, it was admitted that Mr. Rockefeller, Sr., had received a communication from the president asking him to endeavor to bring about a peaceful settlement of the labor troubles in Colorado. It is understood that Mr. Rockefeller replied that he personally had never taken an active part in the Colorado company but that he would be glad to ask his son to take the matter up at once.

It was learned that Mr. Foster' proposal to Mr. Rockefeller was that the Rockefeller interests agree to the appointment of a commission to mediate the troubles between mine owners and strikers.

The views of Rockefeller, Jr., on the situation in Colorado were presented at length to the congressional committee of which Representative Foster is chairman. Young Mr. Rockefeller said at the time:

"We stand ready to lose every cent we have invested in that company rather than that the workingmen of this country should loose their right to work for whom they please."

Governor Ammons admitted late in the day that he is powerless to suppress the warfare.

CONSPIRACY NO ACT OF ONE, SAYS BRIEF

If Mrs. Sparling Is Innocent, Can MacGregor Be Guilty?

PORT HURON MICH. — If Mrs. Carrie B. Sparling is innocent of wrongdoing in the death of her son, Scyrel, how can Dr. Robert A. MacGregor be guilty of having conspired with her to cause the death of the young man?

This is the principal point made in the brief of the doctor's attorneys in asking the supreme court for a new trial of his case. Dr. MacGregor is now serving a life sentence in Jackson prison, having been convicted of administering poison to Scyrel Sparling at Ubly, in conspiracy with the boy's mother. The mother, who was also under the charge of conspiracy, has been discharged without ever having been brought to trial. Some time ago the supreme court denied a new trial for Dr. MacGregor, but this was before the discharge of Mrs. Sparling.

"The respondent was convicted upon the theory that he and Mrs. Sparling committed the deed," the new brief declares. "Notwithstanding this, the case against Mrs. Sparling has been dismissed and she has been released. But where a man's life is at stake, we think that justice demands that the court should consider this fact. If Dr. MacGregor is guilty as found in this record, then Mrs. Sparling is equally guilty. If Mrs. Sparling is not guilty, then Dr. MacGregor was wrongfully convicted of conspiring with her."

LEAPS 28 FEET INTO RIVER

Man Stealing Ride on Train Jamps from Top of Car.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Allen Bennett, twenty-eight years old, of Saginaw, leaped from the top of a box car into the river near Alma, a distance of twenty-eight feet, and escaped unhurt. Bennett was stealing a ride from Grand Rapids to Saginaw on a Pere Marquette passenger train and was lying down when he thought he heard the brakeman approaching.

Without looking over the edge of the for a place to land, he sprang from the top of the car and landed in the river, which is shallow. He crawled from the river unaided.

The combined mental capacities of the hog and Clio pig specialists have failed to find a solution. The mother gave birth to twenty little porkers, but two died.

ILLINOIS MINE SCALE READY

Leaders of Both Sides Fear Rejection by Men.

PEORIA, ILL. — The members of the joint wage scale committee of the Illinois Miners and the Illinois Coal Operators association have completed their wage scale report after a months' session. The miners have been called to attend a convention here Thursday at which time the wage scale will be accepted or rejected.

It is feared by leaders of both sides that the proposals will not be satisfactory. The operators rejected practically every proposal which tended to increase the cost of coal produc-

BUGGY MEN CHARGE STEWART IS UNFAIR

Kazoo Defendants in Appeal to High Court to Bar Him.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Attorneys for several of the men indicted by the grand jury applied to the supreme court for a writ of prohibition in an endeavor to secure some other circuit judge besides Nathaniel H. Stewart, to hear arguments relative to the pleas of abatement, which will be heard Monday.

In their apeal to the higher court the attorneys contend that Judge Stewart is prejudiced against their clients.

They contend that Judge Stewart is attorney for the Chicago, Kalamazoo and Saginaw railroad, Kalamazoo National bank and First National bank, of this city, all creditors of the Michigan Buggy company and is disqualified from passing judgment on the question at issue.

The attorneys claim that by word and action that Judge Stewart has evinced a very determined animosity against all persons suspected by him of having been connected with the Michigan Buggy company or having a part in the transaction of the concern.

VETERAN ROUTS ROBBERS

Lyman Gibbs with Shot Gun Puts Intruders to Flight.

COLDWATER, MICH. — About 4 o'clock in the afternoon two men in an automobile drove up to a cottage at Coldwater lake, eight miles south of here. The cottage is occupied by Lyman Gibbs, a Civil war veteran, who served four years in Loomis battery. One of the men entered the house with a drawn revolver, but the old veteran covered him quickly with a double-barreled shot gun and drove him back to the machine.

The men drove rapidly away. Officers are following the men. The men are believed to have been bandits.

THE NAME GOETHALS.

It Means "Stiff Necked" and Dates From the Crusaders.

The soldier and administrative military man have been bred in George Washington Goethals for three generations. He is claimed now by many cities and states, but he is a "Brooklyn boy," although his ancestry is Swiss and of the military Swiss at that. His grandfather was a surgeon in the French army and was with Napoleon at Austerlitz. His own father, John Goethals, was born in Switzerland and moved to Amsterdam in his early boyhood. In 1848 he came to this country, making his home in Brooklyn, where in 1858 Colonel Goethals was born.

The origin of the family name is interesting. In good Dutch it is the equivalent of the English "stiff necked" and was conferred on the first of the present line, who was one of the crusaders, by an early king of Flanders. This man was fighting side by side with his king when a foe struck him a mighty blow. The sword was turned aside by the armor, and the man kept on fighting. A second blow was struck, but still the man kept on fighting before the eyes of his king until the battle was won. After the conflict the king called the warrior to his side and commended him for his prowess.

"Sire," said the soldier, "I break before I bend."

"Henceforth," said the king, "thy name is Goethals, the stiff necked." The name "stuck," and for centuries the family motto has been, "We break before we bend."—New York Herald.

A woman who owns twenty-seven cats and keeps some of them in every room of her house is not necessarily insane, according to the report of a commission in the case of Miss Jennie Butts of McLean, N. Y.

Not an Octet.

Cyril Maude, the English comedian, was talking about class distinctions.

"They are less marked with you than with us," he said. "Here you all talk alike—the shopgirl's accent differs in no wise from that of a Stuyvesant or a Roosevelt. But with us the lower classes talk a disgraceful jargon.

"The 'h' especially. The lower classes can never master that 'h.' In my youth I once heard a stage manager rehearsing 'Faust.' He had sprung from the people, poor chap, and he conducted the rehearsal like this:

"'Old your 'ands on your 'ips, 'old up your 'eads and look 'aughty. You're not on 'Ampstead 'Eath, now—you're in 'Ades. Now, 'asten off 'urriedly, with a look of 'ate.'

"'But, sir,' said I, 'there's only six of us.'"—Washington Star.

COAL MINE EXPLOSIONS.

They May Have a Connection With Seismic Disturbances.

Not a few notable examples of danger periods in coal mines have occurred simultaneously with periods of seismic unrest. As examples of such coincidences in recent years may be cited the Mont Pelee period, 1902, marked by the loss of 550 lives in four mine explosions; the Formosa, Japan, 1906, costing several thousand lives and $45,000,000 property loss, marked by the terrible Courtieres explosion, in which 1,200 lives were sacrificed; the Takashima explosion, 307 lives, and a number of less fatal explosions in West Virginia and Colorado, which were almost immediately followed by the San Francisco disaster, that destroyed $300,000,000 worth of property and over 2,000 lives. The entire period covered less than two months and was followed four months later by the destructive Valparaiso earthquake, with a property loss of $250,000,000 and 7,000 lives, which was almost immediately followed by a remarkable series of mine explosions at Bluefield, W. Va., thirty lives; Raton, N. M., fifteen lives; Windgate, England, twenty-five lives; Pocahontas, Va., thirty-five lives, etc.

This was followed, again, by the Kingston, Jamaica, disaster, January, 1907, with a $10,000,000 property loss and 1,000 lives, which was coincident with the renewed activity of Mount Etna and earthquake in Sumatra, costing 1,500 lives. Simultaneous with this outbreak was the loss, in mine explosions, of twenty-four lives at Primero, Colo.; 250 at Essen, Germany; twelve at Lorentz mine; eighty-four at Stuart, and twenty-five at Thomas, W. Va., and numerous others in other states. The remarkable concomitance of these periods of seismic unrest and danger in mines due to prevalence of gas point to the consideration of the globe as a unit, sensitive in a varying degree to the physical changes in its crust.—Coal Age.

MOTHER'S DAY PROCLAMATION

By the Governor.

The mother is the queen of the home and the home is the ante-room to Heaven. Industry, thrift, honesty, self-sacrifice, sobriety, virtue, sympathy, and love are fostered in the home. The home is the bulwark of our glorious nation. Every influence that stimulates the founding of homes adds to the nobility of manhood and womanhood.

"Breaking Home Ties" is one of the most pathetic, yet one of the most beautiful pictures in the world of art. The boy or girl bidding good bye to Father and Mother, receives a holy benediction that can never escape memory. Out of the shadows and out of the sunshine comes Mother's face, Mother's voice, Mother's love.

On Mother's Day I urge every boy, every girl, every man, every woman in Michigan to pay a tribute of love and devotion to the living Mother. Just read her last letter once more, then write her a joyous letter telling her of your loyalty and abiding love. On the grave of the sleeping Mother scatter flowers mingled with your tears.

Yes, the greatness and glory of a nation is in the hands and hearts of the mothers.

THEREFORE I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, ask that the people of Michigan set apart the second Sunday in May (the 10th) as Mothers' Day. As far as possible let parents in their homes and both young and old in public meetings discuss the theme of Mother with that enthusiasm and sincerity which should characterize all loyal Americans.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this twenty-seventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen and of the Commonwealth the seventy-eighth.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Governor
Frederick C. Martindale,
Secretary of State.

MEXICO'S LIVE WIRE

"Scratch a Russian and find a Tartar" is an old and somewhat overworked proverb, although it is constantly finding fresh illustration in the affairs of life. Perhaps at bottom there is a streak of the old savage, the "cave man," in most people. Mrs. Cora Harris, writing in the Independent, observes: "Look at Villa, the Mexican bandit. He was a nice young man, brought up in Maryland." This information, which will doubtless be new to many, gives a sharp point of contrast with the Pancho Villa of the war despatches. It is not a pleasing picture which a correspondent draws of the rebel leader who has just triumphed at Torreon. According to the correspondent's views Villa, when under fire, harks back to the Indian savage. But there is a business method in his madness. He keeps one eye on the foe and another on the camera. Dressed in shirt and trousers, wearing heavy boots, a pistol stuck in his belt and a rifle in his hand, his head hatless and hair disheveled, he is here there and everywhere all over the field, in fact ubiquitous, shouting orders to his officers, or pausing to return the salutes of wounded men. He is said to fill up the intervals by swearing frightfully. There are moments, however, when he is smiling encouragement to his troops, alongside of whom he fights like a common soldier in the ranks. He is utterly reckless and takes even chances with his men, who, knowing their leader's way of fighting, almost idolize him. And so he goes on, all through the thick of the battle, his sweating face smudged with grime and smoke, his blood at fever heat, and imprecations as well as invocations to all the saints pouring unrestrainedly from the lips. It is not a nice picture, but it describes how the ghastly trade of war transforms some natures. It brings out all the barbarian there is in a man like "the unconquerable" Villa, and accounts, to some extent at least, for his furious love of slaughter and the little mercy he shows to prisoners. Both sides have been barbarous in the Mexican War, but surely the palm for sheer bloodthirstiness must be accorded to the half-hero, half-savage victor of Torreon. —The Christian Herald.

MEMORIAL DAY

Special Observance of Memorial Day is Urged This Year

With the fact in mind that only for a few years more will the commemorative exercises of Memorial Day be carried on by those who fought by the side of those who fell. Supt. Fred L. Keeler is most earnestly urging that schools, both normal and public schools, observe the day with appropriate exercises. The a spirit of patriotism and gratitude to those who answered the call of the nation, must be kept alive. How rapidly the host of the Grand Army is vanishing is shown by the pension rolls. During the year ending June 30, 1913, the number on the pension list was decreased by 36,064 deaths. The inheritance left by these men to the youth of today is a love for the flag and an unswerving loyalty. The inculcating of this spirit is a duty of the school of no small importance. Exercises should be held in every schoolroom of the state Friday, May 16. On May 30 schools should as far as possible assist in the exercises of the day. Memorial Day needs no proclamation. It is almost nationally observed.

Sense of Smell.

Like the senses of sight and hearing the sense of smell quickly tires. Hence it is only before fatigue sets in that a doctor can diagnose different ailments by the sense of smell alone. If he is a smoker or a drinker it is useless to depend upon the nose.

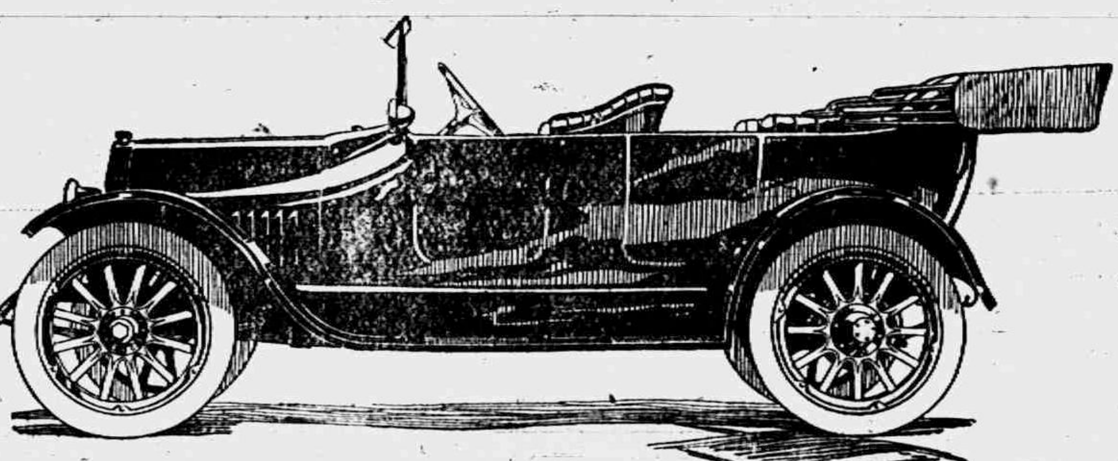
Studebaker FOUR

The Full Floating Rear Axle with Full Timken Bearings



ELECTRICALLY STARTED $1050 ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED

Why Studebaker Four Sales Are Enormous,

Blunty—because no car on the market reveals equal value.

Because, for instance, no other car in the world at this price has a full floating rear axle equipped even to the hubs with Timken bearings.

Because, this axle could not be made better, no matter how much we were willing to spend, or you were willing to pay.

The same thing is true of Studebaker—Wagner Starting and Lighting—the cars of highest cost may show its equal—but they cannot show its superior.

The same thing is true of the proportion of parts actually manufactured in the parent plant—the costliest cars may make as good a showing, but none of them can show more.

The same thing is true of the accuracy of the processes which enter into the manufacturing—the may be equalled in the costliest cars, they are not surpassed.

We repeat, with added emphasis, the sales of this $1050 Four are enormous because no car now on the market reveals equal value.

LENAWEE COUNTY FEDERATION

OF

WOMEN'S CLUBS

The ninth annual session of the Lenawee County Federation of Woman's Clubs was held here yesterday at the Baptist church and was the largest attended of any session yet held. There were in the region of 100 ladies from out of town in attendance as well as many of our home club women who gladly availed themselves of the chance to attend the pleasant gathering

The early arrivals were conducted to the home of Mrs. Shull who graciously entertained them until the hour for the opening of the session.

At 10 o'clock Mrs. Kate E Carr, of Adrian, the Federation president, called the convention to order with a few words and Rev W. A Rex of the Tecumseh Presbyterian church invoked the Divine blessing.

Mrs. R. S. Moore sang charmingly and responded to an encore.

Mrs. Andrew Wilson welcomed the visitors in her capable manner and Miss Alice Angell responded most happily.

Reports of the various officers and the standing committees followed and also a roll call of delegates.

C. L. Cuthbert, of the Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co, in an excellent address, told the ladies of the "Making of Macaroni and Its Uses."

The Baptist ladies served a splendid dinner at noon and then 125 of the ladies were given an auto ride to the macaroni factory and a tour of the institution. As the ladies left the plant they were presented with packages of macaroni and spaghetti also a cook book. Afterward some of the visitors were taken to see our beautiful cemetery and mausoleum.

The [illegible] o'clock with a solo by W. S. Dickinson who was accompanied by Mrs. Fred Dickinson. He responded to an encore.

The various club presidents gave their reports, all showing an increase in interest and membership and all doing much good for those about them. Several had instigated "clean-up days" in their home towns, one had raised money toward a boy's education another arranged for a public play ground while several had sent magazines to Jackson prison. Nearly all had remembered the inmates of the county infirmary.

Mrs. L. W. Kimball of Clinton favored the assembly with a beautiful vocal solo and encore with Mrs. Ella Hodges as accompanist.

Miss Florence Frensdorf of Hudson gave the report of the committee on resolutions which was accepted.

A violin solo and encore by Duaine Service, who was accompanied by Mrs. Fred Dickinson was next on the program.

Rev. F. B. Batchelor of Ann Arbor was then introduced and gave a exceedingly interesting address on "Making a Better Place to Dwell." He laid special stress on the fact that in every phase of life is a desire to serve and especially are the people of today to be concerned for the generations to come. In all communities are societies rising for mutual benefit to plant shubbery, eradicate bill boards and place play grounds, all to "make our place of dwelling better." In his whole address the thought of service predominated—service for church, state and family and showed the ladies where by being home makers, "the soul of the home," they are the main power in all three, bringing life and beauty everywhere

Under the head of miscellaneous business it was voted to give all the past presidents of the County Federation all the privileges of delegates, they to be called "delegates at large."

It was also voted that the ladies should see that the schools in their towns have flags of the United States and Michigan and that the scholars should salute them upon their entrance to the room.

Mrs. Addie Kemp of Tipton gave the report for the nominating committee who had placed the following list of officers for next year:

President—Kate E. Carr.
Vice President—Marian H. Landon.
Secretary—Georgia Crabbs.
Treasurer—Lora Billington.

By motion this report was accepted and adopted

Mrs. Ferry of the Michigan State Historical Commission, gave a stirring address arousing her hearers to a sense of their duty in preserving the history of their beloved state of which more history is buried every day than is recorded. She called the audience to their feet and all saluted the state flag and swore allegiance to it.

She says we shove our children into school and a doctor after them and take no further responsibility of their moral or physical education and in the end patriotism receives no attention. Michigan history is not taught in the schools to which fact the ladies' attention was forcibly drawn. She also affirmed that with the passing of the fire-place began the decline of family government She certainly is wide awake to her subject and she could not fail to enthuse her hearers so that many a garrett will give up its treasures for her museum at Lansing.

The convention accepted the invitation of the Clinton Culture Club for their next meeting.

The announcement was made of the meeting of the State Federation at Adrian next October.

A standing vote of appreciation of the Federation's loss in the death of Mrs Gay of Morenci was given and adjournment taken.

An Appreciation.

The members of the Women's Literary Clubs of Tecumseh wish to publicly thank the citizens of Tecumseh who so kindly gave their time and automobiles to the guests, attending the meeting of the County Federation of Clubs Thursday; also to the musicians who helped to make the day a perfect one.

FOUND AT LAST

Burton Garlinghouse is happy as he has his wheel again. A card received from Mr. J. M. Armsted reported that a wheel answering the description had been left by a party in one of the second hand stores of Adrian. At first he tried to sell the wheel for $5.00 but the man would not buy so he left it for a few days. Burton went over on the 10:32 train Thursday and with the help of the sheriff secured his wheel and was back home in time for the afternoon session of school

MRS. WILSON AIDS RED CROSS

She, With Wives of Garrison and Daniels, to Help Organization.

WASHINGTON. — Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president; Mrs. Lindley Garrison and Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wives of the Secretaries of War and Navy, respectively, and many other prominent women and men in the national capital, took steps to be prepared to assist the American Red Cross in its work of relief and care of the sick and wounded should war with Huerta's forces prove inevitable.

A meeting of the District of Columbia chapter of the National Red Cross association was held here at which Rear Admiral N. E. Mason, chairman of the local branch, presided, and steps were taken to complete an organization for collecting funds and supplies and for transporting the latter to the front.

SMOTHERING SPELLS

Sour Stomach, Heart Burn

MRS. JAMES A. HALL, Box 36, Norris City, Illinois.

In October, 1910, we received a letter from Mrs. Hall, from which we make the following extracts:

"About twelve years ago my health began to fail. I couldn't eat anything without suffering for it. I had heart burn, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells, pains in my sides and back. In fact, I suffered all over, and a cough almost like consumption. Doctors failed to relieve me; in fact, they didn't seem to know what ailed me. I continued to grow worse until I was able to sit up only a part of the time. I had almost lost all hopes of ever being any better.

"But one day some one threw some books in at my door. I read them and found them to be Peruna books.

"They described my feeling so truly I sent at once and got a bottle and began taking it. You pronounced my ailment systemic catarrh, and gave me some advice.

"When I had taken two and one-half bottles I began to eat without suffering. I continued to improve.

"When I had taken eight I was like a new person. That was nine years ago.

"I think Peruna the greatest family remedy there is, for so many ailments are due to catarrhal trouble. I would advise any one afflicted with catarrh to take Peruna and I am sure it will leave."

In the Revised "Ills of Life" we have many similar testimonials which should interest sick people everywhere. Sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Grand Rapids Councilmen Take Up Recount Squabble.

GRAND RAPIDS MICH.— Basing their appeal on the fact that twelve hours notice was not allowed Mayor Ellis by the Sinclair petitioners before a recount was asked of the council, the city council meeting as election convassers appealed the recent mandamus issued by Judge Stuart in superior court to the state supreme court with a special request that the issue be decided as soon as possible

NEWS OF THE STATE

Suicide Recalls a Scandal.

IONIA, MICH. — W. D. Clark, whose body was found in a lake near Cedar Rapids, Ia., suicide from despondency over stomach trouble, preached in Belding in 1889.

Two years later he went to Illinois, thence to Billings, Montana, and in 1904 to Freeport, Mich., where he became involved in a love affair with his wife's sister, forged a note and fled with her to Honolulu. He was captured there and brought to Hastings and on June 18, 1907, Judge Clement Smith sentenced him to Ionia prison for five years to fourteen years. The case caused a sensation on account of Clark's high standing in church circles. He was discharged last June.

Will Appeal on Recount.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — The supreme court will decide as to whether Dr. Malcolm S. Sinclair will get a recount of the votes cast at the last municipal election or whether the city council was right in declaring Mayor George E. Ellis legally re-elected.

The mandamus order issued by Judge William J. Stuart, in superior court compelling the council to grant a recount, was served on Mayor Ellis and the council and without a dissenting vote it was decided to appeal to the supreme court.

Missing Man's Body Found.

MUSKEGEON, MICH. — The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Joseph Launer three months ago, was cleared when his partly decomposed body was found floating in the Brinen Lumber company dock slip.

The last seen of Launer was when he started across Muskegon lake three months ago for a day's hunting. Jessie Higgins who had been searching along the shores of the lake for the body in hopes of obtaining $50 reward, found the corpse.

Assessments Will Go Up.

OWOSSO, MICH. — At a meeting with the city supervisors and members of the commission instructed the city assessor to raise all valuations to actual cash value in making up his roll. Supervisors in the townships have agreed to base taxation on real values.

It is expected the assessed valuation of Shiawassee county property as a whole will be increased about one third.

Panama Canal Expert Dies.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — President H. B. Hutchins received a telegram from New York city, telling him of the death of Alfred Noble, former member of the board of experts who approved the Panama canal plans. Death followed a minor operation, and was entirely unexpected.

He was an Ann Arbor boy, and a graduate of the engineering department in 1870. He was acknowledged to be the foremost engineer in America.

Finds Ring Lost 2 Years.

SEBEWAING, MICH. — While raking up Olen Pengras' lawn, Norman Goebel found a gold ring that proved to be the wedding ring of Mrs. D. D. Finkbeiner, given her by her first husband, Ferdinand F. Winter.

Mother of Twins Wants Reward.

BAY CITY, MICH. — John Porysiak, was found guilty of manslaughter for the killing of his son. He will be sentenced by Judge Collins in a few days.

Borysiak in a quarrel with his son stabbed the latter in the abdomen.

Upbound Vessel Fighting Ice.

Olivia's Prize Package

And the Secret It Revealed

By CLARISSA MACKIE

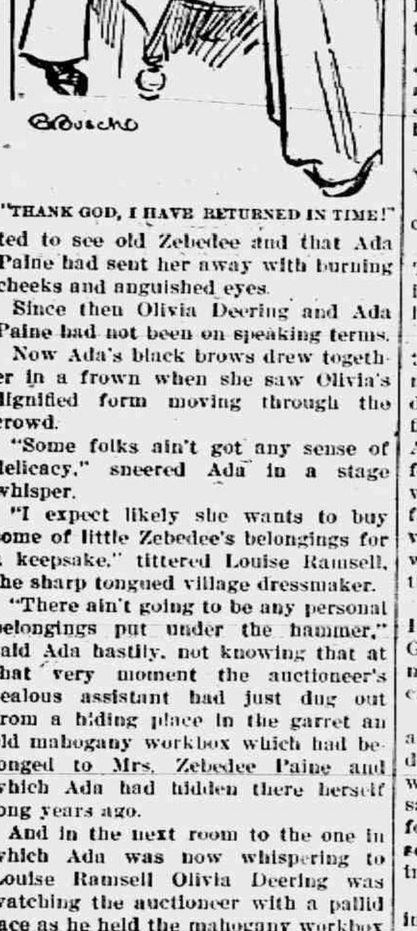
The red auction flag fluttered from a tree over the front gate and told to the village of Wayboro that the household effects of the late Zebedee Paine would be sold to the highest bidder.

Ada Paine, a niece of the dead man and his only known representative and heir, was here, there and everywhere, whispering a word of advice to one concerning some especially choice article, finding a comfortable seat for some good gossip of the neighborhood or detailing her own future plans to an interested group of listeners.

Miss Paine had been Zebedee's housekeeper for fifteen years preceding his death. It was Ada who had soothed the old man's last hours, and some people said that Ada Paine was now reaping the reward for which she had so ardently labored. Others said that young Zebedee Paine would never have left home and lost his life in the sea if it had not been for his black eyed cousin Ada's sharp tongue.

Olivia Deering walked slowly up the path and bent her head to enter the low, old fashioned doorway. She was a tall, stately woman with abundant brown hair lightly flecked with gray at the temples; her skin was clear and rosy and her hazel eyes shining and lustrous. She wore a simple white lawn dress and a plain hat.

People turned and stared and nodded at Olivia, and many of them wondered how many years had passed since Olivia had been under that roof. It was known that once she had called to see old Mr. Paine concerning the reported death of his son, and it was rumored that Olivia had not been permitted to see old Zebedee and that Ada Paine had sent her away with burning cheeks and anguished eyes.



"THANK GOD, I HAVE RETURNED IN TIME!"

Since then Olivia Deering and Ada Paine had not been on speaking terms.

Now Ada's black brows drew together in a frown when she saw Olivia's dignified form moving through the crowd.

"Some folks ain't got any sense of delicacy," sneered Ada in a stage whisper.

"I expect likely she wants to buy some of little Zebedee's belongings for a keepsake," tittered Louise Ramsell, the sharp tongued village dressmaker.

"There ain't going to be any personal belongings put under the hammer," said Ada hastily, not knowing that at that very moment the auctioneer's zealous assistant had just dug out from a hiding place in the garret an old mahogany workbox which had belonged to Mrs. Zebedee Paine and which Ada had hidden there herself long years ago.

And in the next room to the one in which Ada was now whispering to Louise Ramsell Olivia Deering was watching the auctioneer with a pallid face as he held the mahogany workbox high in the air above the curious crowd.

"And now this here mahogany box, locked fast, to be sold sight unseen. What am I offered?"

As in a dream Olivia lived the next few moments. She heard her own voice bidding steadily against that of some unknown person. For some unexplainable reason she wanted that workbox more than anything in the world. Then, because Wayboro folk preferred to know just what they were buying and very many of them possessed ancient workboxes similar to the one offered for sale, the other bidder dropped out, and Olivia found herself the possessor of it for the sum of $3.40.

Somehow after this purchase Olivia's interest in the sale ended, and, wrapping the box in her light summer shawl, she left the house. Her tall, graceful form hurried up the street, turned at a corner and went up a grassy road, where her little white painted cottage stood in a lovely garden at the end. From the white cottage Olivia could glimpse the sea, and winter and summer for twelve years its distant murmur had seemed to whisper some message to her from the lost lover of her youth.

Now she tossed aside her hat and sat in the window overlooking the sea. The mahogany box was in her lap, and her shapely fingers rested lightly upon it.

The box was heavy. Something moved about within it. Very likely it had not been opened since Zebedee went away to sea. Olivia recollected that Zebedee had told her that his dying mother had given him her workbox for his very own, and he had whispered that he kept Olivia's letters in it and a curl of her hair and the first roses she had ever given him.

Then all at once Zebedee had gone away to sea.

Without a word to Olivia he had left her, and Ada Paine, who was in love with her handsome young cousin, had whispered here and there that Zeb was tired of Olivia and was taking that way of getting out of his engagement.

Olivia was thinking of all these things as she sat there alone, looking at the sea, with the mahogany box in her lap.

Presently she looked down at the box without a key.

"I wonder," she said dreamily; "I wonder if he took my letters when he went away or if he left them behind?"

She went to a small table, and from the drawer she took a bunch of keys of assorted sizes. Finally one tiny twisted key fitted into the little lock. The bolt moved, and in response to Olivia's touch the cover of the box was raised.

For a long time she sat staring down at the contents of the mahogany box. They were so unexpected.

Instead of a bundle of old creased and yellowed love letters there was a little heap of unopened letters. Some were the letters she had written to Zebedee during the winter she spent with her aunt in Lansing, and others were his letters which she had never received because they had never passed through the postoffice, and it was on her return to Wayboro that she learned that Zebedee had gone away and that she was jilted. At that time Ada Paine had been assisting in the postoffice during spare time from her duties as her Uncle Zebedee's housekeeper.

Olivia wondered if there was any connection between the two circumstances.

There was the evidence that Zebedee had written to her. He had been faithful, and at last convinced of her fickleness he had gone away to sea to lose his life in a shipwreck.

From her seat in the window Olivia could look down the grassy road, and presently she saw Ada Paine's short, dumpy form hurrying toward the cottage.

Olivia gathered up the letters and concealed them in a locked trunk in the spare room. Then she made her way downstairs in time to open the door to Ada Paine's insistent rapping.

"Will you come in?" asked Olivia stiffly.

"Yes," panted Ada Paine as she hurried into the sitting room. Her black eyes darted here and there and finally rested on the mahogany box.

She crossed the room and held the box close to her breast.

"How dare you come to my house and buy this?" she demanded fiercely.

Olivia surveyed her coolly.

"It was a public auction. I had a perfect right to attend and to buy anything that was put up for sale."

"This is a mistake. It was not intended to be sold! It is mine—my personal property." There was anxious inquiry in Ada's sharp eyes as she looked at the pale, composed face of the woman she had wronged.

"If it is your box, Ada," said Olivia, "why does it contain letters that belong to me—letters that I never received from your Cousin Zeb, letters that he never received from me—why?"

Ada Paine gazed in horror at Olivia.

For a long time they stood thus. They did not hear footsteps approaching by the grassy road and enter the house by an open side door.

"Ada, why did you suppress my letters to Zeb? Why did you withhold my letters to him? I never could understand his desertion. I believed him fickle, and he was true to me, and, Ada Paine, you have much to answer for. I loved Zebedee Paine, and he went to his death believing me to be false to him!" Olivia's self control wavered. A voice came from the doorway—a man's deep throated tones, thrilling with emotion.

"No, Olivia, I didn't go to my death. I am very much alive, dear. Thank God, I have returned in time to save my old home and, what is more precious, my sweetheart, my only love!"

Olivia turned to find herself in the arms of a handsome middle aged Zebedee, sun browned under tropic skies, where he had been held prisoner by a savage tribe of south sea islanders for the past three years, so that his self enforced exile had become actual imprisonment.

While he whispered in Olivia's willing ear the wretched woman who had so foully shadowed their lives suddenly dropped the mahogany box and fled from the house.

And it was a sign that the years of separation had not embittered their hearts that Olivia and Zebedee made haste to find Ada and to assure her of their forgiveness.

And Wayboro people, agog over these sudden happenings, whispered that when Olivia Deering bought the mahogany workbox she certainly had found a prize package, but this they could only guess because of the resultant happiness for all concerned, for no word of these things ever passed the lips of Olivia or her husband or their much chastened cousin.

REBELS WILL NOT REMAIN INACTIVE

Carranza Says It Will Give Foe too Great Advantage.

VILLA TO ATTACK SALTILLO

Rebel Leader Is Entraining His Troops for Next Battle—Federal Garrison Being Reinforced—Shortage of Food Makes Situation in City Desperate—Villa Has Large Force.

El Paso, Texas, May 4.—Constitutionalists in Mexico will not remain inactive while the A. B. C alliance mediation board is arranging for peace in Mexico. This was stated emphatically by General Carranza in a reply which he sent by request of the mediators that hostilities be suspended pending the adjustment of the Mexican situation. Carranza takes the position that, it would be giving Huerta too great an advantage for the rebels to let matters rest just when they have every opportunity for making the conquest of northern Mexico complete. Carranza, it is understood here, wishes representation at the meetings and as representatives to the mediation conference he has named Rafael Zubaran Capmany, minister of Gobernacion in the constitutionalists cabinet, and Luis Cabrera, one of Carranza's confidential advisers. Should four commissioners be allowed to the constitutionalists, Francisco Urquidi, acting diplomatic agent at Washington for the constitutionalists and Jose Vasconcelas of Mexico City, a lawyer and rebel sympathizer, would be named.

Saltillo Villa's Next Meat

Chihuahua, Mex., May 4.—Federals are strongly fortifying Saltillo and preparing to make a desperate stand against the rebel forces of General Villa. Advices from the front say that 1,500 federal reinforcements have reported to Saltillo, bringing the strength of the federal garrison there up to more than 12,000. Federal deserters say conditions in Saltillo are growing desperate as the large garrison has exhausted the food supply in the city and surrounding country and there is suffering among the people.

The rebel advance against Saltillo has become general. General Villa began entraining troops at Torreon for San Pedro de Las Colonias. As the railroad line between San Pedro and Monterey still is out of commission the forces sent to San Pedro will march overland from that point to Monterey, and thence to Saltillo. Villa has 18,000 men to send against Saltillo and practically the whole force is moving to the attack.

It is stated by rebel leaders that General Villa will devote his whole attention to Saltillo, leaving the Tampico situation to General Gonzales and Villareal.

Protest from Tampico.

Washington, May 4.—The seeming abandonment of American interests at Tampico to the mercies of the Huertista and protection of British and German naval forces is bringing a torrent of protests to Washington.

It was announced by telegraphic advices from Galveston that a committee representing the 3,000 American refugees is coming to Washington to inquire what the government intends to do in regard to Tampico. A telegram from an American business man now at Galveston who has big concerns at Tampico and was taken from that port with the refugees, reached Washington. It sharply criticised the attitude of this government.

The Other Fellow Lies Also.

Vera Cruz, May 4.—Roderigo De Llano, editor of President Huerta's newspaper organ, El Imparcial, who was arrested here the other day on a charge of spying and afterwards released and allowed to visit all parts of the city when he was vouched for by two American correspondents, returned to Mexico City and published a most lurid story of alleged brutality of the American forces. He says his own treatment is an illustration of how Mexicans are treated. He declares that he was beaten by six American soldiers, which is of course, untrue.

This seems to indicate that inasmuch as El Imparcial is an absolute Huerta organ that the president is furtively creating an anti-American sentiment at the capital.

Dead on Way Home.

Vera Cruz, May 4.—The armored cruiser Montana has sailed for New York with the bodies of the marines and sailors who were killed after the American troops landed two weeks ago. All the bodies will be taken to New York whence they will be shipped to the homes of the dead heroes. The Montana will be met by three battleships, Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts, either outside the Delaware breakwater or off the New Jersey coast. The old battleships will then convoy the Montana with the nation's dead to New York.

Rear Admiral Badger's fleet observed the sailing of the Montana in solemn fashion. The flags were all placed at half mast, the crew dressed ship and stood at attention while th[illegible]

DEMONSTRATION IS FAILURE

Only Seven Marchers Show Up to Parade In Front of Residence.

Tarrytown, N. Y., May 3.—The agitators who are making demonstrations of their attitude toward John D. Rockefeller and John D., Jr., came to Tarrytown to begin a series of daily processions up and down in front of the entrance to the Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills. There were only seven of the marchers who made the journey from New York and nobody but a few employes of the Rockefeller estate and a newspaper man or two were on hand to act as spectators, so the demonstration could not be called a great success.

The leaders of the movement promise at least twenty marchers later.

FORMER MARSHAL INDICTED

Ex-Official in Missouri Accused of Embezzling $2,040.

Kansas City, Mo., May 4.—A. J. Martin, former United States marshal for the western district of Missouri, was indicted by a federal grand jury here charged with embezzlement in connection with the disposition of $2,040 in funds received from the sale of contraband whisky and vinegar while he held the federal office.

Federal officials say Martin admitted depositing money to his own account in a bank instead of to the credit of the treasury department and asserted that he made full restitution.

TO FIRE AMMONS COLORADO PLAN

Legislature Meeting To-day to Act on Troubles.

MILITIA COMPANY IS TARGET

Opponents of Governor Will Take Ground That He Is Incapable of Maintaining Order In State—Major Holbrook Is Disarming Everybody—Rule Whole End of State.

Denver, May 4.—With the entire membership of Campany A, Colorado national guards facing both court martial and trial by the civil authorities on charges of murder as result of the killing of two women and eleven children in the destruction by fire of the Ludlow tent colony on April 20, the real interest in the strike situation centers in Denver.

To Impeach Ammons.

Members of the state legislature are arriving by the dozen for the special session. Secret caucuses were being held in three of the big hotels. On every side it is rumored that well-defined plans to impeach Governor Ammons and probably Lieutenant Governor Fitzgerald have been formulated.

That a resolution to impeach Ammons will be introduced is virtually certain. Whether the house will adopt such a measure is still a question. The report submitted by the military commission, finding that the soldiers fired into the tents where the bodies of women and children were afterwards found, is being urged as the strongest evidence of Ammons alleged inability to govern the state. When the legislature assembles, a body of women, at least 300 of them, will march on the state house and demand an audience.

Holbrook Disarms All.

Major W. A. Holbrook, in charge of the federal troops in the Trinidad district, let it be known that he has construed Secretary Garrison's proclamation as to the disarming of all persons in the strike zone who are not in active service of the United States army to include members of the Colorado militia as well as strikers, mine guards, and others. Consequently the order is being carried out on that theory.

Government soldiers took charge of the entire strike zone of the state, including the northern district of which Louisville is the center. The state soldiers have left the southern field, but there are still some in the northern district.

There are eighty-six men in Company B who are held responsible for the Ludlow tent tragedy. The district attorney at Trinidad says that he probably will wait until today before taking any action toward criminal prosecution.

STATE NEARLY SHY CHECK OF $355,000

Registered Letter with Telephone Tax Misdirected.

Lansing, Mich., May 4.—Michigan almost lost a check for $335,000. It was from the Michigan State Telephone company in payment of its taxes for the year, and it came so close to going astray that a few of the men in the state treasurer's office were almost speechless. Evidently the telephone officials in Chicago do not keep very well posted on affairs in Michigan, as they think that Albert E. Sleeper is still state treasurer. They made out the check to his order, put it into a registered letter addressed to him and let it go.

BOOKKEEPER ENDS HIS LIFE

Frankfort, Mich., May 4.—A. C. Willard, for twenty-four years bookkeeper for the Empire Lumber company, Empire, killed himself at the Hotel Yeazel, Frankfort. He retired at 8:30 in the evening leaving a call for 6:30. When the clerk entered the room he found Willard dead with a bullet in his right temple.

In the letters left by Willard the occurrence of the quotation, "The way of the transgressor is hard," has given rise to the rumor of a shortage. Willard also directed the undertaker to "go light" and "use a plain coffin."

MAULED BY A LION.

An Unexpected Attack and a Perilous and Exciting Mixup.

Captain C. H. Stigand was once mauled by a lion, and he recounts the adventure in his "Hunting the Elephant In Africa." The captain had shot a lioness, and while watching the body from a tree he saw two lions approach. They stood over the lioness and roared alternately for half an hour. He succeeded in shooting them both, but on approaching the body of his second victim he found that it was not quite so dead as it had seemed. "I approached the edge, and immediately the inert mass assumed life and, with a roar, sprang on me with one bound. The orderly, who was a few yards behind me, immediately retired precipitately. As the lion sprang I fired into his chest, and he landed on me, his right paw over my left shoulder, and he seized my left arm in his teeth. As my left arm was advanced in the firing position, it was the first thing he met.

"The weight of his spring knocked me down, and I next found myself lying on my back, my left arm being worried and my rifle still in my left hand underneath his body. I scrambled around with my left arm still in his mouth until I was kneeling alongside of him and started pommeling him with my right fist on the back of the neck. He gave me a final shake and then quickly turned round and disappeared in the grass a little nearer to the station than I was."

The author adds that he was drenched with blood, and upon examination he found eight big holes in his arm and three claw marks on his back, a damage that partially disabled him for two years. He remarks modestly that since that adventure he has bagged seven more lions.

THE OLD TIME "YE."

It Was Simply an Abbreviation and Was Always Pronounced "The."

How does it happen that in copying and reading ancient manuscripts we call the character our ancestors meant for "the" by the ridiculous "ye?"

They said "the" just as we do, and the only apparent reason for mistaking the character is that two centuries ago the letter "h" was usually written with a tail below the line and with a razeed top, which made it look like our "y." Then the word was so frequently used that it was contracted, just as the word "and" was then treated and continues to be treated to this day by many of us.

When I was a boy, more than eighty years ago, the alphabets in our school books always ended with the "short and." We called it "ampersand" and considered it a fine snapper when we rattled off the alphabet. Sometimes when sufficiently cultured we gave it the full title "and-per-se-and."

Now, it is likely that our "&" will become obsolete, just as "ye" has become. Then our descendants of the next century or two will be puzzled perhaps, but I do not think they will be so foolish as to say "ampersand" when reading our manuscripts and coming to the little quirk we meant for "and." Do let us drop saying "ye." —Dial.

Got on Dangerous Ground.

Telling of his experience in Jolo, in the Philippines, a writer in the New York Times says: "When I was first picking up some of their language there ran toward me one day a handsomely dressed little boy, his mother following at a distance. I picked the boy up and asked his mother how much he was worth. I thought it an utterly harmless way of attempting a civility. But the scream the mother let out, followed by a quick rushing of men with knives from all the huts roundabout, soon convinced me I had offended seriously. A priest of their faith, who had been giving me language lessons, was luckily among the first to arrive. I explained to him I had meant nothing wrong. He in turn explained to me that bartering in children was very much of a reality among them and, more than that, that it was not the custom for any man ever to address a remark to their women at all. I had doubly offended, as the child was a datto's son, and only the children of the low and enslaved were for sale."

Arabian Greeting.

The Arabians shake hands six or eight times. Once is not enough. Should, however, they be persons of distinction they embrace and kiss one another several times and also kiss their own hands.

ACUTE APPENDICITIS.

It Is Dangerous Only When There Is Delay In Operating.

"Acute appendicits calls for immediate surgery," says Dr. Wesley Grove Vincent, instructor in surgery at the New York Postgraduate Medical School and Hospital. Dr. Vincent insisted that there was no medical treatment for acute appendicitis and that the mortality following operation was always due to delay, the surgeon being called in when too late.

"The percentage of mortality in operations for acute appendicitis undertaken in the early stages of the inflammation is shown by hospital statistics to be very low. It is practically nil * * * The mortality in medically treated cases that are allowed to go on to gangrene and rupture with general peritonitis is practically 100 per cent, while late surgery in such cases saves comparatively few."

Appendicitis is common among children between five and fifteen years of age. There is no particular food that can be singled out as especially liable to cause it unless possibly fruits having small pits or seeds. Delay is more dangerous in children than in adults. The symptoms described by Dr. J. B. Murphy come in definite order at approximately regular intervals. They are: First, pain in the abdomen, sudden and severe; second, nausea and vomiting within a few hours, most commonly within three or four hours after the onset of pain; third, general abdominal sensitiveness, most marked on the right side or, more particularly, over the appendix; fourth, rise of temperature two to twenty-four hours after onset of pain.—New York World.

KNEW THE WORD "KIRK."

But Went Astray When He Followed It Into the Turkish.

To hold down successfully the job of governor of a state or vice president of the United States one does not have to be up on oriental languages. So the Honorable Thomas R. Marshall never hesitates to tell this on himself:

It was at a reception in Indianapolis which took place when the Bulgarian army was driving the Turks out of Thrace. The battle of Kirk Kelisseh had just been fought.

"Odd name that—Kirk Kelisseh," said the then governor of Indiana. "It means 'Forty Churches,' or, rather, mosques. Now, isn't it queer that the word 'kirk,' which, as we all know, stands for 'church' in the Scotch vernacular, and which appears in German and other languages of northern Europe, should have precisely the same meaning in Turkish! It makes us wonder whether all tongues may not have had a common source, and if that is so it would probably be found that that source was in the east."

There was murmured applause from every one except an unobtrusive little professor, who had been hovering near the group.

"Pardon me, governor," he piped up, "but your conclusions, while interesting, might be called—er, a little misleading. It is perfectly true that Kirk Kelisseh is the Turkish for 'Forty Churches,' but it is the word 'kelisseh' that means a place of worship, while 'kirk' means 'forty.'"

A South Pole Hero.

Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian who put the south pole on the map, was born in Sarpsburg, Norway, July 16, 1872. His youth was spent in Christiania and on board sealers and whalers commanded by his father, Captain Jens Amundsen. He was twenty-five when he entered on his first south polar trip as the first officer of the Belgica expedition. This journey lasted two years and filled the young sailor with aspirations for further explorations in the frozen regions. His parents wanted him to become a physician, and he spent a year in a medical college. Later he went to Germany to study sciences that would aid him as an explorer. His first notable feat was to take a ship through the northwest passage, and on this trip he twice wintered in the ice.—New York World.

BIG ART FILM COMING!

"A Butterfly on the Wheel", without a doubt the most beautiful picture ever made, will be presented at the Bradley Opera House, next Thursday, May 7th, for one night only. The picture is produced by the Pathe Freres Co. of Paris, France. Every foot of the picture is handsomely hand colored.

This story deals with the old familiar theme of the Eternal Triangle; two men and one woman, together with the ever-present, well meaning friend, the business that cannot be neglected and money used to lure the weak woman to her ruin.

We open the story in Paris and the first scenes lie between that city and the beautiful home of the husband's friend at Armoise, which the party reach by automobile and steam yacht; after which we return to Paris where the tempter, in the absence of the husband, makes his insidious approaches felt with the result that the husband goes mad, the form of his madness being that he fancies that the wife is still with him constantly.

In the meantime we are treated to an automobile tour taken by the erring pair through the Swiss Alps, taking in the famous Saubfecht Falls and Lake Luzon; finally reaching their destination at Geneva by way of the Pontalier Mountain Road; making positively the greatest piece of scenic colored photograpy ever made.

At the hotel in Geneva occurs the famous bedroom scene between the wife and the tempter, followed by a series of adventures which finally bring the wife back to her husband and forgiveness, together with an adjustment of their difficulties and a perfect understanding between them.

We may say that The Pathe Company of players seem to have excelled themselves in the production of this film, which has been pronounced by press and public alike as superb.

The film censor at Detroit says, "The Butterfly on the Wheel" is the most beautiful ever produced. The scenes are all handsomely hand colored and were taken in the beautiful surroundings of the Pathe Company in the Swiss Alps.

If you miss this excellent production you will miss one of the finest film subjects that will ever be brought into Tecumseh. The admission to this great feature is only 10c. Doors open at 7:00 with a continuous show.

NEW MODERN DANCING

The leading Expert and Instructor in New York City, writes: "Dear Sir: —I have used ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, for the past ten years. It is a blessing to all who are compelled to be on their feet. I dance eight or ten hours daily, and find that ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE, keeps my feet cool, takes the friction from the shoe prevents corns and sore, aching feet. I recommend it to all my pupils." (Signed) E. Fletcher Hallamore Sample Free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Leroy, N. Y.

What Hisses Sound Like to an Actor.

In the American Magazine David Warfield, giving his stage experiences, tells how terrible it is from the actor's point of view to be hissed:

"I next appeared at the Wigwam, telling stories and giving imitations. I came a terrible cropper, something fearful! I was second in the bill, which is the worst place but one. I shall never forget the anxiety I felt on that occasion as I stood in the wings waiting for my turn to go on. At last I appeared before the footlights. The audience was drifting in, shuffling in in a desultory way. I could not get its attention. It was awful, awful. The few friends I had there applauded me, but the others hissed. It sounded as if 10,000 steam pipes had burst. A hiss to a sensitive man—and all actors are sensitive since all are vain—is like the strike of a rattlesnake. It is so venomous, so cruel, so unnecessary! It is as if you had done the people out in front an injury with malice prepense instead of having sincerely tried to please them. You don't even dare to face your own mother; you're so dreadfully guilty."

METAL PRODUCTION OF CENTRAL STATES

The value of the silver, copper, lead and zinc produced in the Central States in 1913, according to the final figures of J. P. Dunlap, of the United States Geological Survey, was $58,015,927. Of this Missouri and Michigan contributed by far the largest amount, the Missouri production being valued at $29,604,899 and that of Michigan at $21,235,561. These figures show a marked decrease compared to 1912, the total for the Central States in that year being $79,675,814.

Biginning of Villa's Carreer as an Outlaw

At the death of his father, Francisco, or Pancho, was left in charge of the Villa ranch in the state of Chihuahua, and with it assumed the responsibility of his mother and a young sister, the latter a Mexican beauty of coquettish tendencies. Becoming enamored of the country sheriff of the city of Chihuahua, the girl eloped with him. Forgetful of the marriage ceremony the couple fled to the mountains. The enraged Pancho, with an escort of cowboys and a priest, pursued the runaways. Overtaking them he forced matrimony upon the unwilling sheriff then handing him a shovel, commanded his brother in-law to dig a grave. That horrid task completed, Pancho shot down the terrified bridegroom and rolled his body into the pit.

This incident was lurid enough to startle authorities hardened to crime and lawlessness and it was necessary for the murderer effectually to absent himself from the justice that was soon on his trail. With that escape began his life of bandit and marauder. For fifteen years he roamed the Durango and Chihuahua Sierras. Porfirio Dias had bid $20,000 for his head and the inspired rurales tracked him from hiding-place to hiding-place. Villa himself told me much of this period. "I have had forty-eight encounters with the rurales and killed thirty-seven of my enemies," said he. "I was wounded nine times, but never serious."—From "Pancho Villa, Man and Soldier," by N. C. Adossides, in the American Review of Reviews for May.

Studebaker FOUR

The Full Floating Rear Axle with Full Timken Bearings

ELECTRICALLY STARTED $1050 ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED

Why Studebaker Four Sales Are Enormous,

Blunty—because no car on the market reveals equal value.

Because, for instance, no other car in the world at this price has a full floating rear axle equipped even to the hubs with Timken bearings.

Because, this axle could not be made better, no matter how much we were willing to spend, or you were willing to pay.

The same thing is true of Studebaker—Wagner Starting and Lighting—the cars of highest cost may show its equal—but they cannot show its superior.

The same thing is true of the proportion of parts actually manufactured in the parent plant—the costliest cars may make as good a showing, but none of them can show more.

The same thing is true of the accuracy of the processes which enter into the manufacturing—the may be equalled in the costliest cars, they are not surpassed.

We repeat, with added emphasis, the sales of this $1050 Four are enormous because no car now on the market reveals equal value.

UNEARTH GIGANTIC ELECTION SWINDLE

One New York District's Votes Practically All Fraudulent.

New York, May 4.—Evidence of ballot-box stuffing by both Democratic and Republican officers, which was dug up by District Attorney Whitman and his assistant, Wm. A. de Ford, has resulted in the arrest of four election officers of the Sixth election district of the Twelfth assembly district of which Charles F. Murphy is the Tammany leader.

Warrants are out for two more men in connection with the same election district. They are accused of stuffing the ballot box with the aim of making sure a vote in favor of the constitutional convention next year.

In a statement handed out by the district attorney's office it was asserted that the poll books of the Sixth election district of the Twelfth assembly district showed 300 persons voted in favor of the constitutional convention; that the vote in the election district was practically unanimous. Investigation, however, has disclosed that out of the 300 votes cast 270 at least were fraudulent.

The votes, it was explained, were cast by the forging of the voter's name in the signature copy of the poll book and the casting of ballots under names thus forged. One inspector is said to have voted in the Sixth election district between ten and twenty times.

So extensive was the ballot box stuffing in the Sixth district that an inquiry will be made in other assembly districts throughout the city.

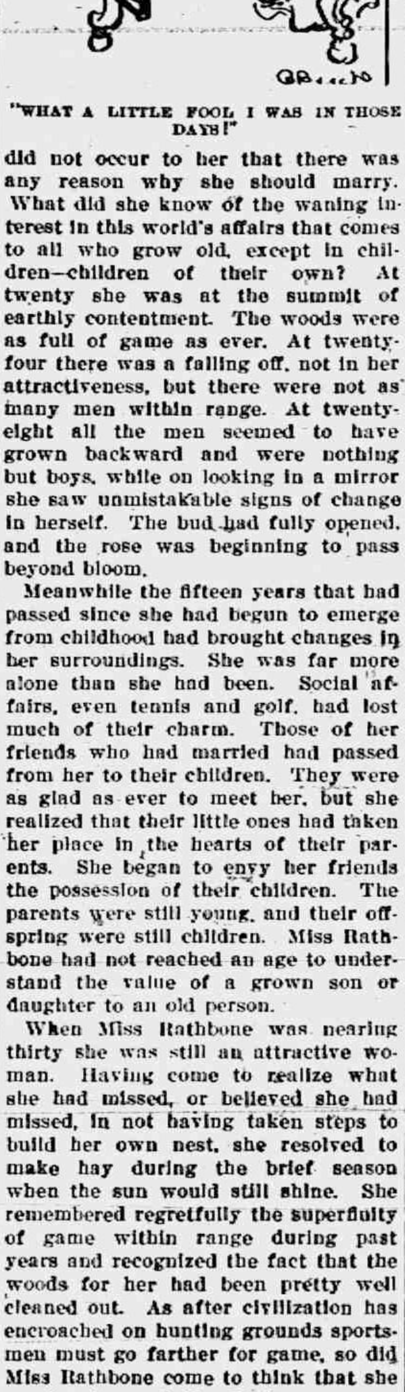
THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

But the Game In Time Grows Scarce There

By F. A. MITCHEL

Miss Leila Rathbone was born a flirt—an unconscious flirt. She didn't know that she was flirting even when she was deliberately drawing some youth into her toils. Nevertheless she was not surprised when she got him there. It did not occur to her that she had anything to do with his being there. All the other fellows got there. Why not he? This commenced when Miss Rathbone was fourteen years old—if not earlier—and lasted till she was double that age. The game was so plentiful that she had no idea that there would ever be a dearth of it.

Miss Rathbone, as I have said, began to bring down youths at a very early age and continued it as long as her heyday lasted, which was about the same duration as that of most girls. She had a comfortable home, and it did not occur to her that there was any reason why she should marry. What did she know of the waning interest in this world's affairs that comes to all who grow old, except in children—children of their own? At twenty she was at the summit of earthly contentment. The woods were as full of game as ever. At twenty-four there was a falling off, not in her attractiveness, but there were not as many men within range. At twenty-eight all the men seemed to have grown backward and were nothing but boys, while on looking in a mirror she saw unmistakable signs of change in herself. The bud had fully opened, and the rose was beginning to pass beyond bloom.



"WHAT A LITTLE FOOL I WAS IN THOSE DAYS!"

Meanwhile the fifteen years that had passed since she had begun to emerge from childhood had brought changes in her surroundings. She was far more alone than she had been. Social affairs, even tennis and golf, had lost much of their charm. Those of her friends who had married had passed from her to their children. They were as glad as ever to meet her, but she realized that their little ones had taken her place in the hearts of their parents. She began to envy her friends the possession of their children. The parents were still young, and their offspring were still children. Miss Rathbone had not reached an age to understand the value of a grown son or daughter to an old person.

When Miss Rathbone was nearing thirty she was still an attractive woman. Having come to realize what she had missed, or believed she had missed, in not having taken steps to build her own nest, she resolved to make hay during the brief season when the sun would still shine. She remembered regretfully the superfluity of game within range during past years and recognized the fact that the woods for her had been pretty well cleaned out. As after civilization has encroached on hunting grounds sportsmen must go farther for game, so did Miss Rathbone come to think that she must seek new fields. Spring was coming on, and she thought of summer resorts. But she knew that the only game to be found at such places are old men and boys. She had discovered that she had passed the age when a college student had ceased to be something for her to look up to.

Travel next suggested itself to her. When a young girl she had been more nearly caught in her own traps while touring in Europe than at any other time. She had found sightseeing in company with young men an admirable field for her flirtations. And as for an ocean voyage, after the wearing off of mal de mer, there seemed to be something about salt water to induce love. Miss Rathbone decided to join the hegira of those sailing for foreign ports the next season.

Miss Rathbone joined a party of her acquaintances who were going to make a three months' tour of Europe. How changed were her circumstances from that Miss Rathbone who had often had difficulty in staving off the importunities of several young men, each of whom was bent on receiving an answer to a proposal! Could it be possible that she was going abroad for the purpose of bringing down some bachelor who, having arrived at middle age, had lost much of that spirit which impels a man to tumble head over heels in love on the slightest provocation? But Miss Rathbone remembered that while the older man is not aggressive he is vulnerable.

During her trip abroad Miss Rathbone met bachelors, but found them confirmed celibates. They seemed to her like wild horses that had never been broken to a bit or a saddle. Their own comfort, their independence, were their gods. As for giving up any of their privileges, they had no such idea whatever. They were like the crow, which, utterly worthless for game, keeps carefully out of the huntsman's range.

During a sojourn at Lake Como Miss Rathbone fell in with a widower, Edwin Dudley, who was not much her senior and whose descent into the Avernus of bachelorhood had been averted by marriage. He had placed his only child, a boy, at school in Geneva and was taking a holiday in northern Italy, where at the time the climate was neither too hot nor too cold.

Mr. Dudley was staying at the same hotel as Miss Rathbone and first saw her one morning at breakfast on the stone balcony against which dashed the waters of the lake. The situation was propitious. Directly opposite rose a high mountain, looming up between the lake and the blue sky. To the right and to the left were cliffs and battlements innumerable, some near at hand, some mellowed by distance, some a velvet green, some brown, some red. Miss Rathbone felt a moiety of that spirit of the beautiful that she had experienced in her younger days. As for Mr. Dudley, he looked at her with manifest interest.

Americans abroad are very like a circle of intimate acquaintances at home, with this difference—at home they are hedged about by innumerable conventionalities; abroad they have much of the bonhomie of the old stagecoach days. Mr. Dudley had no difficulty in securing an introduction to Miss Rathbone, and he had scarcely done so when he invited her to go out on the lake with him in one of those rowboats pulled by lusty Italians the stern seats of which are supplied with cushions and canopies.

During this boat ride Mr. Dudley, perhaps following that disposition of Americans abroad to feel on short acquaintance as if they had known each other for years, developed a familiarity which would be accorded only to an old acquaintance. He rallied the lady on not having mated, declaring that it must certainly have been her own fault and wondering why she should prefer maidenhood to matrimony.

To this she replied evasively, but with becoming modesty, throwing the blame on the men. Mr. Dudley treated this for what it was worth, saying that he did not not doubt if some wizard could by incantation gather together the men she had refused they would prove to be more numerous than fish in the lake on which they were riding. To this Miss Rathbone smilingly demurred and declared that she had never had an offer.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Do you suppose that I am stupid enough to believe that a woman of your attractive personality has never received a proposal? I have no doubt that you have received hundreds of them."

"Well, how are you going to prove your assertion? A man refused by a woman will not tell about it."

"There is only one who will do that," said Dudley after some moments of silence. "A man who has once been refused and afterward accepted would be proud of his final success and would not be averse to letting it be known."

"I don't see how that helps the matter so long as I remain as I am."

"Right you are," replied the other. "Nevertheless you may some day yield to one of your old flames. If you marry I shall ask your husband if he was not refused by you before his final acceptance."

"You are quite welcome to do that," replied Miss Rathbone, "but it seems to me rather improbable that you should have the opportunity since the companions of my youth who are living are married."

"So be it, but take care lest I prove my assertion."

In extreme youth the sexes mate, they know not why. In later life they know very well why. They feel the need of companionship and a home. A man cannot make a home without a woman, and an old maid's home is at best cheerless. Mr. Dudley was looking for a wife just as eagerly as Miss Rathbone was looking for a husband. He proposed to her, and she accepted him.

"And now," he said, "I can prove to you that you maligned the men when you said that it was their fault that you had not married. I have found a man who is willing to admit that he has been refused by you."

"Indeed!" said the lady, surprised. "And who may that be?"

"Myself."

Miss Rathbone's eyes opened very wide.

"Don't you remember a scene on the terrace at B. when a boy of twenty told a lass of eighteen that he loved her."

"Are you Ned Dudley?"

"I am."

There was a silence, at the end of which Miss Rathbone said:

"What a little fool I was in those days!"

"A fool to refuse me?"

"Yes; you and a legion of others."

NOBODY BUT RANDALLS IN IT

Two Grooms, Two Brides and Minister with Same Names.

St. Johns, Mich., May 4.—The Randall brothers married the Randall sisters at a double wedding in Greenbush township and the name of the officiating clergyman was Randall.

Otherwise the Randalls had almost nothing to do with it. John C. Randall married Miss Ella Randall, of Duplain, his fourth cousin, and Benjamin H. Randall, of Bingham township, married Miss Effie Randall, of Greenbush. The man who tied the double knot is Rev. Dr. Randall, of Duplain, who is not related to any of the contracting parties. The wedding took place at the home of Nelson Guernsey, a cousin of the grooms.

SON KILLS FATHER

Chester Duryea Fires Seven Shots Into Father's Body.

YOUNGER MAN THOUGHT INSANE

Calmly Awaits Arrest After Emptying Magazine Pistol and Rifle—Older Man Was 81 Years Old and Head of National Starch Co.—Find Evidence of Hard Struggle.

NEW YORK. — Hiram Duryea, aged and wealthy head of a great starch manufacturing family, was shot seven times and killed early in the morning by his son, Chester, in their home at 120 Eighty-fifth street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Duryea, who was 81 years old, and his son, a lawyer, occupied the same large sleeping porch, at the rear of the second floor. It was there the tragedy occurred.

The younger Duryea, who is about forty-two years old, has figured in sensational publicity a number of times. In 1902 his wife, Mrs. Nina Larre Smith Duryea, brought suit for divorce, charging cruelty, drunkenness and infidelity. She had been a noted beau: in Maryland before her marriage and the suit attracted wide attention. Mrs. Duryea won and secured the custody of her child.

Servants were awakened by the shots. One girl was running down the stairs from the servants' quarters on the third floor when she was startled by hearing other shots. Fearing to go farther, she ran back, opentd a window, and screamed. This aroused the neighbors.

Find and Question Son.

When the shooting ceased neighbors ventured into the house, and, turning on the lights, soon found Chester Duryta with a rifle in his hands and apparently waiting to be arrested.

"What's happened?" demanded one neighbor.

"I've just killed my father," the son replied, calmly.

"Where is he?"

"He's in his bed, out there on the porch."

Find Evidenct of Struggle.

Several men passed the son to reach the porch and as they snapped on the electric light they found the aged man dead on the floor.

Apparently Mr. Duryea had retired, for he was in his pajamas. There were signs of a struggle. A table that supported a reading lamp had been knocked over and the lamp broken. Books were scattered about the place, and screens which had been intended to shield the occupants from the gaze of persons in other houses were broken and twisted.

Son Is Arrested.

The first policeman who arrived arrested Chester and took the rifle away from him.

"Did you shoot your father with this rifle?" asked the policeman.

"Yes," was the reply, "but not until I had used all the shots in my magazine pistol."

Then the son went to the porch, where his father's body lay, stepped over it and reached under the bed, producing a heavy magazine pistol, whose eight cartridges had been discharged.

"I guess I shot him a dozen times," said Chester as he was being led away.

When he was locked up Dr. Gardiner of the staff of the Norwegian hospital in Brooklyn was summoned. After an examination he gave it as his opinion that the slayer is insane.

Hiram Duryea was president of the National Starch company, which is said to control the principal starch manufactories of the country. He and his brother were the founders of the starch industry of this country years ago and out of it have grown many vast fortunes.

KILL TROOPS WHO SHOOT GIRL

Yankee Marines Apply Fugitive Law and None Escapes.

NEW ORLEANS. — First Mate Hullerman of the steamer City of Mexico says American marines applied the Mexican fugitive law to five or six Mexican soldiers at Vera Cruz who had shot an American girl on her way to their pier, killing every one of the Mexicans. Hullerman says the Mexicans fired from a house, into which the marines who formed the girl's escort charged and dragged out the soldiers.

"The marines turned them loose," he said, "and told them to run. When the Mexicans dashed down tht street the marines opened fire and every one of the Mexicans dropped."

STORM KILLS TWO IN IOWA

John Mader was fishing on the Mississippi river when the storm broke. His boat was swamped and he was drowned in attempting to reach shore.

FUNSTON ASKS AID

General's Force Inadequate to Meet Threatening Situation.

FEAR ZAPATA'S MOVE A RUSE

Officials Consider Possibility That Mexican Rebels May Link Forces With Maas for Combined Action U. S. Troops—Federals Number 13,000 and Yankees 7,000.

WASHINGTON. — Instructions to militia organization throughout the country governing a possible mobilization of the national guard were mailed to all militia officers by the war deparement during the day. The instructions cover particularly the financial operations incident to mobilization and the methods of securing railroad transportation. Under the regulations the local United States disbursing officers throughout the country would be supplied with funds to move the militia by the various department quartermasters.

Vera Curz, May 6.—Brigadier General Frederick Funston's troops moved out from the outposts early in the day and aeroplanes from the fleet scouted the hills for the first sight of Huerta's picked soldiers and his biggest guns, sent here from Mexico City.

General Funston has asked the war department for more troops to meet the emergency.

Meanwhile General Funston and officers of the fleet held a war council. It is understood that the ability of the present force to handle the situation in view of the latest reports of the strength of the federals, was considered. The federals number 13,000 while the United States troops total only 7,000. Also the possibility that Zapata's threatened attack on the capital is a ruse and his 10,000 followers really will march on this city was not lost sight of by officials.

Brigadier General Funston, after receiving information that federal troops were moving artillery down the railroad from the capital toward Vera Cruz, probably for General Gustavo Maas at Soledad, conferred with the officers of the fleet. It was arranged to land a number of field pieces from the warships and park them on the customs wharf where they would be readily available in case of need.

STATE NEARLY SHY CHECK OF $355,000

Registered Letter with Telephone Tax Misdirected.

LANSING, MICH. — Michigan almost lost a check for $335,000. It was from the Michigan State Telephone company in payment of its taxes for the year, and it came so close to going astray that a few of the men in the state treasurer's office were almost speechless. Evidently the telephone officials in Chicago do not keep very well posted on affairs in Michigan, as they think that Albert E. Sleeper is still state treasurer. They made out the check to his order, put it into a registered letter addressed to him and let it go.

The result was an awful battle with postoffice authorities here to get the letter.

SURGERY FOR CRIME PROVES SURE CURE

Youth Who Was Operated on Joins Good Indians.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH. — Clarence Chappell, an eighteen-year-old local youth whose regeneration had been attempted by judicial and surgical experts, is dead.

His body was brought back from Evanston, Ill., where he underwent an operation for intestinal obstruction. Several months ago Chappell came before Circuit Judge Bridgman. He had been a juvenile delinquent, and had become a police character. He was selected as the subject for a crime cure experiment and was sent to Evanston where Dr. E. P. Pratt, a well-known surgeon, operated on him.

Some weeks later Chappell returned. He apparently had undergone a marked physical change and he told the court he felt like "a new man." For several weeks his conduct was beyond criticism and then he began to display his old criminal tendencies. Two weeks ago he was again sent to Evanston to be placed on a farm where Dr. Pratt might study him.

He developed intestinal trouble and underwent two operations. He died following the second one. Judge Bridgman states that Chappell's later operations were not for the purpose of correcting his moral delinquencies.

FRANKFORT, MICH. — A. C. Willard, for twenty-four years bookkeeper for the Empire Lumber company, Empire, killed himself at the Hotel Yeasel, Frankfort. He retired at 8:30 in the evening leaving a call for 6:30. When the clerk entered the room he found Willard dead with a bullet in his right temple.

TECUMSEH DEFEATED IN SHORT GAME BY BLISSFIELD

Score 10 To 1

The local High School boys journeyed to Blissfield Wednesday p. m. and received a sound beating Our boys couldn't hit the ball getting only three hits in five innings. The one run they did get was a gift of Blissfield's third baseman who missed an easy one. The team was weakened through the absence of Pitcher Bachman. Holdridge did mound duty and was hit hard.

The locals opened the game in a fast way. Orr fanned out, Blessing hit safely and stole second and went to third on Satterthwaite's hit but was out at home when he tried to get home on a short passed ball, the next man fanned out.

In the second inning came our only run Schneider singled, Babcock sacrificed and when Schneider started to steal third the third baseman let it go by him, letting in our only run.

Blissfield scored in every inning in the first three innings they scored two in each getting all six scores after two were out. The following is the summary:

						R	H	E
Blissfield	2	2	2	3	1	10	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tecumseh	0	1	0	0	0	1	3	[illegible]

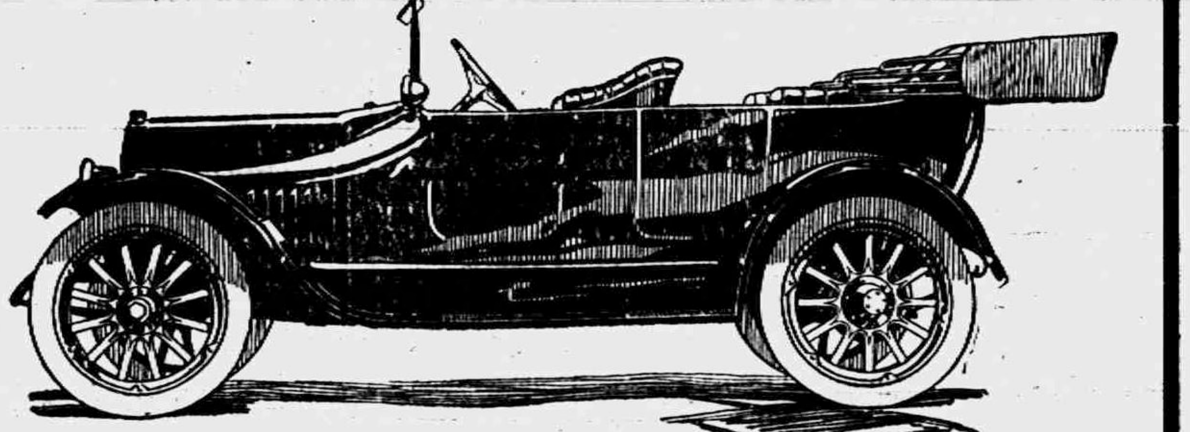
Studebaker FOUR

The Full Floating Rear Axle with Full Timken Bearings



ELECTRICALLY STARTED $1050 ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED

Why Studebaker Four Sales Are Enormous,

Bluntly—because no car on the market reveals equal value.

Because, for instance, no other car in the world at this price has a full floating rear axle equipped even to the hubs with Timken bearings.

Because, this axle could not be made better, no matter how much we were willing to spend, or you were willing to pay.

The same thing is true of Studebaker—Wagner Starting and Lighting—the cars of highest cost may show its equal—but they cannot show its superior.

The same thing is true of the proportion of parts actually manufactured in the parent plant—the costliest cars may make as good a showing, but none of them can show more.

The same thing is true of the accuracy of the processes which enter into the manufacturing—the may be equalled in the costliest cars, they are not surpassed.

We repeat, with added emphasis, the sales of this $1050 Four are enormous because no car now on the market reveals equal value.

Buy a car in Tecumseh and insure yourself with good service.

Gale Two-Wheel Sulky Plow

We have not said much about this plow, because we have not had a chance to try it. Last week however we tried out a few, and the way the farmers are bragging, guess they are all that is claimed. There is no use telling you, you will have to look one over and try it to really appreciate it.

There is one fact NOT to overlook, we have trouble in getting them, so don't delay too long.

CLEAN-UP DAY IS FIRE PREVENTION DAY

The spring Clean Up Day that is deemed so important by the fire marshal bureaus of all the states, as well as by the various fire prevention associations of the country, has this year been recognized by an unusually forceful proclamation by the governor of Michigan, setting aside May 15th as the day of observance and the fire marshal's bureau of this state urges with great earnestness, that the day may be so rigidly observed as to result in an effective Fire Prevention Day. It is especially desired that the fire chiefs of the state and the township and village officials, who are charged by the law with the duty of co-operating with this bureau keep the importance of the day constantly before the people.

Fire prevention is an outgrowth of cleanliness and sanitation. When we place our homes, factories and business houses in a better sanitary condition, we are taking an important step toward fire prevention and if the time shall ever come when the ideas involved in the governor's proclamation are supported in letter and in spirit throughout the year, we shall have wiped from the current history of the nation, the dark page that tells of lives and property sacrificed to the greed, the carelessness and the ignorance of the people.

The annual fire loss of the United States is $2.50 per capita, and the annual fire loss of Western Europe is 33 cents per capita Certainly these figures are impressive and aught to carry a lesson.

JOHN T. WINSHIP.
Commissioner of Insurance.
Ex-Officio, State Fire Marshal.

90 YEARS

Ninety years when one is starting out on the journey of life seems a long time, but when one has reached that age he looks back and wonders where the years have flown. On Tuesday May 5. Horatio Keysor rounded out his ninetieth year and his mind is as clear, and his step as spry as they were ten years ago

Seventy-seven of these years have been spent in Tecumseh and vicinity, and he tells how when he first came to Tecumseh, the most of the business was carried on in what is known as Brownville there being a large hotel, the Peninsula house, three stores carrying drygoods and groceries and a flouring mill. He has witnessed a world of changes in these years and can tell many a story of life in Tecumseh.

Just so long as he can enjoy life and the company of his friends, just so long may his life be spared and when the scenes of life begin to pall upon his senses, may he be called home, to the other side

I TOOK PE-RU-NA

Was Able to Sleep and Eat Again

Mrs. Mueller says: "I keep Peruna in the house constantly. When I am not feeling well I take a few doses. It always restores."

MRS. M. MUELLER, P. O. Box 321, Hawley, Wayne Co., Penn.

Mrs. Mueller's story of her experience with Peruna fully explains why she always keeps Peruna on hand. A few years ago she was very sick. The trouble seemed to be the stomach and liver. She suffered great pain. Was unable to get anything to help her. She was growing weaker and weaker. She became tired of life.

Somebody suggested that she write to the Peruna Co. She did so. Through their advice she began to use Peruna. In a letter from her at this time she says: "Through the use of Peruna I have regained my health. I took only a bottle and a half when I was able to sleep and eat again and my nervousness disappeared." No wonder Mrs. Mueller keeps Peruna in the house. Under similar circumstances Peruna would be in every house in the land.

Any one taking Peruna ought to have a free copy of the "Ills of Life." Address Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio. People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

His Race For Life

A Story of the Sahara Desert

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Paul Dunlap halted his racing camel and turned around to glimpse his pursuers.

Far behind, there among the sand dunes of the Algerian desert, were little black dots winding in and out among the dunes, now rising to view and again melting from sight behind some protecting hillock of sand.

Paul spoke sharply to his beast, and the camel shook his homely head, gay with trappings of red leather and silver, and without apparent exertion rocked forward at a most amazing rate of speed.

Mile after mile vanished under those broad hoofs, and each time that Paul turned around his pursuers still held the same distance. Although some of them were mounted on fleet Arabian horses, not one had apparently gained an inch of the race.

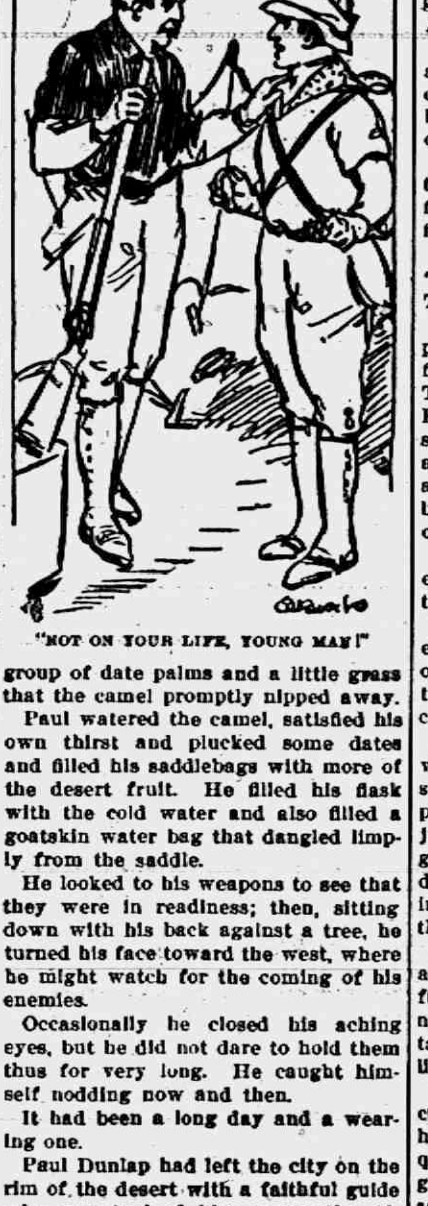
It was late afternoon when Paul sighted the blue blur that marked the Oasis el Dur. At first he thought it was a mirage, but at last he was convinced that indeed he was approaching cool shade, food and water. He was weary with twenty hours of hard riding, he had not eaten since early morning, and only occasionally had he swallowed water from his flask.

Water was very precious, and he must make it last.

Now with the oasis in sight he could drain the flask and satisfy his thirst to a degree.

A last glance over his shoulder showed him that his enemies had given up the pursuit for the moment. Evidently they were making camp so that they might rest and eat and thus be ready to continue the chase after the full moon had risen to flood the desert with light.

The oasis was a small one, but it possessed a good well of water, a group of date palms and a little grass that the camel promptly nipped away.



"NOT ON YOUR LIFE, YOUNG MAN!"

Paul watered the camel, satisfied his own thirst and plucked some dates and filled his saddlebags with more of the desert fruit. He filled his flask with the cold water and also filled a goatskin water bag that dangled limply from the saddle.

He looked to his weapons to see that they were in readiness; then, sitting down with his back against a tree, he turned his face toward the west, where he might watch for the coming of his enemies.

Occasionally he closed his aching eyes, but he did not dare to hold them thus for very long. He caught himself nodding now and then.

It had been a long day and a wearing one.

Paul Dunlap had left the city on the rim of the desert with a faithful guide who was to lead him across the Algerian desert to Murzuk. Ali Mora had been highly recommended by the hotel where the American was stopping, and Paul had been attracted by the alert, bright eyed young man.

On the third day out, when the desert city was far behind, Ali Mora had suddenly sickened. Whether it was some organic trouble or whether it was a malady induced by a trial of some of Paul's tinned provisions the American could not find out. All he knew was that Ali Mora had developed a high fever and suffered much pain.

Paul had searched his "first aid" case for remedies and had applied such as he deemed would help the stricken man. But all to no purpose.

Just at sunset the night before Ali Mora had turned his face toward Mecca and died, and at that very moment a large band of Bedouin Arabs came flashing up on their unshod horses.

Their leader, a fierce eyed sheik of commanding presence, demanded the reason of the guide's death, and when Paul had endeavored to explain in halting Arabic they had cut him short and pronounced death against him.

So he sat down and leaned against the recumbent form of his camel while the Bedouins made preparations to take him to their encampment.

Ali Mora's death had got him into trouble. This roving band of Arabs had seized the opportunity to rob him, and if he escaped with his life he would be lucky.

Well, he had managed to escape from them as they journeyed toward their encampment. Just as the black shadows of their tents came into view Paul had maneuvered his camel around a sand hillock and was a mile away before his flight was discovered.

If he could circle around to the north and then return to his starting place, the city of Ghourd-Aghrad, he was positive that with another guide, perhaps a little body guard, he could successfully accomplish his projected trip across the desert.

In fact, he must accomplish it. He had made an arrangement to sell the photographs, together with an account of his journey across the desert, to a prominent American magazine, and he could not afford to lose the money. He had promised to deliver the first batch of photographs on the 1st of March, and now it was the 1st of January, and all his labor had been for naught.

When the moon was high Paul mounted his camel and rode toward the north. He had no doubt that he would run across his enemies sooner or later; indeed, if they had not believed him to be worn out by the day's race they would undoubtedly be sneaking around the oasis now, but they were sure of him. Foreigners had not the endurance of the desert people. So the Bedouins believed.

Paul had a good start while the moon was high; the racing camel was true to his name, and his long strides eliminated distances in an incredible manner.

Mile after mile the sand flew from under the hoofs of the strangely swaying beast, and at sunrise, just at the very moment when Paul was congratulating himself that he had outdistanced and outmaneuvered his enemies, he saw a black figure silhouetted against the pale desert.

It was a motionless horseman guarding a little group of white tents pitched in a hollow among the sand hillocks.

The horseman turned and shrilled a challenge at Paul, and by the time the young American had halted his camel he was almost upon the white tents.

The sentry was an Arabian, intelligent looking and with a smattering of the English language.

Paul explained his dilemma, and ere he had completed his explanation the Arab shouted wildly and pointed off to the southwest.

Plainly visible in the early sunlight was a scattering company of horsemen.

"Yours is a peaceful camp," said Paul hastily. "I will ride away and they will not disturb you; I"—

He stopped short, for the white tents had given up their occupants—a dozen men dressed in hastily donned khaki and all carrying weapons, modern repeating rifles that made the ancient flintlocks of the attacking Arabs look like foolish toys.

"What's the matter?" demanded a grizzled haired veteran, addressing the Arab sentinel.

Paul Dunlap broke in and explained and expressed his intention of riding on and thus luring the approaching bandits away from the peaceful encampment in the hollow.

"Not on your life, young man!" cried the grizzled man. "You'll stay and fight, and we'll see you through to a finish!"

"Thank you," said Paul quickly. "Now, sir, I think we must be fighting. They are almost upon us."

In a few moments ammunition was passed around and the men were all flat on the sand, each behind a hillock. The rifles cracked menacingly as the Bedouins came flying up, screeching a savage warcry. With each rifle crack an Arab tumbled from his saddle until at last the scattering remnants of the band dissolved in the shimmering heat of the day.

The unharmed Americans looked at each other and grinned congratulations over the success of their defense.

"And now, sir," asked Paul of the elderly man who appeared in charge of the party, "will you please tell me to whom I am indebted for this rescue?"

"My name is Chester," explained the veteran—"Wayland Chester, at your service. I am manager of a moving picture company, and you, sir, have just afforded us an opportunity for getting as fine a reel of film as I can desire. Why, man, that attack was immense, and I don't know how to thank you."

The amazed traveler looked closely and saw that two camera men were fussing over moving picture machines near by. From different points of vantage they had taken both sides of the little skirmish.

The white tents gave up further occupants, many pretty actresses, who had witnessed the battle from safe quarters, and one and all of them gave a warm welcome to the young adventurer.

That moment was the turning point in Paul Dunlap's career. He joined the moving picture company in its journey across the desert, and his special magazine article was expanded into several that had to do with the fascinating art of motion picture making.

Some day when you are watching the motion picture screen you may come across the scene of that early morning skirmish in the Algerian desert or you may see a handsome youth riding a fleet camel across the sands to rescue a lovely damsel in distress, and the handsome hero will be none other than Paul Dunlap, and the girl is his wife, for he married the prettiest actress of them all.

I. W. W. RIOT IN JOHN D.'S CHURCH

Bouck White Starts Trouble by Interrupting Services.

DISTURBERS ARE HUSTLED OUT

Leader Attempts to Enter Pulpit After Opening Prayer—Seized and Carried Squirming Out—Some of Socialists Roughly Handled — Tannenbaum's Aid Is Beaten Up.

New York, May 11.—A dozen Socialists headed by Bouck White, head of the Church of the Social Revolution, were beaten and thrown out of Calvary Baptist church, which John D. Rockefeller attends, when White tried to speak at the morning services.

Ushers seized and dragged White up the aisle while he clawed at every pew and pillar and braced his feet to hold back. The whole congregation was on its feet and cried of "Let him talk," "Shame, shame," "Put him out; this is the house of God," re-echoed all over the church.

White and eleven others were arrested, charged with disorderly conduct and interfering with a religious service and locked up at the West Forty-seventh street station. The Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, the pastor, who had stood silent in the pulpit throughout the riot, went on with his sermon as soon as the rumpus had been transferred to the sidewalk.

Rockefellers Not There.

Neither John D. Rockefeller nor his son was at the service. All the first half of the service went smoothly. Dr. Wolefkin made a long prayer and was just about to sit down while an offertory was played, when White got up from his rear seat and started down the aisle.

George N. Sage, an usher, followed him at once and told him he must sit down. White sat down only a few seats nearer the pulpit. A minute later White got up again and started toward the pulpit. Sage went toward him and took his sleeve. White said:

"Take your hands off me."

Sage did, and the Socialist preacher went to the fourth row and sat down alone, rising immediately to say in a voice audible all over the church:

"I have come here, doctor, as I said"—he was addressing Dr. Woelfkin—"and if you will let me speak, I can say a word of truth. I am the pastor of a neighboring church and can speak a word of truth to the people of this church."

Dr. Woelfkin earnestly replied:

"No, no; this is neither the time nor the place. You are interrupting our service."

"I am aware," White began, but got no further. Sage and several ushers and detetectives sprang upon him and started to pull him toward the door.

Immediatetly every one stood up. Several women screamed. Within a few minutes despite his struggle White was out on the sidewalk.

The detectives swarming from across the street hurried him to the corner. A woman followed. She was Mrs. Katy Batchelder, a member of White's church.

Storm Breaks Again.

More police were arriving. After White ejection and the silencing of his friends, most of whom were ready to leave the church when he did, there was a lull.

But not until Milo H. Woolman, a lieutenant of Frank Tannenbaum, had been pitched into the gutter.

Woolman and his wife had been seated in the center of the church When White was being dragged up the aisle Woolman rose to shout a protest. Six men grabbed him. He was lifted and carried up the aisle to the church doors his wife following. There the six men gave Woolman one good swing. His nose struck first and he skidded several feet on his face. Mrs. Woolman stood on the side walk and wouldn't move. So she was arrested too.

White in Sorry Plight.

The sight of White after being ejected, half naked and surrounded by police, was too much for the nerves of Lopez and Harry Ephraim, followers of White. They ran back to the front of the church shouting:

"You are all murderers. You murdered the men in Colorado. This is what they did to Christ!"

Two girls in their teens, members of the church, Gladys Davis and Myrtle Van Horna had run out in the riot. What Lopez and Ephraim said angered them.

"We're not murderers," cried Gladys Davis jumping in front of the two men. "This is the house of God."

Lopez shrieked:

"This is the house of Hell."

Arthur Anderberg of Brooklyn put his hands on Lopez's shoulders and shoved him back toward the curb. Then a half dozen men closed in on the Portuguese and beat him most brutally. Ephraim tried to help his companion and was pretty badly beaten too. A minute later Lopez was leaning against the church with blood running to the door sill. Some one asked him his name.

"Go ask those murdered in Colorado for their names," he muttered.

NATION HONORS VERA CRUZ DEAD

President Wilson Delivers Impressive Address.

SERVICES HELD AT NAVY YARD

Several Hundred Thousand Witness in Silence Procession from Battery to Navy Yard—Chief Magistrate Waives Salute—Montana Arrives on Sunday— New York in Mourning.

New York, May 11.—The nation's dead, the seventeen bluejackets and marines, killed at the occupation of Vera Cruz, arrived at Sandy Hook Sunday on the funeral ship, the U. S. S. Montana. At the prescribed clip of twelve knots the U. S. S. Wyoming led the way. The Montana came along ten ship lengths away. The regulation distance also separated the president's private yacht, flying the flag of the secretary of the navy. At Fort Hamilton great crowds in automobiles and afoot lined the shore road.

The caskets were laid out in rows of four on the boat deck just about the bridge on the port side. The bluejacket guard of honor stood at attention during the passage through the lower bay.

As the Montana came to anchor in midstream of Communipaw, with her head against the fast-running tide, two launches dropped from her side to the water and immediately began patrolling to ward off any visitors.

Just as the Mayflower swung around into her anchorage position the Spray, the commandant's barge from the Brooklyn navy yard, put off from the Battery. She carried Captain Albert Gleaves, the commandant, and Colonel R. A. C. Smith, commissioner of docks and ferries, the latter representing Mayor Mitchell and the citizens' committee of 200. They made their way immediately to the Mayflower to pay their official call upon the secretary of the navy.

Following a procession from the battery this morning, memorial services were held at the navy ward, at which President Wilson delivered the address. The procession was viewed by 500,000 persons.

President Makes Address.

President Wilson arrived in the city at 7:55 o'clock this morning and attended the funeral services in the navy yard. He came in over the Pennsylvania and went to breakfast at the home of Colonel Edward M. House in East Thirty-fifth street. He remained there until shortly before eleven o'clock when he went direct to the navy yard.

The president was entertained at luncheon in the yard by Captain Gleaves, the commandant who also had Secretary Daniels as his guest.

The presidential party returned to Washington on the Congressional limited, leaving here at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The president directed that the customary president's salute be given in honor of the dead and no salute be given him. The president also made it understood that the services were memorial and not funeral. The funeral services were held at Vera Cruz and other services will be held at the homes of the dead.

The memorial services were attended by state and city officials, Secretary Daniels and many notables and were impressive. The entire city was in mourning and flags were half-masted everywhere.

REBELS FIGHTING IN ALL NORTH MEXICO

Saltillo Mazatlan and San Luis Potosi Are Attacked.

Chihuahua, Mex., May 11.—Rebels have begun general assaults upon all federal strongholds in northern Mexico including the cities of Saltillo and San Luis Potosi, and the port of Mazatlan. Orders were issued by General Villa for the Saltillo and San Luis Potosi attacks following a conference during which the rebel leaders discussed the campaign and agreed that it is now necessary for the rebels to close in on Huerta's forces at every possible point and hasten recognition of the constitutionalist cause in order to accomplish the lifting of the embargo on ammunition.

With 20,000 men, led by Manuel Chao, the deposed governor of Chihuahua, the Saltillo attack became general. Chao's command consists of 2 000 cavalrymen, the most desperate in the rebel army and to them has been given the honor of being first in the fight.

San Luis Potosi was again attacked by 8,000 rebels under General Torres. Te has the city practically surrounded, according to official advices. Villa ordered Torres to begin the assault as a part of the general campaign of the rebels.

A resumption of the rebel land attack upon Mazatlan also was ordered by Villa and the city was being bombarded with twenty connon according to dispatches received by rebel officials here.

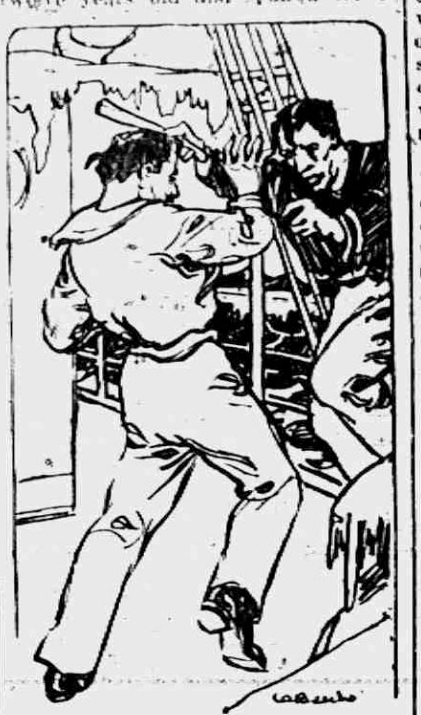
A Sailor's Yarn

It Was Spun in the Time When the Wind Was the Motive Power of Ships

By EDWIN CORWIN

One moonlight evening when the brigantine Osceola was moving before a light breeze with all her canvas set a number of her seamen were lolling on the forecastle spinning yarns. One of them, Tom Hawkins, was very long, very freckled, and his red hair was twisted into a dozen or more short corkscrew curls. In his ears were little gold wire rings. He was a great favorite with his mates, and among his many accomplishments was spinning yarns. Had he stuck closely to the truth his stories would not have been as diverting as they were. Their charm was in the fact that his audience never could tell where Tom left the river of truth and sailed out on the ocean of fabrication. On this moonlight evening the party called on him for a yarn, and he gave one, as follows:

"I've been to sea ever since I was twelve years old and spun a lot o' yarns, but there's one yarn I've never spun to any one. The reason is that when I was a younker not over eighteen I got into trouble, and the yarn's about that. I was sailin' with mates that was my friends, just as you be now. They helped me out o' the scrape, and if any o' 'em had ever met me again I could rely on their not givin' me away. If I spin you the yarn any one o' you could make it hot for me."



"I BROUGHT THE BAR DOWN ON THE THIRD OFFICER'S HEAD."

"Go on, Tom. If any man peaches on you we'll keelhaul him."

"I know every one o' you, and there isn't in the lot a man mean enough to give me away, just as there wasn't a man o' my mates I was speakin' about that would do so, neither. But I didn't never meet any o' 'em ag'in. So it didn't make any difference. I ain't agoin' to say what ship this yere happenin' was on, nor what port she was bound for, nor the name o' the master, nor any of the officers. They was all fine men except the third officer. I ain't a-goin' to tell you his name, neither, and it won't be long before you'll learn the reason why."

Tom stopped, looked very solemn and said he reckoned, after all he'd better not go any further. This was met with a storm of protests, and after much persuasion he continued:

"The third officer was a tyrant, and every man jack o' us hated him. It seemed as if the devil had got into him and he couldn't get him out. He'd send a man aloft when the wind was blowin' a hurricane to make taut a loose rope that wasn't doin' any harm, and there was nine chances in ten that the man would be blowed overboard. He'd order a man out on to the end o' the bowsprit when the ship was dippin' her nose in the waves, and the man was sure to be washed off.

"One cold day when the fo'castle was a glare o' ice and we was takin' a sea every time we dipped, a capstan bar some one had left layin' on the deck was floatin' about in the water that come aboard. The third officer ordered me to go out and git it. You might as well expect a man to jump overboard at once as to try to walk on an ice plain heavin' and rollin' like that. If it hadn't been for showin' a want o' pluck I would 'a' disobeyed and stood a charge o' mutiny. As it was, I went out over the long, sharp fo'castle to the capstan, picked up the bar and started back. She rolled just then, and I went down, slidin' agin the bulwarks and along 'em till I got where I could ketch on to a hatch. There I clung, the blood from a crack I'd got in the forehead runnin' down on my eyes.

"Unfortunate for me, I had kept my hold on the bar. I was so mad that I didn't know what I was doin'. The third officer yelled at me to git up and not lie there doin' nothin'. I did git up, and I brought the bar down on the third officer's head. He dropped, and that was the last time he ever gave an order."

Tom paused in his narrative, and the audience, awed by an act of mutiny sure to be punished by death, remained silent. Tom resumed:

"The night after the killin' I was in the brig. Durin' the midwatch the sailmaker comes to me and says, says he: 'Tom, you'll have to swing for this, sure. Your mates have talked over in the fo'castle ways to save you, but they don't see how they kin do it without another mutiny, implicatin' the hull lot o' 'em.' Says I, 'They mustn't do that on any account.' Says he: 'There's just one chance for you. I'm ordered to sew up the body o' the third officer in canvas. Reckon I kin sew you up instead and heave the mate overboard.

"'The funeral is to come off at four bells in the mornin', and they'll slide you instead o' the dead man. I kin git you a tin can o' grub, a bottle o' water, a life preserver, a knife to cut yourself loose with and anything else you'll need.'

"'Death by drownin' is preferable to death at the yardarm any time, and mebbe I'll git picked up. You kin fix it your way.'

"The sailmaker went away and told my mates that I was agreed to the plan. They was all ready to help. One got the grub ready, another the water, and so on. The bo'sun had the key to the brig, and he let me out. It was just before dawn that the body o' the third officer was buried without any ceremony at all, and I was sewed up ready to be buried out o' the prayer book. I clutched tight a sharp knife with which to cut myself out o' the sack and to get rid of the shot tied to my ankles. The other things was tied on to me. What bothered me most was lyin' still on my back from just before dawn till four bells in the mornin'. And the prospect even after that wasn't invitin'.

"After eight bells I counted every bell till four, and it seemed an hour between 'em. When four was struck I heard a trampin' above, and I was carried on deck. Then I listened to the cap'n readin' the burial service.

"It didn't sound no way pleasin'. If I had only expected a divin' exploit it wouldn't 'a' mattered, but I expected a drownin', or, worse'n that, a starvin'. The only thing in my favor was that we was in the gulf stream and the water was warm, besides bein' summer time.

"Well, when the service was ended I was tipped up and felt myself slidin'. It seemed a mighty long while before I struck water. When I did I began to slit the bag, and as soon as I could get my arms out I felt for the rope about my ankles. The shot was pullin' me down pretty fast, and by the time I got myself free from it I'd gone down somepin like sixty feet, I reckon, but not likin' to get back to the surface till my breath was used up—fearin' to be seen from the ship—I didn't pull myself up; I simply floated up.

"When I struck the surface I saw officers and men lookin' at the place where I had gone down, though most o' 'em were turned away. I saw the sailmaker apart from the rest leanin' over the gunwale lookin' for me, and when the others had gone off I waved my hand to him.

"First thing I did after that was to look around for a sail. There was not one to be seen. Then for the first time out there on the lonely ocean I began to think mebbe I'd better 'a' stayed aboard and been swung off at the yardarm. There was hope for me, 'cause I was in the course of ships between American and Mediterranean ports. But how many ships was passin' that way? Mighty few. And how was I to get their attention? True, one o' my mates had tacked a white rag to a stick and it was put into the bag with me, but what's a few square feet o' rag to a ship miles away?

"I found my grub in good shape. It was in a tin box with a round hole in one side, the hole havin' a cap that screwed on. To help keep out the water the screw had been waxed. My life preserver had been fixed to hold my shoulders above the surface, and by raisin' my can and my bottle I kept the grub from salt water. Bein' hungry, I ate a fair breakfast, though I would have preferred some company.

"I floated all that day and the next and the next without seein' a sail. On the fourth day I saw one on the horizon, but o' course it didn't do me any good. My first meal was the last real meal I took; the rest was eatin' and drinkin' when I was so hungry and thirsty that I must have somepin to keep me goin'. My water soon give out, but I didn't suffer so much from this, 'cause the sea water got into me through the pores of the skin, leavin' the salt on the outside. I wished somepin to float on would come near me, but not a stick passed me.

"I slept most o' the time; leastways I was in a stupor. It was the only thing that enabled me to stay in the water so long, the sun shinin' hot down on me by day and the cold air blowin' over me by night. One day, after I had been scannin' the horizon all the mornin' for a sail without seein' any, I sunk into one o' those sleeps or stupors. The next thing I knew I was bein' hauled into a ship's boat. The time o' day was about sunset. I'd been sleepin' for hours, and while I was doin' it a vessel came right along where I was. A sailor saw me floatin' not a cable's length from the ship and reported me. Then a boat was sent for me."

"What time o' day was you taken out o' the water, Tom?" asked one of the audience.

"It was just after 6 in the evenin'."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? I know 'cause I always carried a silver watch in my fob and looked at it as soon as I was got into the boat."

"Was it goin'?"

"Sartin, it was goin'. I wound it every day."

This broke the spell of Tom's yarn. His mates would not admit that a watch immersed in sea water would keep going and mark accurate time.

FREEZING HOT.

Where Ice Has Been Used to Warm Things Up a Bit.

Keeping things warm with ice sounds absurd, but it is now becoming an established practice. Eggs—and other perishable goods that would be ruined by freezing during shipment in the winter—are often kept good during cold snaps by placing ice with them in refrigerator cars. Why it works in this manner no one positively knows. At the last congress on refrigeration this queer freak was brought up for discussion and a few theories were offered.

One man told of shipping two carloads of eggs last winter on the same day by the same route to the same destination and in similar cars. One car was packed thoroughly with straw to keep the eggs from freezing and ice was placed in the other car with no straw. There was severe cold weather during the railroad trip, and when the destination was reached it was found that none of the iced eggs had frozen, but most of the eggs protected by straw were spoiled by the cold.

An Ohio engineer offered the opinion that, with ice in a car, the air mixes less with the outside freezing air through crannies and so keeps a low—but not too low—temperature fairly constant.

Though ice never gets above 32 degrees in temperature and hence can have no direct heating effect, he suggested that the peculiar qualities of ice may cause it to absorb surrounding cold in a sense. Another opinion offered was that, with ice in a car, the air inside the car circulates freely, much more freely than without ice, and that freezing is hindered in moving air.—Saturday Evening Post.

Battleship Reading Room.

An interesting innovation will be [illegible]de in the designing of the battleship [illegible]w York, which is now under construction at the Brooklyn navy yard. This is a large and commodious room in a location very accessible to visitors, which is to be used as a library and reception room for the members of the crew. In this room is to be the crew's library, and the room is to be fitted with reading tables, writing desks, paper and magazine racks and chairs. Adjacent to this room are to be lavatory facilities for the use of guests of the crew. This provision is new in warship design.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Coughs.

Experience has shown that there are two distinct kinds of coughs—one proceeding from an affection of the lungs and air tubes, as in a simple cold, the other proceeding from effervescence in the stomach. The lung cough is a symptom which necessarily requires attention lest serious consequences ensue. The stomach cough is a much more simple matter and may easily be got rid of. It is caused by the effervescence of the food and drink which are put into the stomach. A knowledge of this fact ought to lead persons so affected to ponder a little on the nature of their ailment and the peculiarity of their digestive powers. Some stomachs agree best with alkalies, others with acids. One person likes a bitter substance, another a substance which is sour. The person who desires a satisfactory explanation of these circumstances will consult his own physician. Many stomach coughs arise from an undue love of sweets—sweet tea, sweet drinks, sweet cake, sweet custard and all kinds of confectionery. To some this love of sweets is in no way injurious, but to others it is exceedingly baneful.

The sad news has been received by R. M. Boyd of Adrian of the tragic death of Bert House in a trolley accident in New York Saturday. Bert was a Tecumseh boy, the son of Dr. R. B. House, and has a host of friends in Tecumseh to mourn his early death,

C. V. HICKS.

We clip the following from the Free Press of today:

Alpena, May 11.—Charles Virgil Hicks, for 40 years a prominent retail merchant of this city, died suddenly in Onaway late this evening as the result of a stroke of apoplexy Mr. Hicks was on a business trip to that city. No man on the Huron shore was better known than Mr. Hicks.

"Charlie" Hicks, a brother-in-law of Fred Rosacrans and Mrs Lawrence VanTyne of this place, was so well known among us, that the news of his death will come as a shock. He has been in poor health for some time but able to attend to his business. No particulars have yet been received but it is thought his remains will be brought here for burial. Mr. Rosacrans left for Alpena this morning.

MRS. LAWERENCE HERBISON

Mrs. Lawrence Herbison passed away suddenly on Wednesday night at the home of a niece in Owosso, where she had been visiting two weeks. The remains were brought home Friday and the funeral was held Sunday with burial at Brookside cemetery.

Mrs. Herbison was for many years a resident of Newburg just north of town and after the death of her husband which occurred about four years ago, has made her home with her daughter Mrs. Charles Richardson in Franklin.

She has been in poor health for a number of years.

Mary Elbertine Brown was born at Ogden Center March 1, 1858 and was united in marriage to Lawrence Herbison Nov. 27, 1877. Mr. Herbison died July 18, 1910. Of a quiet unassuming nature Mrs Herbison won many friends wherever she lived and will be missed by many. An only child Mrs Charles Richardson with her husband and little Dorothy mourn her sudden passing away.

"But now she sleeps where the daisies nod,
And the clover hangs its head,
Where the wild birds come and the wild bees hum,
Above her lonely bed.
She fought the fights, she kept the faith,
Her fame shines bright and clear,
And her memory lives in all our hearts,
Which will hold it ever dear."

DECORATION AND MEMORIAL DAY

A Proclamation: By the Governor

Nations that do not remember the dead do not remember the living. We scatter flowers over the graves of the "Boys in Blue" because of our love for them, because of our love for the noblest nation in the world, because of our love for the remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic. The added stars in our flag, the birth of a world-wide patriotism, the solidarity of the United States, the commercial, social and political progress of our country has been made possible through the valor and self-sacrifice of the boys who fought for the Union.

We who live today learn our lessons of inspiration, of patriotism and service from these heroes. May this day recall sacred memories, may this day afford us one more opportunity for greeting the "old boys" with a smile, with a hearty hand shake, with a "God bless you."

For the boys who died in the Spanish American War and for the boys who survived we bring like tokens of love and consecration.

Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby issue this my proclamation and heartily urge the observance of Saturday, May 30, 1914, as Memorial Day [SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this 8th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen and of the Commonwealth the seventy-eighth.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Frederick C. Martindale, Governor.
Secretary of State.

WHEN CARUSO SINGS.

The Scene In His Dressing Room Before the Opera Begins.

The opera was "Aida." Caruso was to sing Rhadames, and he was in the dressing room. In his train came his two valets. Wonderful indeed were they. Celerity and deftness raised to the nth power, with silencers on their feet, they passed and repassed each other in inconceivably small spaces without once touching each other or bumping into their lord and master.

Caruso sits before a stationary washstand, and one of the valets hands him a toothbrush and powder. Then for three solid minutes by his Swiss movement watch does Caruso cleanse and scrub and polish. The ever alert dressers stand behind him, watchful for a shrug of his shoulders, which they immediately interpret into a command.

Caruso takes a long breath, and he needs it. It must be a signal, for one of the valets has a glass of warm water in one hand and in the other a big, round pasteboard box full of little brownish crystals. Caruso takes a handful of the crystals and drops them into the warm water, where they dissolve immediately.

"That's gargling salt," he says. "I use it for my first gargle."

The gargle takes four minutes, and then comes the vaporizer. A glass of water containing bicarbonate of soda and glycerin is placed on a little stand. A rubber hose connected with the vaporizer is put into the glass, and a thin, forceful sputtering spray shoots out a full foot. Into this tiny Gatling gun spray Caruso plunges, mouth open.

Then the heavy artillery answers the little Gatling gun, for Caruso coughs back at the spray, chokes, bellows and sputters. Into each nostril, then deep down into the throat, go the bicarbonate of soda and glycerin over and over and over again until Caruso coughs no more.

The vaporizer bath has taken eight minutes by Caruso's infallible watch, but the end is not yet. There is a cold water gargle—sterilized water, please—minus the salt, to follow and that in turn by a spray for the nose only. Only about six sniffs apiece for each nostril and the spray is put away.

Then menthol and vaseline on absorbent cotton attached to long sticks and Caruso swabs out his throat with these as a gunner would a cannon.

"Dilates the throat," he says between gasps. One more gargle of cold water and the homage to the throat is finished. It has taken twenty-two minutes.

On goes his bathrobe, and he is in the corridor—smoking a cigarette! Twenty-two minutes of hard work he has given to that throat, and now he is calmly smoking a cigarette and inhaling every blessed puff of it. Shades of bicarbonate of soda, of gargling salt, of glycerin and of menthol, of what avail are you when a nervous man wants a cigarette and wants it now?—Charles Bloomingdale, Jr., in Saturday Evening Post.

THE RED APPLE BUG

Michigan has at last acquired the famous red bugs of the apple, that have caused so much activity in New York. The present spring has shown their presence in the central part of the state on apple, though just how far they have spread, is not known. It was of course to be expected that sooner or later they would reach us and perhaps we have escaped as long as could be expected. The first case was found by Mr. G. C. Woodin, a member of the Department of Entomology at the Agricultural College, while examining trees for scale. The bugs are hatching out now and are crawling about. One species is bright red in color while the other has blackish markings. They are very small as yet, being about 1-16 of an inch long. The bugs pierce the young fruit as soon as it sets and either cause it to drop or else deform it. The leaves are also curled by the creatures. As to the control, tobacco preparations have proven the most satisfactory. Nicotine or nicotine sulphate (black leaf 40) the latter, one to eight hundred, with a little soap added, have proven successful in killing the nymphs, after once hatched out and before the adult stage is reached. A spray put on at this time has the further advantage of killing many of the plant lice or aphids at the same time.

The Milk Bottle.

Many people, after ordering their milk from a good dairy, think that is all that there is to be done toward securing sweet, pure milk, but the way the milk bottle is cleansed and the way the bottle is put away afterward also have much to do with the problem of good milk.

The milk bottle has ample time to be contaminated with every known kind of germ before it is delivered, and so the safest way to cleanse bottles of these germs is by putting the bottle under the faucet and giving it a good bath before it is opened.

The cap and mouth of the bottle are thus thoroughly cleansed and may then be dried with a clean towel. It is much safer not to put the old pasteboard cap on the bottle again, for ten chances to one before the setting sun it will be found missing, and, besides, it soon becomes soiled with much handling.

When Choosing Food.

In working out a ration it is necessary to consider not only the food value of each thing eaten, but it is necessary to give it conditions which will not hamper it and keep it from giving up all its power.

An unpleasant consciousness of our digestive process is all too frequently due to the unfortunate combinations we make, and in this matter we are often the abject slaves of tradition.

RAIN! RAIN!!

"And the Rain Descended and the Flood Came."

A continuous downpour of rain with thunder and lightning has prevailed for the past 36 hours and the reports from far and near are of ruin and disaster Evans creek is on a rampage, small bridges washed out and the flats flooded.

At the electric lighting plant a bad washout of the race tore down the large pole that carried the main wires to the street and has wrought such great damage that it will take a long time to make good.

A bad break in the dam at Hayden's mill is causing much uneasiness.

John B. Smith's place is several feet under water and about six inches has been reported as running over the first floors of his home. All over town cellars are flooded and the water rushes down the streets like small rivers.

The brakesman on the morning train reported high water at every point between here and Manchester and the trains are running slowly over the bridges to avert disaster.

Later reports are to the effect that the Standish dam and 40 feet of bank have gone out, also that the ridge of land at the lighting plant has washed out so the water runs through, making it one large body.

Travel on the Clinton road is cut off as several culverts between here and that village are washed out.

Several barns were struck by lightning and while the freight train was waiting at the target just at night, one of the box cars was struck.

"ROTS" AND "SPOTS" TO GO

Food Commissioner Matthews Classes Them as Unsalable Food.

Chicago, May 11.—"Rots" and "spots"—the last two of the seven ages of the egg—will not be permitted in Illinois markets. Careless farmers, careless commission merchants, and retailers who allow their eggs to age in their cases will be punished by the state food commissioner, W. Scott Matthews.

In his bulletin just issued he classed "rots" and "spots," hitherto legitimate salable products, as decayed food. Mr. Matthews says he hopes to put a stop to the practice.

EAST INDIAN MAGIC.

The Clever Dry Sand Trick and the Way It Is Performed.

A very clever trick often seen in India is the following, which is known as the "dry sand trick."

The fakir brings forward a pail, which he proceeds to fill with water. He then shows some ordinary sand, quite dry. To prove its dryness he takes up a handful and, blowing sharply upon it, scatters it in all directions. He then takes up another handful and drops it into the water. We can all see it lying in the bottom of the pail under the water. Next, showing his hands empty, he places one in the pail and brings out a handful of the sand. Blowing upon it, it still scatters in all directions, showing it to be as dry as ever. This is repeated several times until all the sand is again extracted.

This clever trick is performed in the following manner: Fine, clean sand is selected, washed carefully in hot water several times and dried in the sun. Some of this sand is then placed in a frying pan with a lump of fresh lard and is cooked until all the lard is burned away. The result is that every particle of sand is covered with a thin coating of grease, so that when this sand is dropped into the water it remains dry.—Scientific American.

Schultz, a well known character for years, made his living sharpening scissors and razors for farmers in the eastern part of the county. When picked up at the roadside, half frozen, a year ago last February and taken to the poorhouse, notice sent to a newspaper in Skaneateles, N. The sons, both prosperous, came at once and hired McIntosh to give their father a home for the remainder of his life. For seventeen years they had thought him dead.

MOTHERS TOLD HOW TO TREAT SICK CHILDREN.

At the Willoughby House settlement, Brooklyn, recently, Dr. Walter B. Ludlum, addressing an audience of mothers on "The Care of Sick Babies," said that babies' diseases go fast, and that many of their troubles will disappear if left alone.

"But," he said, "there is another group that won't improve without treatment. If we begin at the top of the baby we must classify meningitis as one of the most serious complaints.

"There is one sort of meningitis from which every child dies. There is another kind, however, in which the child is almost sure to get well if the disease is taken in time. If the baby is troubled with headaches and if he holds his head too far back call the doctor quick.

"The baby's eyes can usually be kept in good condition by bathing them with a solution of borax and water. But if the eyes begin to run and this continues even two or three days it may be serious.

"A running nose is not uncommon, especially if a child has a cold. But if it keeps on running after the cold is over that is a sign of adenoids. If blood comes from inside the nose it may mean diphtheria.

"There are two kinds of croup. One looks bad, but isn't; the other is as bad as the first one looks. While waiting for the doctor it is a good plan to give the baby a dose of ipecac or salted water.

"In nineteen cases out of twenty convulsions come from the stomach. The baby should be put into a hot bath at once, care being taken not to burn it, and as soon as it can swallow it should be given a dose of castor oil.

"Teething causes almost no trouble to a healthy child.

"Bronchitis is a serious disease in a baby, for it often results in pneumonia, but it is readily subject to treatment, and that should begin at once. To keep the baby's lungs strong it should always sleep in a room with the windows open, and, except in the very severest weather, it does the baby good to sleep outdoors.

"In stomach troubles the first thing to do is to stop feeding the baby. Cutting off the food and giving a dose of castor oil is frequently all that is necessary to put the child in good condition again."

FANNY CROSBY, FAMOUS HYMNIST

The development of her poetic accomplishments seemed to her to be a new way to glorify her Master, and it was in 1864 that she first began working on the long series of hymns which has run up into the thousands.

"Safe In the Arms of Jesus" appeared in 1868, "Pass Me Not" in the same year, "Rescue the Perishing" one year later and "Blessed Assurance" in 1873. The next year came three widely sung hymns—"Hold Thou My Hand," "Close to Thee" and "Every Day and Every Hour." "I Am Thine, O Lord," appeared in 1875, "Hide Thou Me" in 1876, "'Tis the Blessed Hour of Prayer" in 1881, "What a Gathering" in 1887 and "Saved by Grace," one of her favorites, in 1891.

Sudden Inspiration.

"The hymn I hold fondest," says Miss Crosby, "is 'Safe In the Arms of Jesus.' I wrote it in fifteen minutes and have always taken a little pride in this fact. W. H. Doane, who had written the music for several of my hymns, came to me one morning and said he had some music for which he wanted words. He added that he had just forty minutes to catch a train for Cincinnati, and he asked me to evolve the lines in less than that time. He sat down at the piano and played the music. I sat thinking deeply for a few minutes after he had stopped, then said, 'I think I can write it.'

FANNY CROSBY.

"The thought came to me that I ought to make the hymn something that would appeal instinctively to all.

"Suddenly there came over me the thought of the protection that always exists in the minds of children when in the arms of their parents, as the ones in whom they feel the greatest confidence.

"Thinking it over, it occurred to me that Jesus as the Son of the Heavenly Father was the one in whom we should feel a confidence equal to that of God Almighty. So, with the idea of safety in the arms and next to the heart of the One whom we all worship, I sat down and composed the hymn 'Safe In the Arms of Jesus.'

"The thought came as inspiration, and I could do nothing but heed it. I have always been thankful for it, as the hymn brought me closer and made me nearer to the hearts of those who sing my hymns than any other I have written."

Building Up a Mood.

Miss Crosby believes there is much truth in the doctrine of moods in writing. If she was not in the mood and there was pressing demand for some particular composition she would build a mood or, in her own words, "try to build one around her."

"I have sat alone many a day and night," she once wrote, "praying God to give me thoughts and the feelings wherewith to compose my hymn. After a time—perhaps not unmingled with struggle—the thought would come and I would soon be happy in my work.

"It may seem a little old fashioned to always begin one's work with prayer, but I never undertake a hymn without first asking the good Lord to be my inspiration in the work that I am about to do.

"When at last I have arrived at the right stage of thought and feeling and am sure that I am in condition to reach the minds and hearts of my constituency and sing to them something worthy for them to hear I cast about for a few minutes as to the measure and possibly the tune.

"Much more depends upon this than might at first seem to be the case, for if there is a false accent or a mistake in the meter the hymn cannot stand much chance of proving a success, or at least its possibilities are very much lessened. Among the millions of hymns that have been attempted and forgotten many contained no doubt deep and pious thought and feeling, but were crippled and killed by the roughness of some line or the irregularity of some measure.

Tunes as Guides.

"Often I take in my mind some tune already well known as a model, or, perhaps, more accurately speaking, as a guide, and work to it. This, however, does not imply that the tune will ultimately be chosen as the companion of the words, for it has probably already its own true and lawful mate, with which it is happy and useful.

"After any particular hymn is done I let it lie for a few days in the writing desk of my mind, so to speak, until I have leisure to prune it, to read it through with the eyes of my memory and altogether get it into as presentable a shape as possible. I often cut it and trim it and change it."

Incidents often inspired Miss Crosby. She was attending a meeting of the famous Water Street mission in New York city. One hardened sinner, when the call for repenters to make themselves known was made, stepped forward and went toward the platform whereon Miss Crosby, in company with the missionaries, sat.

On being told that a man had come forward she exclaimed:

"Lead me to him."

Tenderly she placed her arms about the rum soaked, guilt stained man and as tenderly she whispered in his ear. Then the tears began to course their way down his cheeks. With a great sob the big, burly fellow broke down and cried like a child.

The incident so impressed itself on Miss Crosby's mind that before she retired that night "Rescue the Perishing" had been completed.

RESCUE THE PERISHING.

Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying,
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave.
Weep o'er the erring one,
Lift up the fallen,
Tell them of Jesus, the mighty to save.

CHORUS.
Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying.
Jesus is merciful;
Jesus will save.

Though they are slighting him,
Still he is waiting,
Waiting the penitent child to receive.
Plead with them earnestly;
Plead with them gently.
He will forgive if they only believe.

Down in the human heart,
Crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore.
Touched by a loving heart,
Wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken, will vibrate once more.

Rescue the perishing.
Duty demands it.
Strength for thy labor the Lord will provide.
Back to the narrow way
Patiently win them.
Tell the poor wanderer a Saviour has died.

How to Stay Young.

Miss Crosby has said that she hopes to live to be 106 years old, the age which her grandmother attained.

"Right thinking keeps people young," said Miss Crosby not long ago. "It keeps them young and well in body and mind. I never fret, never worry, never think disagreeable thoughts or find fault with any one or anything. If the mind is warped by prejudice and evil thoughts and selfishness you become a pessimist. Then maybe your doctor says your liver is bad. It isn't your liver at all; it's your mind. Keep that bright, cheerful and happy."

Fanny Crosby's judgments of those about her are accurate. She comes to her conclusions through the sound of the voice. "That is a kind man; I like his voice," or "I don't want to know that person," she will say. She was seated next to a stranger in a hotel at dinner. Afterward a friend who knew his character asked her what she thought of him. "He is a deep, vile, bad man," she quickly replied. It was true. Conversing with a man who had spoken scornfully of a good impulse, she exclaimed, "Get me a hammer and let me raise a bump of reverence on this man's head!"

NEW COLLIER A SUCCESS.

Jupiter, Electrically Driven, Exceeds Speed at Which She Was Rated.

The electrically driven collier Jupiter has scored a signal success on her trial trip, just completed off the Lower California coast. Though rated as a fourteen knot boat, she maintained an average speed of 15.1 knots for forty-eight hours, during which time the electric machinery revolved the propellers at the rate of 115.7 per minute, developing 6,940 horsepower.

This is the first time the system of electric propulsion has been tried on any naval vessel, and the department officials are greatly pleased at the result. The Jupiter was, in competition with the collier Neptune, fitted with a reduction gear calculated to bring the speed of her turbines down to the point of economy by gearing, and with a third collier, the Cyclops, fitted with reciprocating engines. All three vessels were of the same size.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

"Arteriosclerosis."

Hardening of the arteries, as the Greek term means, is one of the processes of growing old. A man is as old as his arteries, and some men are much older than others at the same years. Arteries are not merely tubes that carry blood under pressure from the heart, but living channels which themselves react to changes in the human body, and by degenerating lose their elasticity and so interfere with the circulation. Vitality soon ebbs when the blood current is hampered, and every organ suffers. It is the whole of life that must be regulated. Overworking, but, above all, overworrying, overeating, overdrinking of stimulants—all contribute to the wearing out process eventually seen in arterial degeneration. But the crux of the problem is the individual element, for what constitutes excess for one man in many of these ways seems to leave others quite unaffected. The prevention of arteriosclerosis is the adaptation of the individual to his nature, his work and his play so as to obtain the longest life for the human machine that he gets by heredity from his special family strain.

Aim only at that which is within reach and trust the big things to time and the spirit.—Towne.

HONOR DEAD TARS

President Wilson Delivers Impressive Address.

SERVICES HELD AT NAVY YARD

Several Hundred Thousand Witness in Silence Procession from Battery to Navy Yard—Chief Magistrate Waives Salute—Montana Arrives on Sunday— New York in Mourning.

NEW YORK. — The nation's dead, the seventeen bluejackets and marines, killed at the occupation of Vera Cruz, arrived at Sandy Hook Sunday on the funeral ship, the U. S. S Montana. At the prescribed clip of twelve knots the U. S. S. Wyoming led the way. The Montana came along ten ship lengths away. The regulation distance also separated the president's private yacht, flying the flag of the secretary of the navy. At Fort Hamilton great crowds in automobiles and afoot lined the shore road.

The caskets were laid out in rows of four on the boat deck just about the bridge on the port side. The bluejacket guard of honor stood at attention during the passage through the lower bay.

As the Montana came to anchor in midstream of Communipaw, with her head against the fast-running tide, two launches dropped from her side to the water and immediately began patrolling to ward off any visitors.

Just as the Mayflower swung around into her anchorage position the Spray, the commandant's barge from the Brooklyn navy yard, put off from the Battery. She carried Captain Albert Gleaves, the commandant, and Colonel R. A. C. Smith, commissioner of docks and ferries, the latter representing Mayor Mitchell and the citizens' committee of 200. They made their way immediately to the Mayflower to pay their official call upon the secretary of the navy.

Following a procession from the battery this morning, memorial services were held at the navy ward, at which President Wilson delivered the address. The procession was viewed by 500,000 persons.

President Wilson arrived in the city at 7:55 o'clock this morning and attended the funeral services in the navy yard. He came in over the Pennsylvania and went to breakfast at the home of Colonel Edward M. House in East Thirty-fifth street. He remained there until shortly before eleven o'clock when he went direct to the navy yard.

The president was entertained at luncheon in the yard by Captain Gleaves, the commandant who also had Secretary Daniels as his guest.

The presidential party returned to Washington on the Congressional limited, leaving here at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The president directed that the customary president's salute be given in honor of the dead and no salute be given him. The president also made it understood that the services were memorial and not funeral. The funeral services were held at Vera Cruz and other services will be held at the homes of the dead.

The memorial services were attended by state and city officials, Secretary Daniels and many notables and were impressive. The entire city was in mourning and flags were half-masted everywhere.

Facing Graft Attack Better Than Failing to Testify on Murder Charge.

NEW YORK. — Charles Becker means to risk the greatest of all hazards in his case, meeting the leveled eyes of twelve jurymen while he testifies in his own defense and endures the district attorney's severest attack. Becker knows that the district attorney will take up graft and the matter of where he acquired so much money on a police lieutenant's salary

Becker's determination to take the stand is the result of Mrs. Becker's persistence that he should stand up himself and say to the jury that Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps are liars.

GIVES WIFE DAMAGES AGAINST HUBBY'S MA

Society Woman must Pay Big Money for Beating.

FLINT, MICH. — Mrs. Grace Smith was awarded a judgment of $10,500 by a jury in circuit court against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary G. Smith, for injuries sustained when the latter came to her home and beat her.

Love for her three-year-old grandson and anger because of beatings the child was alleged to have received at the hands of his mother, was the defense Mrs. Smith, society woman of Flint, offered for the assault on her daughter-in-law. The son seemed unwilling to testify against either his mother or wife, but admitted that the child was unruly at times. Mrs. Smith asked $20,000 damages.

Two Men Locked in Courthouse Become Reconciled by Plight.

FLINT, MICH. — Out of sorts with each other for months because of a suit in the circuit court here, F. I. Griswold, representing the Globe Construction company, of Kalamazoo, and Thomas D. Brown, of Clio, plaintiff, arrived at an amicable adjustment after having been locked up against their will in the corridors of the local courthouse.

The two were locked in the building at night by the janitor and put their heretofore disagreeing brains together and decided to drop out of the window to the ground. Evidently their common misfortune served to knit their friendship, and they came to court with a declaration that their differences had been settled.

DEFAULTER REFUSED NEW START BY U. S.

Bank Teller Is Jailed Despite Employer's Magnanimity.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Denied the chance to make a new start in life by the federal government after the opportunity had been afforded him by his employers, Edward T. Lindsay, of Saginaw, is in the county jail here awaiting sentence for the theft of $12,000 from the Second National bank of Saginaw, of which he was savings teller.

Lindsay's peculations were discovered last September while he was away on a vacation, the clerk who took his place running onto the discrepancy by accident. Following the disclosures Lindsay confessed to President Morley and produced deposit slips showing all his peculations.

Mr. Morley made good the shortage and gave Lindsay a reduced position in the bank and an opportunity to repay. The bank president did not desire his employe's arrest, but the government decreed otherwise.

Lindsay had been employed by the bank since he left high school, fifteen years ago. He started at a salary of $600 a year and at the time of the disclosures was drawing $2,200. As near as could be learned he did not gamble or speculate, but lived beyond his means. He has a wife and two children and recently purchased a home. When brought into court he appeared to be indifferent as to his fate. His wife is heartbroken over the affair.

JUDGE IS AFTER PERJURERS

Jurist, Who Denied Frank New Trial, Will Probably Instruct Jury.

ATLANTA, GA. — It is announced that Judge Ben Hill of the superior court, who denied a new trial to Leo M. Frank under sentence of death for killing Mary Phagan, a factory girl, will instruct the grand jury, which begins its sessions a week from Monday to investigate charges of perjury, coercion and intimidation of witnesses made by both sides in the famous murder case.

Dan Lehon, a detective, has been held in $1,000 bail for appearance before the grand jury and it is believed several other detectives and agents for both state and defense will be summoned.

CHILD DREADS PUNISHMENT

Girl, 12, Fearing to Go Home, Without Food for 24 Hours.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Without food for more than twenty-four hours, twelve-year-old Madeline Culver was found asleep in the cellar of a vacant house by two boys who were playing about the place.

The little girl disappeared from home the day before, and fearing punishment she did not return. She slept on a pile of poles near the lighting plant.

SECOND QUAKE SHOCKS SICILY

Disturbance Violent but Result Is Not Known.

ROME. — There was another violent earthquake in Sicily Sunday afternoon, but it was in a different section from the one of Friday night. The shock was most severe at Randazzo on the northwestern slope of Mount Etna, some fifteen or twenty miles from the section affected by Friday's shocks. There was a panic at Randazzo which is a town of 10,000 inhabitants. It is not known as yet whether there were any casualties as the result of Sunday's shock.

All the news in regard to Friday's shocks north of Catania is still confused and incomplete. The telegraph lines have been partially repaired, but are working badly and are congested with government messages. Moreover the survivors from the various villages and hamlets are still paralyzed with fear and are unable to describe the disaster. The injured children will not allow the doctors to attend to their wounds. Others are clamoring helplessly for relief, but will make no attempt to help themselves.

The great heat now prevailing makes matters worse and is the cause of increased trouble for those who are trying to succor the injured and homeless. Water is scarce as well as food and the rations distributed by the soldiers are not sufficient to go around.

The area of the zone devastated by Friday's earthquake is about two square miles. It is reported that the villages of Linera, Passopomo, Bongiardi, Pennisi and Zerbati were practically obliterated. The rescuers have not as yet reached many scattered farmhouses.

Squaw Prevents a Suicide.

PORT HURON, MICH. — An Indian squaw saved Miss Rotta Tripp, of this city, from committing suicide. The latter was about to jump into the St. Clair river when the Indiana woman who had been watching her, jumped to the rescue and caught her before she could throw herself into the water. The Indian woman would not give her name.

An application was filed in probate court asking that Miss Tripp be adjudged insane.

Violated Federal Game Act.

BAY CITY, MICH. — George Williams, alias J. Adams, of Hope, C. L. Erway, alias Will R. Jones, and W. H Short, alias J. Berry, of Evansville, were fined $50 each for violation of the law which prohibits shipping game birds by interstate traffic.

These are the first prosecutions under this law. The men were indicted by the federal grand jury for shipping partridges out of the state.

Body of Lake Victim Found.

ESCANABA, MICH. — The body of John Gallagher, chief engineer of the steamer Henry B. Smith, wrecked in the great storm of last November, was found on the shore of Michipicotem Island, near Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and was brought here.

The body was identified by letters and a watch found in the pockets. Gallagher's widow and five children live in this city.

Finds Husband Headless.

ALPENA, MICH. — After a search of the premises for her husband, Mrs. Lester Ellsworth, of Hubbard Lake, suddenly came across his decapitated body in a clothes closet on their farm, where he had fallen, his head having been shot off by a high-powered hunting gun.

It is thought that in taking the gun down, it was accidentally discharged.

ANCIENT HIGH FINANCE.

When White Deerskins Passed as Currency in China.

In China, the first country to use banknotes, certain skins were once of such great value that they were accepted as cash, passing from hand to hand in the same way as banknotes of the present day. The negotiability of these skins was established in this way:

The Emperor Ou Ti, being in want of money, gave his treasurer to understand that such a state of affairs must not continue. At that time it was customary for princes and courtiers on entering the royal presence to cover their faces with pieces of skin. Taking advantage of this custom, the treasurer procured the issuance of a decree forbidding the use of any other skins for this purpose save those of a certain species of white deer in the royal parks. Immediately, of course, there arose a demand for pieces of these skins, which, being a monopoly, were sold at a high price.

Thus were the royal coffers refilled. The steady value of the skins thus obtained made them readily a substitute for coin of the realm.

In the Russian seal fisheries of Alaska the workmen were formerly paid in the currency stamped on squares of walrus hide.—Washington Star.

Wyoming Has Many High Mountains.

Wyoming has nine mountains exceeding 13,000 feet in height and of these three approach the 14,000 foot mark, according to the United States geological survey. They are Gannett peak, 13,785 feet; Grand Teton, 13,747 feet, and Fremont peak, 13,730 feet. Cloud peak, one of the most beautiful mountains in the state, is 13,730 feet above sea level. Besides these mountains Wyoming has thirty-one other named peaks upward of 12,000 feet in height and some forty unnamed mountains which exceed that altitude.

An interesting story might be written of the thousands of lofty unnamed mountain peaks of the west which are nearly double the height of the very highest mountains in the entire Appalachian mountain system in the eastern portion of the country. Colorado alone has dozens of mountains without name which are more than double the height of our most lofty eastern mountain.

Stones and Glass Houses.

The origin of the saying "Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones" is as follows: At the time of the union of England and Scotland London was inundated with Scotchmen, and the London roughs used to go about at night breaking their windows. Buckingham being considered the chief instigator of the mischief, a party of Scotchmen smashed the windows of the duke's mansion, known as the Glass House. The court favorite appealed to the king, who replied, "Steenie, Steenie, those who live in glass houses should be careful how they fling stones!"

10 YEARS AGO.

In looking over the files of ten years ago May 17 we find the following:

TWO FACTORIES SECURED FOR TECUMSEH.

For several weeks local men have been at work selling stock to establish a macaroni factory. The amount necessary to be sold of this stock is so nearly taken that the Herald can now almost say to a certainty that the Heck flouring mill will soon be filled with machinery to manufacture macaroni. This factory will employ about 30 people and, as the money comes from Tecumseh men, it will certainly be a success.

As we go to press this morning word comes that F. B. VanCamp of Elkhart will soon establish with the Century Post Co. a factory to build steel stoves and furnaces. In time this concern will employ about 75 to 100 people and, as Mr. VanCamp is a well-to-do citizen of Elkhart and the Century Post Co. have been doing a good and profitable business here, this will make a fine addition to the solid manufacturing interests already in Tecumseh.

The first proposition certainly proved a good thing as witness the new building and business of today with its wonderful output of macaroni, spaghetti, etc. The Century Post Co. with the manufacture of stoves and furnaces was not as successful, but had a good run of business for some time.

The Annual Rainfall.

According to an estimate by Sir John Murray, the total annual rainfall upon all the land of the globe amounts to 29,347.4 cubic miles and of this quantity 6,524 cubic miles drains off through rivers to the sea. A cubic mile of river water weighs approximately 4,205,650,000 tons and carries in solution on the average about 420,000 tons of foreign matter. In all, about 2,735,000,000 tons of solid substances are thus carried annually to the ocean.—United States Geological Survey.

Two Wise Ones.

The young man carefully removed the cigars from his vest pocket and placed them on the piano. Then he opened his arms. But the young girl did not flutter to them. "You," she said coldly, "have loved before."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Woman's Way.

"Say, did you ever know a woman to buy what she wanted at the first store she came to?"

"Yes. My wife frequently does—that is, she returns to it after she's been through all the other stores."—Boston Transcript.

CHARLES VIRGIL HICKS

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death of C. V. Hicks on Monday last at Onaway where he had gone on a business trip. He had been busy all day, and returning to his hotel ate a hearty dinner seemingly as well as usual. He started out on the street again, and had gone but a short distance when he was stricken, falling on the walk. He was carried to his hotel and his wife was notified but he passed away before she could reach him.

Mr. Fred Rosacrans on receiving word left at once for Alpena and has been with his sister, Mrs. Hicks, to comfort and assist her in this trying ordeal.

The body was brought to Tecumseh Thursday night and taken to the home of Mr. Rosacrans where the funeral was held this morning at 10 o'clock under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity.

Rev. Frederick Hewitt officiating with the beautiful burial service of the Episcopal church.

Mr. Hicks is well known in Tecumseh residing here in his younger days at one time clerking in the Patterson drug store. He leaves a large circle of friends who grieve over his untimely death. A widow, two sons and two daughters mourn the loss of a devoted husband and a loving father.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our thanks to all the kind friends for their assistance and kindness shown us during our late bereavement. For the flowers silent tokens of the love and esteem in which our dear one was held. To the fraternal orders, the Masonic quartett and Dr. Hartzog for his words of comfort.

MT. CLEMENS, MICH. — William Sinn, assistant engineer, is dying and little hope is held out for the recovery of Aubrey Rivard, second assistant engineer, as a result of a boiler explosion at the D. U. R. power house at New Baltimore.

The men were working on the boiler, which was located in the basement of the plant, when it let go.

ROAD BEE DAY:

A Proclamation by the Governor.

In 1913 the townships of Michigan raised $4,836,029 for the improvement and repair of highways; 44 counties under the county road system levied county road taxes amounting to $1,621,681 and the state appropriated $800,000 for the payment of state rewards, making a grand total of $6,757,710 which was raised by direct taxation and expended on the rural highways. Added to this, many townships and counties raised money by bonding and many public spirited citizens gave freely in money and labor, so that it is a low estimate to say that at least $7,000,000 were expended on Michigan's roads during the past year.

While this has resulted in the building of more miles of excellent highways than were ever before built in a single year, there is still much to be desired. The people want more good roads and want all of the roads cared for better than they have been in the past.

Last year on June 9th the Huron Shore Road Association observed the first "Road Bee Day" ever held in this state. It was a success; wet pieces of road were drained; logs, roots, stumps and stones were removed from the roadway; bad stretches of clay were sanded; bad pieces of sand were clayed; gravel was hauled; road drags were set to work and altogether so much enthusiasm was aroused that many farmers put in a full week instead of one day. By this concerted effort some 250 miles of highway in eastern Michigan, which in some places was very bad, was made into a very passable road.

At the request of the Michigan Good Roads Association, the Huron Shore Association and the West Michigan Pike Association, and to the end that this good work may extend over the state and all the people receive the benefits, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, do ask that the people of the State of Michigan set apart Thursday and Friday, June 4th and 5th, 1914, as "Road Bee Day," and as far as possible turn out and work under well planned and competent supervision on the highways of this state in such manner as shall make them more fit, safe and pleasant for public travel.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this 13th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1914 and of the Commonwealth the 78th.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Governor.
Frederick C Martindale,
Secretary of State.

ALABAMA WINS BOY'S CORN CLUB CONTEST.

The Alabama corn clubs have won the trophy offered by business men of Louisville, Ky., for the team of ten boys in any Southern State who could show the best records in corn growing at the Conference for Education in the South on April 10. The competition was very close, and it is said that there has never been a better set of records made, since the corn-club work was established. The trophy is a medallion bust of the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, the founder of the farm demonstration work. Each member of the team is also to receive a miniature of the medallion in the form of a watch charm.

These ten Alabama boys produced 1,718.3 bushels of corn on ten acres, at an average cost of $0.1⁸2 cents per bushel, or $31.73 per acre. The average profit was $140.14. This means that a profit of $1,401.40 was made on 10 acres, estimating the corn at $1 per bushel. As a matter of fact, much of the corn has been sold for seed at $2. to $3 per bushel.

TWIGS

By meeting the play instinct of young people the fourteen county Y. M. C. A.'s in Michigan last year brought together 9,194 boys and girls in every kind of athletic meet and play festival. The old time, obsolete folk-games and dances were revived under competent supervision and a new standard of athletics has been established, all in the belief that the ability to work together as men and women is the natural and logical outgrowth of the ability to play together as boys and girls.

At the invitation of the county school commissioner a county secretary taught simple games in twenty-five rural schools. When the weather was to cold or inclement for outdoor demonstration, he explained four or five games with chalk and a blackboard. During fair weather at special fifteen minute periods the teacher and pupils joined in games under the secretary's direction. After three weeks of practice in such play during short recesses and noon hours, a teacher wrote the secretary. "Teach us more games, for they have not only opened the way for us to get better acquainted with our boys and girls, but since they have been used it has been easier to conduct our regular school work."—The Christian Herald.

Reformers Drop Lid Cases.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Roland Becks, charged with selling liquor to a student, was dismissed in the circuit court upon the recommendation of the very men who had caused his arrest, the law and order committee of the Men's Forward and Religious movement. This movement hired detectives from the Burns agency of Detroit and selected two university students to aid in getting evidence.

The men interested in the investigation have signified their desire to work with the county officers in any future work of this nature.

Boy Admits Slaying Father.

MARSHALL, MICH. — John Davis age fifteen, pleaded guilty in circuit court to murdering his father, Harvie Davis, in Penfield township, Sunday, April 26. When told that it was not necessary for him to plead guilty at that time, but that he might stand mute, he said to Judge North, "I am guilty contrary to all expectations."

N. E. Stanley, age twenty-four, who is also charged with the murder of Davis, stood mute, and his attorney, Joseph L. Hooper of Battle Creek, announced that he would fight the case.

A Literary Coterie.

Gubbins, who calls his living room the library, but is otherwise a good sort enough, brought home a near-sighted friend to dinner the other night. A young lady was standing near the door to welcome the guest.

"Allow me," said Gubbins, "to present you to my daughter."

The guest bowed, but the courteous inclination was directed not toward Miss Gubbins, but toward another of the household treasures, a plaster pillar surmounted by a bust.

Very Little Difference.

"Men have an advantage that woman never can possess," she complained. "Whenever a man wishes to hide his identity he can, by letting his whiskers grow or by shaving them off as the case may be, change his expression completely."

"That isn't so much of an advantage," he replied. "A woman can by putting on her complexion or leaving it off as the case may be, make just as much of a change in her appearance as a man is able to make in his with or without the aid of his whiskers."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Glaciers.

It has been demonstrated that the glacier does not move in one block, but flows, accommodating itself to the channel in which it moves. Professor Tyndall planted a row of sticks in a straight line across a glacier, and after a few days the line had become a crescent, showing that the middle of the glacier moved faster than the sides, just as in a river the stream is stronger in the center.

Tuesday evening last is one long to be remembered in the annals of Blanchard Council No 34, R. & S. The work was put on in a most clever, emphatic and masterly manner. The music was beautiful and inspiring, while the banquet which followed the work was all that the most fastidious fraters could wish. Notwithstanding the stormy weather and the consequent bad condition of the roads, there were six companions down from Clinton (coming via Franklin) and there was a large turnout of Tecumseh Masons.

FORMER MICH. WOMEN ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Ypsilanti, Mich., May 13.—Special.—Word came by telegram yesterday from Fred L. Ingraham, a former member of the Normal college faculty and now an attorney in Yuma, Ariz., that Mrs. Lamar Brown and daughter Genevieve, the latter a graduate of the Normal Conservatory in 1908, were burned to death in a hotel fire in Yuma Tuesday morning.

The mother and daughter kept house here, but their home was in Manchester, Mich. They went west after the daughter graduated.—Detroit Journal.

DAMAGED UP TO $150,000.

It is estimated that the toll in Lenawee county imposed by the late flood will be over $150,000. In many places the fruit crop is damaged and work on the farm is put back to such an extent as to insure late crops if any,

The real extent of damage cannot be well estimated as every day some new damage is discovered. The railroads also are suffering to a great extent and large forces of men are at work repairing washouts and strengthening bridges. This is by far the heaviest damage recorded by a flood in this county,

WIT AND WISDOM.

Closing Banquet for Year Held at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kemp Tuesday Evening.

FORTY GUESTS PRESENT.

The rain that had poured so continuously for some 36 hours, finally ceased and Tuesday evening the members of the Wit and Wisdom Club, ventured forth, and gathered at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Kemp for their club banquet, that marked the closing of their club season. At 6:30 a three course banquet was served to about forty guests, who were daintily served by the Misses Marian Rosacrans, Marjorie Roscrans, Lilias Howard, Ivalene Lamkin, Lulu Brown, Blanche Snyder, assisted by Seymour Orr and Arthur Brown, Miss Marian Rosacrans having charge.

Each table was prettily decorated. A Maypole with the ribbons for twining was at each plate, also a place card with a pretty out of door scene, and on the reverse side a quotation which each member was called upon to read at the close of the banquet.

After the banquet the business meeting was held. Then the President North introduced the toast master, Mr. Albert Howard. Mr Howard evidently felt the responsibility of the office, for he likened himself to the Goat. It was quite hard at times for the company to decide whether it were they or the speaker who was the particular goat referred to.

The program was a fine one, and was as follows:

Piano Duet--Mesdames F. S. Turner and Elmer Slayton.

Toast, "The best laid plans o' mice and men, aft gang a-gley"—Mrs. F. D Rector.

Toast, "Oh wad some Pow'r the gifte gie us, to see ourseles as ithers see us"—Mrs. Edythe Lamkin.

Toast, "Sermon or Song"—Mrs. C. A. Slayton.

Toast, "A Man's a Man for a' That and a' That"—W. L. Reed.

POSTPONES DEATH 17 YEARS

Man Dies Who Supposedly Passed Away Years Ago.

HASTINGS, MICH. — Peter Schultz, until a year ago supposed by his wife and sons, whom he deserted thirty-three years ago, to be dead, died at the home of Scott McIntosh.

Schultz, a well known character for years, made his living sharpening scissors and razors for farmers in the eastern part of the county. When picked up at the roadside, half frozen, a year ago last February and taken to the poorhouse, notice sent to a newspaper in Skaneateles, N. Y., revealed the fact that his wife and two sons, John of Skaneateles and George of Lacrosse, Wis., were living. The sons, both prosperous, came at once and hired McIntosh to give their father a home for the remainder of his life. For seventeen years they had thought him dead.

NOW MRS. M'ADOO

Secretary Leads the President's Daughter, Eleanor, to Altar.

IN MAY DAY FLORAL ATTIRE

Presents Galore Fill Rooms—Dais in Blue Room Erected for Bride to Stand—Presents for Flower Girls—Several of McAdoo Family Absent—Mrs. Sayre Arrives Early.

WASHINGTON. — The famous and beautiful blue room of the White House has been transformed from its stilted and formal appearance into a bower of green and white springtime loveliness, for the wedding ceremony of Miss Eleanor, the youngest daughter of President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and Secretary of the Treasury W. H. McAdoo. In addition to the blue room, which is the scene of the nuptial ceremony itself, both the red and green parlors and the state dining room also were filled with May blossoms and greenery for the occasion of the second White House wedding of the present social season.

Owing to the exclusive smallness of the wedding group, however, the east room where every previous wedding of a daughter of the White House has been held, was well night overlocked. The two towering mantle pieces and the deep bays of the windows were filled with palms, ferns and lillies, but otherwise the great apartment was neglected.

A dias constructed about ten inches high to the southward curve of the blue room furnishes standing place for the members of the bridal party. It is covered with rich oriental rugs upon which the bride and bridegroom knelt for the prayer and benediction.

The Rev. Sylvanus Beach read the service at 6 p. m. Thursday. The dainty little flower girls, little Sally McAdoo, future step-daughter of the bride, and Miss Nancy Lane daughter of the secretary of the interior, have been carefully instructed in their parts and the president's military and naval staff are on hand as ushers with the other assistants of the bride.

Mrs. Sayre arrived in the morning. Others who are guests are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Wilson, Professor Axson, brother of Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Kellilogg of Atlanta, Ga., Miss Hunter of Portsmouth, Va.; Miss Duffield and Mis Fine, of Princeton; Miss Majorie Brown, of Atlanta, cousin of Mrs. Wilson, who was one of the bridesmaids at the Sayre-Wilson wedding and Miss Stattleman, of Wilmington, who was also one of the guests at the Sayre-Wilson wedding.

Miss Eleanor Wilson ordered the gifts of her flower girls. They are little gold lockets suspended from slendor gold chains. The lockets each has a diamond in the center and on the backs, the Wilson-McAdoo monogram and date and the name of the receipient.

Part of McAdoo Family Absent.

Miss Nona McAdoo, the elder unmarried daughter of Secretary McAdoo, returned to Washington from visit with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Francis H. McAdoo, in Green Spring Valley, Md. Mrs. Francis McAdoo has arrived in Washington. Mrs. Martin, Secretary McAdoo's eldest daughter, whose home is in Arizona, will not attend the wedding. She has sent word that her husband is ill. Thus far no word has been sent regarding the prospective presence of Wm. Gibbs McAdoo, Jr., the second son of the secretary, who is at Princeton. Robert McAdoo, the youngest son, is still in preparatory school.

Gifts Selected.

Two important gifts were selected for Miss Wilson and are being suitably inscribed. One is a diamond bracelet selected as the gift of the senate and sent with a letter from Senator Martine, chairman of the committee.

The other gift was that given by the New Jersey delegation in congress. It was selected by Mrs. Thomas J. Scully, wife of Representative Scully of that state. It is a Sheffield tray, oval in shape, of burnished silver with a rose garland design. In the center is inscribed in clear script "E. R. W." An appropriate inscription not yet decided upon, will be engraved under the bride's initials in the center of the tray.

The gift of the cabinet members to their colleague and his bride, is a set of one dozen silver plates and a pair of silver vases.

All Treatment Experimental.

All treatment, however carefully chosen, is in the nature of an experiment, writes Dr. F. M. Sandwith in the Clinical Journal, for none can know the exact effect of any treatment or drug on any individual patient until he has tried it. A drug may suit ninety nine persons but be injurious to the one hundredth because of some idiosyncrasy.

Football Language.

"Four-eleven-forty-four," remarked the halfback boarder.

"What's that?" inquired the ribbon clerk boarder.

"Excuse me. That's the football signal for the forward pass. I'd like the butter."—Kansas City Journal.

The Yellow Flash

It Served Their Purpose

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Scott Perry stared at the old Indian tracker with widening eyes. Did Daga Bendrib really expect him to believe that there was a tiger—a man eating tiger—at large in the Wundri district?

Daga Bendrib bumped his turbaned head on the floor of the veranda and protested vigorously.

"Ah, Sahib Perry, it is the greatest beast India has ever known! My son-in-law glimpsed it as it sped through the village, and he swore that it went like a flash of yellow lightning. Its lips dripped blood, and its eyes blazed like balls of fire. If the presence would condescend to leave his study of the birds and butterflies his servant would show him the mangled bull and the track of the great man eating tiger!" Again Daga Bendrib salaamed.

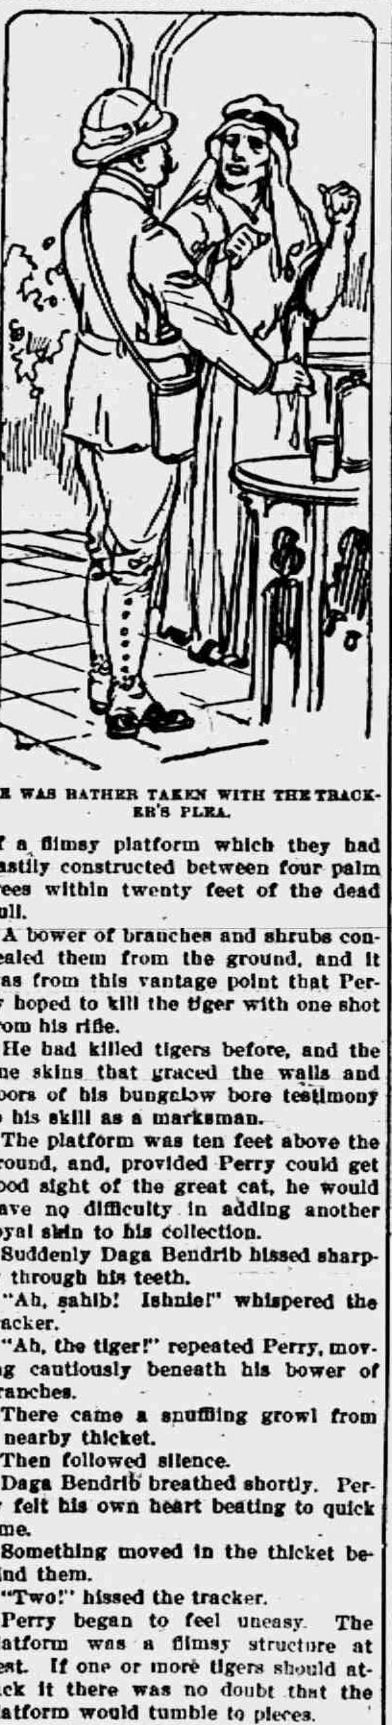
Perry knocked the ashes from his pipe and dropped it in his pocket. He was rather taken with the tracker's plea that he should come and kill the tiger that was molesting the cattle and threatening the lives of the peaceful inhabitants of the little mountain village. It would be a welcome change from his everlasting chase after the birds and butterflies of India.

It was midafternoon when they were ready to set out, Bendrib in the lead, Perry following, and in the rear trotted Sunnai, who carried the guns, as well as the knapsack.

At the entrance to the village they were met by a crowd of excited natives. There was much rejoicing over the arrival of the white sahib, whose deadly gun would put to rout "the great yellow flash" which had killed the finest bull in the chief's compound.

The beast had dragged the animal to the outskirts of the village and had evidently been driven away from his orgy by the rising of the sun.

An hour before sunset Perry and Daga Bendrib were seated on the top of a flimsy platform which they had hastily constructed between four palm trees within twenty feet of the dead bull.



HE WAS RATHER TAKEN WITH THE TRACKER'S PLEA.

A bower of branches and shrubs concealed them from the ground, and it was from this vantage point that Perry hoped to kill the tiger with one shot from his rifle.

He had killed tigers before, and the fine skins that graced the walls and floors of his bungalow bore testimony to his skill as a marksman.

The platform was ten feet above the ground, and, provided Perry could get good sight of the great cat, he would have no difficulty in adding another royal skin to his collection.

"Ah, sahib! Ishnie!" whispered the tracker.

"Ah, the tiger!" repeated Perry, moving cautiously beneath his bower of branches.

There came a snuffling growl from a nearby thicket.

Then followed silence.

Something moved in the thicket behind them.

"Two!" hissed the tracker.

Perry began to feel uneasy. The platform was a flimsy structure at best. If one or more tigers should attack it there was no doubt that the platform would tumble to pieces.

Again came the growl from the left hand thicket and again a responsive movement from the thicket behind the platform.

Perry had his gun sighted and pointed the barrel toward the dark bulk of the dead bull on the grass below.

While Perry listened for a repetition of the soul chilling growl from the left hand thicket, there suddenly came a horrifying interruption from the rear.

A wild, panther-like scream split the air; there was a rush of wind overhead, and the two hunters were suddenly struck flat to the platform by the falling of a heavy body upon them.

The platform shook, tottered and fell, crashing with its burden of two men and a full grown panther. As the platform fell Daga Bendrib's gun went off, scattering a double charge of buckshot.

The panther screamed savagely and thudded heavily to the ground, rolling over in agony. The double charge of buckshot had entered its eyes and, so far as the hunters were concerned, had put the panther out of business for that occasion at least.

But the excitement was not yet over.

As Perry and his tracker clambered up to the remains of the fallen platform and each found a perch on the supports which still clung to the four trees the moon found an opening among the trees and sent a broad shaft of silver light into the jungle where the dead bull lay, with the stiffening panther near by.

From the left hand thicket was a repetition of that low, deep, ominous growl, ending in an ugly snarl; there was a sudden rush of misplaced air as something long and yellow and black striped streaked across their vision to fall upon the body of the panther.

There were the rending of flesh and the crunching of bones.

The two men in the trees shivered and changed their positions.

His back was toward the platform, and his left shoulder presented a splendid mark for a bullet.

Bang!

The tiger whirled about, screamed with pain and rage and was about to charge the hunters in the tree when there came another interruption from the thicket.

This time it was a full grown tigress, and she leaped straight toward the broken platform.

A bullet from Perry's gun crashed through her brain, and she fell staggering at the very foot of the platform supports. At the same instant Daga Bendrib's gun spattered buckshot in the eyes of the wounded tiger, and while the beast pawed blindly at them another bullet from Perry's weapon stretched him beside his dead mate in the parched grass.

All around them were myriad sounds from the startled denizens of the jungle. Aroused by the double killing and attracted toward the spot by the dead bull came jackals, hyenas and others of their tribes.

Perry was anxious to protect the skins he had won at the risk of his life, so his gun answered the cries of the jungle beasts while Daga Bendrib sped toward the village to bring help.

In half an hour the two tigers and the panther were lashed at the heels of an ox team and the dead bodies were dragged to a deserted hut on the outskirts of the village where Daga Bendrib and his son-in-law and his two brothers and their son-in-laws set to work to skin the three animals for the great sahib.

Perry went back to the tree in order to guard the village from a surprise visit from the panther's mate or from other beasts, if the smell of blood should attract them into the village. The body of the bull had entirely disappeared now, and from distant thickets Perry could hear the jackals snarling over the fragments they had stolen.

He was tired and happy. The night's excitement had been a pleasant relaxation after the dullness of bug hunting at this season, and he was grateful indeed for the information which Daga Bendrib had brought him concerning the depredations of the tiger which had killed the bull.

Perry nodded in the crotch of the tree.

The sun was slanting in his eyes when he was awakened by the sound of voices at the foot of the tree.

He looked down and saw several men standing there. They were neighbors of Daga Bendrib. They were speaking of the triple killing made by the white sahib.

"That Daga Bendrib, he is a clever man," said one enviously. "Who but Daga Bendrib and his son-in-law would have dreamed of killing his best bull—the finest in the village—and then running ten miles to the bungalow of the white sahib and telling him that a tiger had been seen in the village and had carried off a bull?"

"Who indeed?" echoed his companions.

"And, lo, when the white sahib returns with Daga Bendrib and with the promise of many rupees if a tiger is shot, waits for the wicked beast—why, the tiger comes, and the tiger's mate, and, as if those were not rupees enough in crafty Daga Bendrib's pocket, there also comes a panther! All attracted by the smell of the dead bull's blood, when we all know that the jungle has been cleared of these beasts for many years! Whence came these blood hunters? From the distant mountains?"

"Clever Daga Bendrib!" muttered his companions as the three returned to the village.

Perry grinned to himself as he thought over this revelation of Daga Bendrib's device to earn a few rupees. His reward would be ample and the sacrifice of the fine bull would be well justified in the eyes of Daga Bendrib's neighbors, Daga Bendrib's sons-in-law and his brothers and their sons-in-law.

As for Perry himself, he calculated what the tiger skins were worth to him when he could return to America and dispose of them, and he was well satisfied with the craft of Daga Bendrib and with the opportune arrival of the "yellow flash."

RUMOR OF M'ADOO QUITTING

High Official Denies Story Secretary Will Retire From Cabinet.

SHARON, PA. — The Sharon Herald prints the following: "There is much speculation in Washington as to what disposition is to be made of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who, it is said, will relinquish his position in the cabinet. "There is a well-founded story in the capital that McAdoo is slated for ambassador to France. As to the successor of McAdoo, men close to the administration say Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer has the best chance for the appointment."

WASHINGTON. — "Mr. McAdoo will stay in the cabinet." This emphatic statement came from a high official source at the White House during the night in answer to rumors that Mr. McAdoo would resign as Secretary of the Treasury.

New French Army Rules.

The French are rejuvenating their army. They have concluded that a captain must retire at fifty-one, major at fifty-four, lieutenant colonel at fifty-six, colonel at fifty-eight, brigadier general at sixty, generals of divisions at sixty-two and generals of corps at sixty-four, while members of the high council of war may hang on a year longer.

Albania's Flag.

The flag of the new kingdom of Albania will be a tricolor—red, black and white in horizontal stripes. On the black stripe, which is in the middle, is a five pointed white star, the symbol of Scanderbeg, the Albanian national hero.

MEXICAN FEUDAL SYSTEM MUST GO

United States Has Sweeping Program for Republic.

GOES B YOND HUERTA'S CASE

Washington Government Will Contend That There Can Be No Peace South of Rio Grande Until Big Landed Estates Are Cut Up.—Carranza Must Agree Before Recognition.

Washington, May 18.—The program which United States officials have in mind for the permanent settlement of the Mexican situation goes far beyond the mere elimination of Huerta from the provisional presidency. It contemplates radical reorganization of the present system of land-holding in Mexico.

Surprising as this statement is, it is learned on the best of authority that the Washington government is prepared to insist upon this reform in any settlement of the Mexican situation. The president and his advisers are convinced that the elimination of the present semi-feudal land-holding system in Mexico and the opening up of these vast properties to ownership by the peons are fundamental to a complete and permanent restoration of peace in Mexico.

Carranza Must Agree.

The administration will insist upon assurances of this reform even if Carranza and Villa are in control at Mexico City. There is good reason in fact to believe that President Wilson in the event of a constitutionalist victory will withhold recognition from the Carranza government until absolute pledges of this character have been given. As viewed by administration leaders any settlement of the Mexican situation which does not provide for the doing away of the present system of land ownership by a small group of favored individuals is certain to fall.

Huerta Typifies System.

There will follow a repetition of the scenes of the last two years under new leaders and with possibly new troops, but the spirit of discontent and revolution will, it is contended, be just as strong as it is today. Huerta, as the administration has now come to view the situation in the southern republic, merely typifies a system of government in Mexico which must be destroyed before the United States can hope for any permanent peace and order on its southern border.

SAYS MELLEN WAS BUNKED

J. E. Gaffney Declares That Inspector Byrnes' Influence Was Joke.

New York, May 18.—James E. Gaffney, close personal and political friend of Charles F. Murphy and formerly a member of contracting companies with which relatives of the Tammany leader were associated, states that the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company was "bunked" if, as Mr. Mellen has testified, they paid $1,200,000 to influence the board of estimate at the time they were asking for certain modifications in the original franchise of the New York, West Chester and Boston railroad.

Mr. Gaffney declared that the political influence of the late Inspector Thomas Byrnes, through whom Mellen says he worked, was a joke.

FEAR BOY MAY BE LYNCHED

Ohio Sheriff Takes Harley Beard to Another Town.

Chicago, May 18.—Fears that Harley Beard, the eighteen-year-old murderer, would be lynched if he was taken back to the scene of his crime caused an abandonment of the original plan for extraditing him.

Sheriff Len R. Sloan of Ironton, Lawrence county, Ohio, where the triple murder was committed instead of taking him to Ironton made arrangements for leaving him at Portsmouth, a town about thirty miles this side. He will be kept there, according to the sheriff, until the anger of the residents of Lawrence county subsides.

THIRD TIME SHE GOT DIVORCE

Twice George Tried to End Life, and Wife Saved Him.

Flint, Mich., May 18.—After twenty years of peaceful married life George Snow, of this city, attempted his life by slashing his wrists. No sooner had he recovered than he drank a quantity of poison, but this method also failed to kill George. During this trying period his wife, Mary, patiently cared for him, and each time nursed him back to life. But when he left a note, stating that he had drowned himself, on a pile of his clothing on the river bank, her patience failed her: she sued for divorce and the decree was granted after George returned and was refused admission to the house.

The finding of the clothes on the bank of the Flint river caused considerable sensation here. The police dragged the river several days and used dynamite, but no trace of Snow was found.

FORD TO SEND IDLE TO ASSIST FARMERS

Company to Provide Jobs for Employes Laid Off.

Detroit, Mich., May 18.—With the arrival of the annual slack season at the Ford Motor company's manmouth plant this year plans are under way to provide farm work for employes who are unable to obtain other employment.

For the next six weeks men will be laid off, it is said, at the rate of about 1,000 a week. After thirty days of idleness, provided they are unable to do better, they will probably be taken back into the organization.

"We are decreasing the number of workers in our shops at this time, just as we have in the past," said James Couzins, vice pesident of the company. "We do not intend to work any hardship. Married men will be kept as much as possible, the unmarried men being let out first."

An employe said that a daily bulletin giving the names of farmers and others looking for steady workers was to be posted at the plant.

Fatalities to the number of thirteen were reported, two of which occurred in the iron mining district, three in the copper mine, two on railroads and the remainder distributed among various industries throughout the state. There are now 1,500 employers of Michigan operating under the compensation law, embracing more than half a million employes.

MAN IS HELD CAPTIVE HOURS IN QUICKSAND

C. F. Belinski Computes Hours to Live as Aid Arrives.

Hammond, Ind., May 18.—Quicksand in the Chicago flats near Hammond, held a man prisoner for six hours Friday and would have resulted in his death had not help arrived at the last moment.

C. F. Belinski of Chicago attempted to cross the flats. He was unfamiliar with the beds of quicksand and soon found himself hopelessly gripped by the mud and sand. His struggles only resulted in his sinking deeper. He weighs 250 pounds.

At 11 o'clock Mr. Belinski looked at his watch and estimated that he might survive until 6 o'clock. By 4 o'clock his strength was spent, but his waving arms attracted the attention of Nick Hall of East Chicago, who was walking on the bank of the Indiana Harbor canal.

Hall rushed for aid, and by means of planks managed to crawl within a few feet of the imprisoned man. A lariat was thrown about Belinski's shoulders, and thirty minutes later he was in St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond. His clothes had been torn from his body and he had suffered from exposure.

Attention likewise is focused on efforts being made to get William Rockefeller to testify. Meanwhile Mr. Mellen returned to New Haven to get documents which will aid him in making still further revelations, which, it is believed, will surpass in interest those which he has already made on the stand.

TAFT PEACE ORATOR AT FREE SYNAGOGUE

Rabbi In Charge Bluffs I. W. W. by Invitation to Talk.

New York, May 18.—Ex-President Taft, speaking on the subject of "International Peace" at a Peace Sunday meeting in the Free Synagogue at Carnegie Hall said:

"If we are to be involved in war because of Mexican anarchy let us have it fully understood that we go into it 'in the service of mankind' as the president phrases it, and not upon the issue of a mere punctilio in naval ceremonial."

When the service began Rabbi Wise stepped forward and said that if there was any man or woman in the audience who wanted to speak he would welcome them to the stage and ask the indulgence of his congregation.

"I have heard," he said, "that some men and women have threatened to interrupt the service. If there be any interruption I trust the person wishing to be heard would interrupt me and not the distinguished and welcome guests of the hour. There will be no arrests, and no person will be ejected. My people are not afraid of the truth."

There was a few minutes silence, but not a voice was heard in the congregation. Oscar S. Straus introduced Mr. Taft.

The Mistake of Her Life

It Was Rectified by a Third Party

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

I am fond of motoring and am considered about as good a driver as any woman in the town in which I live. In summer I make long tours, sometimes extending over several weeks.

One night while touring I stopped at a neat farmhouse, the owner and sole occupant of which was a young woman about twenty-seven and comely, but there was a dissatisfied expression on her face as though she had met with some serious disappointment.

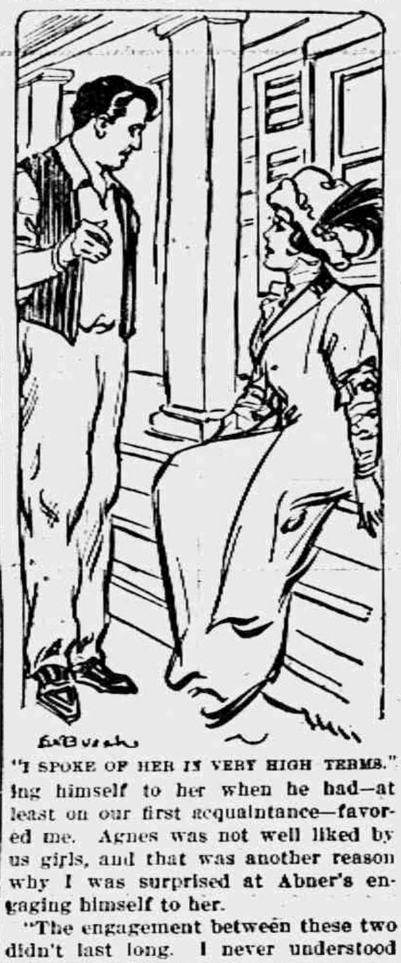
She told me her name was Elizabeth Wyman; her father and mother were dead and had left her the property on which she lived—a dairy farm. She had nothing to complain of except loneliness. I suggested that an attractive young woman with a nice farm should have no trouble in getting a good husband, the best panacea for loneliness. This brought about a confidence which resulted in her giving me the cause of her disappointed look.

"The trouble about men," she said, "is that they don't understand us women."

"And perhaps," I interrupted, "we women don't understand men."

"When I was a girl living here with my parents a man named Warren bought a farm down where the road crosses the creek. He had a son named Abner. I first met Abner Warren at a cornhusking, and he picked me out among all the girls present, dancing with me oftener than with any of the rest of them. He seemed then to be a fine, manly fellow who could look any one straight in the eye. He didn't treat me right afterward, but however he acted he had that same honest pride in his look.

"Two or three of the girls made a dead set for him, and Agnes Walker got him. I thought at the time she must have managed it very adroitly, and I couldn't understand his engaging himself to her when he had—at least on our first acquaintance—favored me. Agnes was not well liked by us girls, and that was another reason why I was surprised at Abner's engaging himself to her.



"I SPOKE OF HER IN VERY HIGH TERMS."

"The engagement between these two didn't last long. I never understood why it was broken, and no one else seemed to know. Abner never said a word about it. As for Agnes, all she would say was that she didn't care. It was whispered about that she didn't confine her lovemaking to Abner, and he objected to having to divide it with some one else. It was the general impression that Agnes was one of that kind of girls who make, or seem to make, easy conquests of men, but who don't seem to have the faculty of holding them after they get them.

"As soon as Abner Warren broke with Agnes he renewed his attentions to me. I was glad enough to get him back, though his affair with her left a scar in me. He was very respectful to me as well as attentive, and it was not long before he proposed to me. Before I accepted him I told him I thought I had a right to know what had passed between him and Agnes. He replied that he didn't think I had any such right. I gave up the point, though I was not satisfied to do so, and we became engaged.

"All went well with us till one day Bettie Underwood came to see me, ostensibly to talk about some church matter, but I've always believed since that she had another object in view. While we were talking she asked me if I'd heard that Agnes Walker and Cyrus Buckley were engaged. I said I had not, remarking at the same time that if it were so Agnes had not been a long while getting over her affair with Abner. Bet replied that 'Agnes wouldn't marry Abner on any account. Naturally I asked why.

"'You don't know anything about that matter,' she said. 'You've, doubtless, heard Abner's side of the story, but you've never heard Agnes'.'

"'I've never heard either side,' I replied.

"She went on talking about something else, but what she had said left a very unpleasant impression on me. I tried not to think of it, but the more I tried to banish it the more it persisted in coming back to me. At last I could stand it no longer and spoke to Abner about it, telling him what Bettie Underwood had said.

"He seemed ill at ease and tried to turn the matter aside. This made me the more suspicious, and I told him that if he had treated Agnes badly I should know it, for if a man will deal wrongfully with one woman he will do so with another. To this he replied that a girl about to be married had best leave alone her lover's previous affairs with women. Her only concern was his treatment of her.

"I insisted that he should make a clean breast of it, and he refused. Then I took off the engagement ring he had given me and handed it to him. He looked at me for a few moments with a sorrowful expression, then told me that I was making the mistake of my life, and would prove the truth of what he said. He wouldn't treat any woman badly unless she treated him or some one whom he loved badly, and then not for revenge, but for infliction of a just punishment. He left me and has never been to see me since."

My hostess paused in her story, and I saw that what her lover had said to her was true. She, not he, had made the mistake of a life. Doubtless there was something between him and the girl he had broken with that he could not speak of without casting blame upon her. If both were at fault there was all the more reason that whatever it was it should be kept secret. There are many affairs of little or much importance that cannot be unraveled without a regular trial, and even then it is often impossible to extract the truth.

But I said nothing of this to the story teller—at least, not then. I was curious to know what her lover meant by saying that he would prove that she was making a mistake in endeavoring to force him to make a clean breast of his relations with his first fiancee. So I asked her if there was no more to tell.

"Yes," she continued, "there is one very important matter to tell. Soon after Abner's parting with me I heard that he had become attentive to Bettie Underwood. I inquired if Bettie accepted his attentions and was informed that she was very much pleased with them. Can it be, I thought, that she will engage herself to the man against whom she had covertly warned me? I had not long to wait for an answer to my question. It was soon generally understood that Abner and Bettie were engaged. One day I met Bet in the street and asked her if the report was true. She said it was and flounced away from me, evidently desiring to avoid a discussion of what she knew I had on my mind."

Again the narrator paused, and I asked her if she had finished her story.

"There is little more to tell," she said. "The engagement between Abner and Bettie lasted just one month when it was broken off. Since Abner never came to see me after I returned my engagement ring I could not ask him what it all meant. I suppose he engaged himself to Bettie to show me how silly I had been to permit her to make a breach between him and me, and that she did it because she wanted him herself. I doubt if she was a girl of much feeling, for she married some one else within a year after she broke with Abner."

I asked Miss Wyman if Abner Warren had married, and she said he had not. He had since inherited the farm on which he lived and kept house alone. Before leaving I asked to be informed of its location, thinking that I would like to meet him. It happened that my route passed his house, and I made up my mind I would find an excuse to have a word with him.

I bid my hostess a sympathetic good-by, promising to make her a visit on another occasion, then started again on my travels. When I reached the house of Abner Warren I left my car at the gate, and, seeing a man at work, asked him some questions as to the roads I was to traverse. In the course of the conversation I gave him an opportunity to tell me his name and learned that he was the man I sought. Then I asked him for a glass of buttermilk and sat on the porch of his house while he got it for me.

While drinking the buttermilk I told him that I had been entertained by a Miss Elizabeth Wyman, who lived a few miles down the road, and I spoke of her in very high terms. I told him that I wondered that so lovely and attractive a woman had not been appropriated and hinted that I surmised she had experienced a disappointment.

I could not help being amused at the interest he took in the subject, and when I added that Miss Wyman was one of those true women who when they gave their hearts away would never withdraw them I hoped he would give me his confidence, but he did not, proving himself to be the kind of man I supposed him to be from the story I had heard. However, I thought it quite probable from the effect my words produced on him that something would come of my effort. I left him without having given him any reason to suspect that I knew his secret.

What I said to him bore quick fruit, for, returning that way, I stopped at Miss Wyman's and found a great change in her.

"What do you think has happened since you were here?" she asked, her face lighted by a radiant smile.

"What?" I asked.

"Abner Warren has been to see me."

"You don't mean it? And all is made up?"

"Yes, and we are engaged again."

"The Lord be praised!"

STYLE IN OLD ST. LOUIS.

Dress of the Men and Women There In Colonial Times.

Monette in his history of the valley of the Mississippi tells of the habit of dress which prevailed in St. Louis in colonial days. Here is what he has to say:

"The leggings were of coarse linen in summer and of deerskin in winter. The principal garment for the men in cold weather was generally a coarse blanket capote drawn over the shirt and long vest. The capote served the double purpose of cloak and hat, for the hood attached to the collar behind hung upon the back and shoulders as a cape, and when desired it served to cover the whole head, and especially among the boatmen, voyageurs and courseurs de bois the head was enveloped in a blue handkerchief, turbanlike, as a protection from the solar heat and noxious insects.

"The same material, of lighter quality and fancy colors, wreathed with bright colored ribbons and sometimes flowers, formed the fancy headdress of the females on festive occasions. At other times they also used the handkerchief in the more patriarchal style.

"The dress of the matrons was simple and plain. The old fashioned short jacket and petticoat, varied to suit the diversities of taste, was the common overdress of the women. The feet in winter were protected by Indian moccassins or the more unwieldy clog shoe, but in summer and in dry weather the foot was left uncovered and free except on festive occasions and holidays, when it was adorned with the light moccasin, gorgeously ornamented with brilliants of porcupine quills, shells, beads or lace ingeniously wrought over the front instead of buckles and on the side flaps."—St. Louis Times.

England's Mother Church.

The oldest frequented church in England is probably St. Martin's, at Canterbury, and you may call it the mother church of England. Walk up from the outskirts of the city and you will pass the font which gave baptism to King Ethelbert 1,300 years ago. The font still stands, the worshipers still mount the slope, and one considers whether it was Augustine or Bertha who dragged the king and husband to that font.—London Answers.

If the efforts of those now engaged in the work of reviving the Alumni of Tecumseh High School are sucessful it will be a source of great pleasure to many who would enjoy meeting their old classmates and friends once more. The 12th of June, 1914 has been selected as the day of meeting. A program is being prepared, and other arrangements are being made for the event.

"SHOOTING THE SUN."

Simplest Way of Locating a Ship's Position at Sea.

Out of sight of land a ship's geographical position is determined either by keeping a careful record of the course steered and the distance run, known as dead reckoning, or by the combined use of chronometer and sextant—that is, by observation of the heavenly bodies. The operation of finding the latitude and longitude of observation can be performed in a number of ways, of which the simplest and most convenient is by measuring the altitude of the sun above the horizon at noon, as is indicated on the vernier of the sextant and spoken of at sea as "shooting the sun." An arithmetical computation by the aid of logarithms is thus quickly made which shows exactly how far the ship is north or south of the equator, or, in other words, the latitude.

Finding the longitude, however, is a somewhat longer process. An observation is made either in the forenoon or afternoon, the chronometer time of the horizon contact of the sun's image being noted. A calculation is then made which gives the exact time at the spot where the ship happens to be, and, as the chronometer carried aboard shows the exact time at Greenwich, the prime meridian of longitude, the difference between the two expresses in hours and minutes (easily convertible into degrees and miles) the distance east or west of Greenwich.

Having thus, roughly speaking, found the latitude and longitude, a dot placed on the chart at the exact point where the lines of latitude and longitude cross denotes the ship's position.—Travel Magazine.

FLOGGED THE FAT MEN.

Spartan Cure For Those Who Grew Too Stout For Military Duty.

Among the ancient Spartans everything was considered secondary to military efficiency, and with a view to securing this the boys and men were by law kept in a continual state of "training." No deformed child was allowed to live. Boys were taken from their homes and subjected to military regulations at the age of seven. They were compelled to wear the same single garment winter and summer. At twenty they joined the ranks and from that age till they reached sixty were required to dine at the public tables, where only a certain quantity was supplied for each man. The magistrates interfered in absurdly small matters. They regulated the degree of fatness to which it was lawful for any citizen to extend his body.

Those who dared to grow too fat or too soft for military service and exercise were sometimes soundly flogged. Aelian in his history relates that Naucils, son of Polytus, was brought before the ephors (magistrates) and the whole assembly of Sparta, and "his unlawful fatness" was publicly exposed and he was threatened with perpetual banishment if he did not bring his body within the regular Spartan compass and give up the culpable mode of living, which was declared to be more worthy of an Ionian than a Spartan.

His Periodicals.

"Do you take any periodicals?" asked the clergyman on his first round of parish visits.

"Well, I don't," replied the woman, "but my husband takes 'em frequent. I do wish you'd try to get him to sign the pledge."—Judge.

Often the Case.

"It was a fair fight, wasn't it?"

"Sure it was. The under dog got whipped."

"Call that a fair fight?"

"Wait now, let me explain. The under dog provoked it."—St. Louis Republic.

IMMIGRATION

Lecture Given at M. E. Church Friday Evening.

The lecture given by May Cummisky Bliss, assisted by Miss Coon of Kalamazoo, at the M. E. church Friday evening, was a very interesting one. She treated the subject of Immigration from a personal knowledge She went to New Yoek and shared their bed and board, conferred with the authorities at Ellis Island and knew whereof she spoke

Her lecture was finely illustrated with views of the detention quarters, the hospital and other places of interest at Ellis Island and also at San-Francisco.

LAVERN M. IDE.

The sad message was received Monday morning of the death of Lavern Ide who passed away at his home in Mount Vernon, N. Y., Sunday, after a lingering illness of valvular heart trouble, aged 54 years.

His mother Mrs. M. Ide and his daughter Mrs. Margaret Postal of Evart, Mich., left for New York last week and reached his bedside in time for him to rally and speak to them.

His body arrived in Tecumseh today and the funeral was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock with Masonic honors.

Lavern was a former Tecumseh boy and graduated from the high school with the Class of '78. His is the second death among its members, Mrs. G. N. Stacy passing away just a year ago.

He leaves to mourn his early death a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Margaret Postal of Evart, his mother and brother Edgar Ide of California besides a large circle of relatives and friends.

FORMER TECUMSEH RESIDENT CELEBRATES 95 BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Philura Hood, who for many years claimed Tecumseh as her home, celebrated the ninety-fifth year of her birth on Wednesday May thirteenth at the home of her grandson R. E. Lewis Detroit.

Coming from the East in 1835, she landed at Monroe and made the trip to Tecumseh by wagon. Since that time she has witnessed many changes in the mode of transportation. Many of the old landmarks around Tecumseh are well remembered by her.

The last twenty-five years of her life have been spent in Detroit, where she has a large circle of friends, to many of whom she is "grandma Hood".

Mrs. Hood was the recipient of an abundance of beautiful flowers and other gifts, which told more than words the high esteem in which she is held among her many friends.

While Mrs Hood has not visited Tecumseh in several yeary, yet she keeps posted on news events through the HERALD, of which she is a subscriber.

Light refreshments were served during the evening and a most delightful evening was the report of all present.

ONE SURE REBELLION.

I never kick on doin' chores
Or workin' round the yard;
I never make a lot o' roars
If daddy works me hard;
But, gee, it sets me crazy,
And I'm mad enough to squall,
When I haf to keep on workin'
When the team plays ball!

I never make a single kick
When I must lug in wood.
It is a little daily trick
That I have learned real good.
I help ma do the dishes,
But my gladness takes a fall
If I haf to keep on workin'
When the team plays ball!

"Yes; those political warriors are chocolate soldiers, so to speak."—Philadelphia Press.

"I tell you it's unreasonable for a man to expect his wife to get along on nothing while he is spending money and having a good time."

"I agree with you. Most of the domestic unhappiness is caused by men who expect their wives to take care of their homes and get nothing for it but what they have to eat and wear."

"You've got the right idea. I give my wife a dollar a week for pin money whether she needs it or not."—Chicago Record-Herald.

NEW MODERN DANCING

FLUORINE A RABID GAS.

Nothing Can Resist the Power of This Chemical Fury.

The fury of the chemical world is the element fluorine, although, strangely enough, it exists peacefully in company with calcium in fluorspar and also in a few other compounds.

Although this element was known and named a good while ago, it long resisted the efforts of chemists to isolate it, for the instant the compound containing it was torn apart the free fluorine attacked and combined with whatever substance composed the vessel containing it. It was finally isolated by the great French chemist Moissan.

Fluorine is a rabid gas that nothing can resist. It combines with all metals, explosively with some, or if they are already combined with some other nonmetallic element it mercilessly tears them away from it and takes them to itself.

In uniting with sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium and aluminium the metals become heated, even to redness, by the fervor of its embrace. Iron filings slightly warm burst into brilliant scintillations when exposed to it. Manganese does the same. Even the noble metals, which at melting heat proudly resist the fascinations of oxygen, succumb to this chemical siren at moderate temperatures.

Glass is devoured at once and water ceases to be water by contact with this gas, which, combined with its hydrogen, at the same moment forms the acrid, glass dissolving hydrofluoric acid and liberates ozone.

Even hydrofluoric acid eats into and destroys every known substance except platinum and lead.—Exchange.

BURNING WATER.

Coal Wet Gives a Much Larger Amount of Heat Than When Dry.

Dry coal does not produce as much heat as coal that is considerably damp. It is, of course, a fact that a greater heat makes the fuel more valuable, and it is essential to know how to secure the most from ordinary fuel.

Coal that is to be burned in a furnace, a stove or a grate for immediate heat will produce nearly one-fourth more heat when wet than when dry. Coal that is to be placed in a stove or furnace to be closed up so as to produce a long continued, moderate heat will produce a little more than one-third more heat if there is plenty of moisture than can be secured if the coal is real dry.

Large lumps of coal can be soaked in a pail of water for a half hour, and the heat will be increased nearly one-half. This is done in cases where the lumps are used in stoves tightly closed, such as those known as air tight furnaces.

Several pails of water thrown over a ton of coal will increase its value greatly to the consumer. Coal will burn briskly in wet and almost airless mines, and it is said the heat is intense. When there is a fire and the coal pile burns it is difficult to drown that portion of the fire with water. We might as well secure a little of the heat stored in burning water as to permit it all to go unused.—Philadelphia North American.

SENIOR RECEPTION

A Scene of Light and Beauty with Music and Mirth.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 15, '14.

All nature conspired to make the evening a pleasant one for the reception given by the Seniors to the Juniors on Friday evening.

The lawn at the home of Seymour Orr, president of the class was a scene of enchantment. A broad white archway covered with boughs of leaves and flowers marked the entrance. All around were huge white tile, laden with flowers; cozy seats were scattered around, shaded by huge Japanese umbrellas: hammocks were swung in convenient places. The front porch was enclosed in a bank of green while overhead many Japanese umbrellas furnished a further covering to the orchestra that furnished sweet music through the evening. Electric lights in Japanese lanterns were generously scattered all over the lawn dispensing a mellow light upon the youth and beauty of the assembled company.

On the south side the many tables and chairs with their dainty decorations pointed the way where most appetising refreshments were served. The stars and stripes, the pennants, the mingling of light and shade made the picture one long to be remembered.

The program was a musical one throughout and every number as it floated out upon the breeze thrilled every one with its sweetness.

The program was opened with a selection by Heidenreich's orchestra which was followed by a

Piano solo—Ivaline Lamkin
Vocal solo—John Pennington
Violin solo—Leon McLachlin
Orchestra
Vocal solo—Fred Dickinson
Piano solo—Camilla Hayden
Duet—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dickinson
Orchestra.

Though the evening air was chilly, yet no one seemed to care, for all were enjoying themselves to the fullest extent and the reception of the class of 1914 to 1915 passes into history as one of the prettiest most enjoyable affairs in the history of Tecumseh High School.

CLASS MEET.

In the local H. S. Field Meet, Monday, Seniors easily won out.

In the first part of the meet including Shot, Discus and Baseball Throws, High Jump and Broad Jump, every boy in high school was supposed to enter and only a few were absent. Those receiving nearly a perfect score were Orr, Schneider and Underwood.

In the last events three entries from each class were entered.

Final score—

Seniors	68 1
Sophmores	31.5
Juniors	31
Freshmen	27.6

Seniors received cup presented by Jas. M. Cork, to be held until next annual meet.

THE BOY OF TODAY.

For deeds of reckless daring commend us to the small boy who stops at nothing in his search for adventure. Bennie Hastings, aged 13 years, was the principal actor on the scene in Brownville near the electric plant Sunday, shooting the power dam in a small boat and then swimming over it later.

That the descent was a dangerous one never seemed to enter his mind He was out for fun and he got it even if the rocks and debris that had gathered did hit him hard. The timely arrival of his father, however, cooled his ardor and prevented any further performances along this line.

Referendum of Baltimore Convention Sustains Wilson.

Washington, May 18.—Out of 867 delegates to the Baltimore convention of the national democracy who have replied to Senator Gore's letter inviting their views on the matter of the proposed repeal of the tolls exemption legislation, 702 have replied announcing that they are in favor of the repeal. Only 127 expresed themselves as opposed to the repeal and the rest are non-committal.

Senator Gore will probably make public these letters on the floor of the senate, although some of them have already been published. Senator Gore hit upon the plan of a referendum to meet the charge of senators who are opposed to the repeal bill that Democrats who were supporting the repeal were repudiating the platform pledge of their party.

GOOD ADVICE

A Tecumseh Citizen Gives Information of Priceless Value

When you suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, nervousness, feel weak, languid, depressed, have annoying urinary disorders: Do you know what to do? Some Tecumseh people do. Read statement that follows. It's from a Tecumseh citizen. Testimony that can be investigated.

E. A. Hodges, retired carpenter, W. Cumming St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and again advise other kidney sufferers to try them. Several years ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procuring my supply at Wright & Son's drug store and I found them to be a tonic for my kidneys and very prompt in relieving aches and pains in the back. Others of my family have taken this remedy and it has done good work in each instance."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hodges had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

It is hard to laugh at misfortune after you have run into a rocking chair in the dark.

Relieves Bladder Distress and Weakness.

Irregular, painful bladder weaknesses disappear when the kidneys are strong and healthfully active. Take Foley Kidney Pills for that burning, scalding sensation-irregular, painful action-heavy, sore feeling and bladder distress. FIVE ARE SAVED FROM LIFEBOAT Dying Survivors of Columbian Are Picked Up.

STEAMER WAS BURNED MAY 3

U. S. Seneca Takes Men Aboard Nearly Dead—Of Sixteen Who Put Out from Fire-Destroyed Liner, Eleven Perished—Survivors on Way to Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., May 18.—A brief wireless message received here reports the finding by the U. S. revenue cutter, Seneca, of the missing third lifeboat of the Leyland Line steamship Columbian, which was destroyed by fire in mid-Atlantic just two weeks ago Sunday.

Of the sixteen men who scrambled over the side of the liner into the third boat only five were alive when found by the Seneca. All the others had succumbed to the terrible privations to which they had been exposed during the two weeks when the steamship lanes on the north Atlantic were being scoured for some trace of the missing boat.

Those alive were the chief officer, three seamen and a fireman. These men were in a terrible state of exhaustion when picked up. Half crazed from thirst, hunger and exposure, they presented an awful sight when the bluejackets from the Seneca reached the side of the little craft.

Survivors Are Helpless.

The men were helpless, being scarcely able to move hand or foot and their voices had failed to a whisper. They were in despair, having given up all hope of rescue when the boat from the Seneca came to succor them.

No attempt was made to get any detailed story from them. They required the utmost care and attention, and this was given them by the physician, Captain Johnson, the officers and all on board of the Seneca.

Eleven Put Overboard.

Short of provisions from the outset, they had little to subsist on, and one by one they died. Gradually the human burden of the boat became lessened, eleven of the men having died and their bodies consigned to the depths.

After rescuing the men the Seneca started full steam ahead, and is expected to reach Halifax some time today.

SHOOTING THE RAPIDS.

Feats of the Arab Boys of Egypt, Who Are Expert Swimmers.

Among the most expert of swimmers are the Arab boys of Egypt. Like all other boys, they are fond of displaying their skill before strangers. This is how they shoot the rapids of the Nile:

Seating themselves astride a log of wood about six feet long and buoyant enough to support them waist high out of water, they ride it with the seat and gestures of a jockey and with hands and feet keep it straight with the line of the current.

The fall is shot with an ease and grace that do away with the sense of danger one would expect to feel at seeing a human being hurled along amid such a boil and turmoil of waters, but once at the bottom the youngsters have a hard struggle to induce their "horses" to turn out of the course.

To do this they avail themselves of the impetus acquired by the log in its shoot, and, throwing themselves full length upon it, they seem, with a sudden stroke from the left leg and arm, to drive it and themselves out of the current.

To fall in this would be dangerous even to Arab swimmers. Immediately below lie ugly rocks on which the heavy stream breaks with great violence.—Exchange.

They Were Solid.

Doubtless you have heard the story of the retired contractor who had engaged an artist to paint a portrait of his daughter. "Mind you," he said to the astonished artist, "I want none of your cheap slapdash work—three good coats."

Which bonmot leads me up to the story that a teacher in one of the west side schools told me the other day about a little girl. Her parents, it seems, had been celebrating their silver wedding, and little Rosie the next morning, with commendable family pride, was boasting of the quality of the presents received.

"There was a whole set," she said, "of solid silver teaspoons."

"Are you sure, Rosie," asked the teacher, "that the spoons were solid?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply triumphant; "solid silver—triple plate."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Candle Power.

In computing candle power it must be remembered that as there are many different sizes of candles the rate of burning and intensity of light radiated would vary, so that the standard candle, upon which England and the United States agree, must be used. This standard candle is made of pure spermaceti, exactly round, seven-eighths inch in diameter and of a length such that six weigh one pound, and with wick adjusted to burn 120 grains of spermaceti per hour. And the 1,000,000 candle power searchlight must emit a light equal to 1,000,000 standard candles.—New York American.

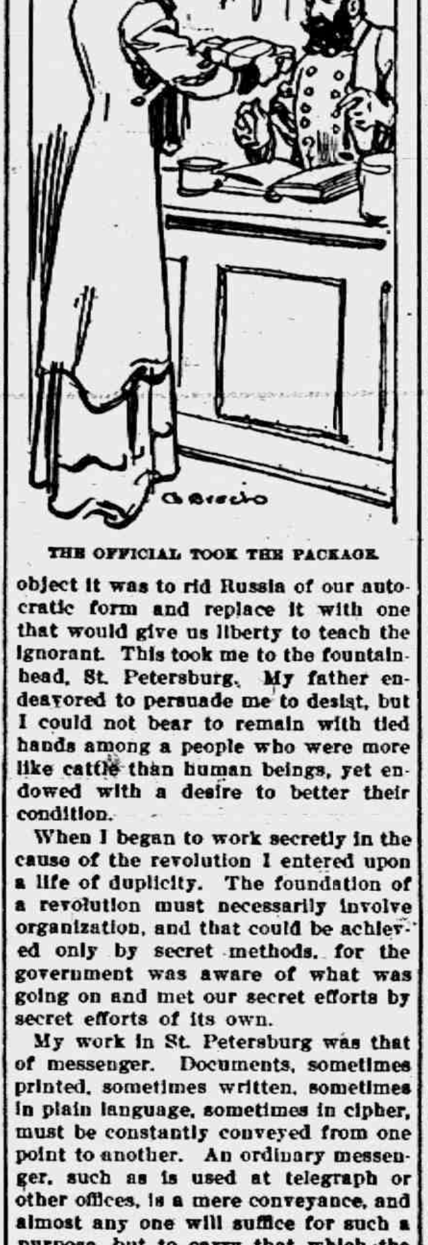
A Daring Ruse

It Was Practiced by One Working For the Russian Revolution

By MARIA FOEDEROVNA

Women are natural educators, especially of children, and a great many of us Russian women have been drawn into revolution through efforts to break down that ignorance which unfits the large mass of our people for free government. I am the daughter of a Russian country gentleman living on the family estate in the province of Kostroma and began my revolutionary career by teaching the moujiks (peasants) on my father's estate. I taught not only the children, but grown men and women, and when I saw their anxiety to better their condition, which they seemed to know they would do by learning, I felt that I could take any risk in their behalf.

When I was stopped in this work I did not attempt openly to defy the government, because I knew such a course would be futile. I allied myself with one of those secret organizations whose object it was to rid Russia of our autocratic form and replace it with one that would give us liberty to teach the ignorant. This took me to the fountainhead, St. Petersburg. My father endeavored to persuade me to desist, but I could not bear to remain with tied hands among a people who were more like cattle than human beings, yet endowed with a desire to better their condition.



THE OFFICIAL TOOK THE PACKAGE.

When I began to work secretly in the cause of the revolution I entered upon a life of duplicity. The foundation of a revolution must necessarily involve organization, and that could be achieved only by secret methods, for the government was aware of what was going on and met our secret efforts by secret efforts of its own.

My work in St. Petersburg was that of messenger. Documents, sometimes printed, sometimes written, sometimes in plain language, sometimes in cipher, must be constantly conveyed from one point to another. An ordinary messenger, such as is used at telegraph or other offices, is a mere conveyance, and almost any one will suffice for such a purpose, but to carry that which the whole power of an autocratic government is used to intercept and which, if intercepted, will cause the banishment to the icy regions of Siberia of those implicated, besides doing great harm to the cause, requires coolness, courage and resource.

One night at a secret meeting of the circle of which I was a member I was given a package which I was told contained printed circulars condemning the government and calling on those who loved freedom to enroll themselves for the cause. There was nothing in the circulars in case they fell into the hands of the government to injure any one but the person having them in his or her possession, though such person might be led to implicate others. On account of this possible implication and for my own safety, I was cautioned as usual that if suspicious of being watched to get rid of the package if possible. It contained a hundred circulars, which was all one person would be intrusted with to carry on account of size. I had a pocket made in the skirt of my dress especially adapted to carry concealed articles.

The morning after receiving my instructions, being ready to start out on the duty assigned me, I looked out of my window down on to the street to see if any suspicious person loitered near. People were passing to and fro. A short distance up the street two men were standing talking together. They seemed to be discussing something which I assumed was of no importance to me, for they never once glanced in my direction.

And yet these men were spies of the government. One of them was instructing the other that the house in which I lived was under suspicion and any one issuing from it was to be followed, and if an arrest seemed warranted the person suspected was to be taken before a police officer. But I, not knowing this, went downstairs and pursued my way unconscious of the danger that threatened me.

However, I had noted the two men and, after walking a short distance, stopped at a shop window ostensibly to look at the goods displayed there, but really to glance back at the two men I have mentioned. They had separated, and one of them was coming toward me. He stopped to look up at the signs above him as though looking for some especial place. Had he come right on I might not have been very fearful. As it was I inferred that, seeing me glance back from before the shop window, he had pretended to be looking for some particular address in order to divert my suspicion from him.

My heart leaped up in my throat. However, I would soon know if this man was following me, and I nerved myself to meet the issue if he were. I walked on, turning down a cross street leading away from the point I had started for, and presently, stopping again at a shop where women's hats were displayed, I glanced back. The man I feared was just passing behind a projection of a building.

I now felt assured that he was watching me, but resolved to make one more trial before acting upon the supposition that he was. I walked on and turned down another street, taking a direction toward the point from which I had started. Then, suddenly turning at a right angle so that I could see my shadower without appearing to do so, I caught him coming toward me and looking straight at me.

Owing to the dangerous work in which I was engaged I spent much of my leisure time in thinking up expedients in case I should be caught red handed. I now resolved to put in practice one of the most daring of which I had conceived. I was sure that this man was a police official and that he was following me. At any moment he was liable to have me arrested, though I fancied that unless he believed he had excited my suspicions he would permit me to go where I intended, leaving me to implicate others. As to dropping my package, I carried a knife with which I could slit my pocket and let it drop out. Could I have got far enough away from my shadower I would have done this, but after I turned so quickly as to see him coming for me he drew nearer and I was in great trepidation as to being arrested.

I therefore resolved to put in practice the plan I have referred to. I knew very well every police station in St. Petersburg and directed my steps to the nearest one. On reaching it I turned into the building, my watcher following me to the very door, and in a few minutes I was standing at a desk, behind which sat an official in uniform.

"I have found a package in the street," I said, "wrapped in such fashion as printed matter is usually wrapped to send through the mails. There is no address on it. I was about to tear off the cover when it occurred to me that it might contain something of an illegal character. It seemed to me that I would better turn it over to a representative of the government. If it is ordinary matter no harm is done; if there is anything criminal in it my action in bringing it to you is proof that I am in no way to blame for having it in my possession."

I nerved myself to say this as ingenuously as possible. The official took the package which I handed him and, breaking it open, ran his eye over it. The expression on his face changed at once from one of carelessness to one of intense interest.

"Where did you find this?" he asked.

"I was looking in at a shop window not far from here in which hats were exhibited, and, casting my eyes down to the flagging, saw it lying at my feet."

"Did you see any one moving away who might have dropped it?"

I pretended to ransack my memory, then said:

"After emerging from my home this morning to do some shopping I noticed a man going in the same direction as I. He had been standing at the milliner's window just before I reached it."

"Can you identify him?"

"I could if I were to see him, but he is doubtless far from me now, one of the crowd."

When I said this I believed my shadower was at the door of the police office. And yet on second thought it seemed that seeing me go into the station he would suppose that he had got on to the wrong track and would abandon his chase. But he would likely report it, and then I would not get off so easily.

The officer at the desk took my address and permitted me to go where I liked; but, believing that he would send some one to make sure that I had given him the right one, I left him resolving to go straight home. I was relieved not to see my shadower waiting for me outside the station. As soon as I reached my home I put on a disguise I kept concealed there—that of a decrepit old man—and left the building. At the door I passed my shadower, talking with a man I had seen at the police office.

I made my way to the home of a prominent member of our circle, to whom I told my story. Through the secret machinery by which important news was communicated he flashed it among the members, and that night, dressed as a young man, I was driven to a railway station and furnished with money, a ticket and a passport of a citizen of the United States. I crossed the border, arriving safely in Germany, and for awhile my efforts on behalf of the revolution ceased.

How my friends secured the passport I never learned, but I fancy it was stolen by some one interested in the cause of the revolution.

FORD TO SEND IDLE TO ASSIST FARMERS

Company to Provide Jobs for Employes Laid Off.

DETROIT, MICH. — With the arrival of the annual slack season at the Ford Motor company's manmouth plant this year plans are under way to provide farm work for employes who are unable to obtain other employment.

For the next six weeks men will be laid off, it is said, at the rate of about 1,000 a week. After thirty days of idleness, provided they are unable to do better, they will probably be taken back into the organization.

"We are decreasing the number of workers in our shops at this time, just as we have in the past," said James Cousins, vice pesident of the company. "We do not intend to work any hardship. Married men will be kept as much as possible, the unmarried men being let out first."

An employe said that a daily bulletin giving the names of farmers and others looking for steady workers was to be posted at the plant.

Eighteen men received permanent injuries, such as the loss of fingers, hands, etc, entitling them to the specific indemnity allowed by the act. Fatalities to the number of thirteen were reported, two of which occurred in the iron mining district, three in the copper mine, two on railroads and the remainder distributed among various industries throughout the state. There are now 1,500 employers of Michigan operating under the compensation law, embracing more than half a million employes.

PRESIDENT'S WIFE IS VICTOR

Wins Title to Sixty Acres Valuable California Land.

LOS ANGELES. — Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president, won her case in the local land office when Register Bureau decided she was entitled to sixty acres of valuable date land in the Coachella Valley near Salton Sea. The finding results from the neglect of John L. King, who in 1909 bought state scrip for eighty acres, and who sold Mrs. Wilson sixty acres. He failed properly to advertise his claim, which was nullified by limitation.

Register Buren decided that inasmuch as Mrs. Wilson had bought her land in good faith she should not be penalized by the negligence of King.

13 DIE IN BLAST

Rubber Factory at Detroit Is Blown to Pieces.

ALL VICTIMS WERE WORKMEN

One Body Is Blown Through Building —It May Never Be Known What Caused Blast—Officer of Company Thinks Sun's Rays May Have Ignited the Explosives.

DETROIT, MICH. — Thirteen men are known to have been kelled and eleven others, some fatally injured as the result of a terrific explosion which blew the plant of the Mexican Crude Rubber company, in the western part of the city, to pieces. The direct cause of the explosion may never be known.

Gun Cotton May Be Cause.

At first it was reported gasoline caused the accident. Later it was said that gun cotton was probably the cause. The coroner held the latter opinion and said he based his belief on the statements of others who acquainted with the processes of rubber manufacturing used in the plant. It is believed the explosion occurred in a department in which the molten rubber was being prepared. There were several workmen in this department, but as far as could be learned none escaped to tell the story.

Body Blown Through Building.

One body was blown through the building. Three others were burned beyond recognition. Three men were taken to a hospital and physicians said they did not expect any of the men to survive.

Flying chunks of debris riddled adjoining buildings and concrete blocks weighing many pounds were found more than two blocks from the scene. The factory of the Commerce Motor Car company, about 100 feet from the rubber concern, was severely damaged.

Thinks Sun Rays Cause.

John C. Treadwell, general manager of the rubber company said it was possible that the heat from the sun coming through the windows may have caused an explosion among the mixed ether and alcohol.

The chemical is contained in iron barrels, each of which is sealed when not in use. The gun cotton is from the mixing of cotton and chemicals used by the company.

WASHINGTON. — Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme court came to the defense of his muzzled Airedale terrier when it was attacked by a bull terrier. The owner of the bull terrier, a negro, attempted to interfere and it was said that he felt the weight of the eminent jurist's cane.

The chief justice succeeded in loosening the grip of the bull terrier, which was hustled away by the negro.

SEE HUERTA FALL

Dictator's Delegates Believed Settled on That Point.

INVASION OF REBELS FEARED

Mediators to Try to Safeguard Mexico Against Anarchy and Establish Government Which Will Be Recognized by the World—Naon First Representative to Arrive at Niagara Falls.

BUFFALO, N. Y. — Romulo S. Naon, Argentine minister, first of the South American mediators on the Mexican problem, arrived here at 7:20 a. m. Robert F. Rose, state department representative, met him and took him to Niagara Falls, Ont., by automobile.

The purpose of Dr. Naon's early arrival is to complete the plans for the conference, which will begin with the Mexican and American delegates Wednesday. While rooms and conference halls have been engaged at a leading hotel in Niagara Falls, Dr. Naon desired to make certain all conveniences were provided for carrying on the work of the conference. The minister was accompanied by his 11-year-old son.

Envoys See Fall of Huerta.

WASHINGTON. — While the stage was being set in Niagara Falls for the next big scene in the Mexican crisis officials in diplomatic and administration circles eagerly discussed the extent to which the mediation preliminaries might go and the bearing the negotiations eventually would have on the hope of settling the southern republic's ills. Reported optimism of the Huerta delegates over chances for mediation and their confidence that their long journey will not have been in vain found reflection in the capital.

The Huerta delegates refused to give out any statement of their program. Nevertheless, an idea of their viewpoint from representative Mexicans and other with whom they talked they were reported as feeling that the federal administration is disintegrating and that it is inevitable that a successor must be chosen for Huerta. At the same time they are vitally interested in the unfolding of scenes that follow such a crisis—what guaranties could be obtained against anarchy and the kind of government that would stand and attract world recognition.

ASKED DEATH; NOW CURED

New Jersey Woman Who Wanted Doctors to End Sufferings, Now Well.

PHILADELPHIA. — Mrs. William Squier of Atco, N. J., who a year ago last Christmas sent a thrill of pity through the country by her appeal for euthanasia for hopeless sufferers, is now pronounced cured of an intestinal tumor by one of the leading surgeons and scientists of the country.

"When an animal suffers hopelessly we put it out of misery," Mrs. Squier wrote, "but we allow human being to remain in agony when there is no hope for them." One of the surgeons of this city heard of the woman's suffering and of her unusual appeal and took an interest in her case. The surgeon now declares Mrs. Squier is well.

CLAY'S WIDOW GETS OFFICE

TWO KILLED WHEN TROLLEY HITS AUTO

Inexperienced Driver Is Blamed for Tragedy.

ALBION, MICH. — A collision between an eastbound M. U. T. interurban car and an automobile containing five persons, driven by Charles H. Lindsey, of Quincy, resulted in the death of two and serious injury to three other members of the party.

The dead: Mrs. Polly Lindsey, sixty-four years old; Mrs. Ambrose E. Lampman, fifty years old.

The injured: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lindsey, cut and bruised; A. E. Lampman, hurt internally.

The accident occurred on the Newburg road, one mile east of Albion. Mr. Lindsey and his family had driven to the home of Mr. Lampman's son, north of Parma, for the day. Lindsey lost his way when east of Albion and mistook the M. U. T. tracks for a steam road.

Looking for the smoke of a locomotive, he was startled to see an interurban car speeding down on him and lost control of his brakes, driving straight ahead until the radiator was over the edge of the tracks, where in his confusion he also killed his motor.

Motorman Barnes saw the auto, but not in time to stop, and his car plunged into the machine broadsides, driving it against the crossing fence and crushing it like an eggshell.

THIRD TIME SHE GOT DIVORCE

Twice George Tried to End Life, and Wife Saved Him.

FLINT, MICH. — After twenty years of peaceful married life George Snow, of this city, attempted his life by slashing his wrists. No sooner had he recovered than he drank a quantity of poison, but this method also failed to kill George. During this trying period his wife, Mary, patiently cared for him, and each time nursed him back to life. But when he left a note, stating that he had drowned himself, on a pile of his clothing on the river bank, her patience failed her; she sued for divorce and the decree was granted after George returned and was refused admission to the house.

The finding of the clothes on the bank of the Flint river caused considerable sensation here. The police dragged the river several days and used dynamite, but no trace of Snow was found.

HER LAST WORD.

And It Was Up to Harold to Get Whatever Consolation He Could Out of It.

"Lucy," he said, with all the earnestness at his command, "you have driven me to desperation. I have waited and hoped that you might learn to care for me, but my waiting has been unavailing. Now I am going away, to risk my life to face whatever dangers may lie in my way."

"Have you made up your mind to join the army?" she asked.

"Yes. I shall go where glory and perhaps fame await me. I shall insist on being in the thick of the fray at all times. There is nothing for me to live for, so why should I fear to die?"

"Please don't say such things, Harold. Surely there is much for you to live for."

"No; if I ever return it will be with the scars of battle upon me. I shall stop at nothing. Wherever dangers are to be faced I shall bear our glorious colors. I shall come back as a hero or I shall not come back at all."

"That should always be a soldier's sentiment. I am glad to hear you speak so nobly."

"Thank you. By saying one word you could keep me from the dangers that must be faced in that desolate country."

"But it is a girl's duty to urge men to be heroic, not to try to persuade them to be deaf to the call to do the splendid thing."

"I suppose you're right. Well, I shall not be deaf to the call."

"I am glad to hear you say that, Harold."

"Goodby, Lucy."

"Goodby, Harold."

"Have you no last word to say to me before I leave you?"

"Yes, there is something."

"What is it, Lucy?"

"Don't get shot, Harold—don't even get half shot."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Boys and Buttons.

Gold buttons for good boys is the program of the American Association of Achievement, which has just been organized in Chicago and is to take in the whole United States. But the enviable recipients may be good at sports as well as at their books. It is to be a comprehensive order of merit for schoolboys. The idea has possibilities. —Springfield Republican.

FISHING WITH AN AX.

Winter Sport In Which Tackle and Bait Are Not Needed.

When a man starts out in the dead of winter with only an ax under his arm and says he is going fishing one is inclined to smile and take his statement with a grain of salt. Nevertheless it is true that fish are "caught" with no other "tackle" than an ordinary ax.

Along the coves of fresh water lakes and ponds in the winter, especially when the first new ice has formed a transparent covering, it is possible to secure a number of good sized fish by means of an ax alone. These "fishermen" wear the heavy felt boots of the lumbermen, from which the rubber shoes are removed when they reach the ice. A bright sunshiny day is needed for this sort of fishing. In many of these coves and especially in such coves as are filled with rushes and water lilies in the summer pickerel, pike and other members of that fish family come to the surface of the water and rest within an inch or so of the ice. As far as known they do this to get in the sunlight, just as they sometimes float motionless near the surface of the water in the summer.

The ax fisherman in his noiseless felt boots walks slowly over the transparent ice looking for these fish. They seem to think that the ice affords a protection, and they are not usually frightened away. When the unsportsmanlike "fisherman" sees a fish near the surface he steals up and hits the ice a resounding whack with his ax. Nine times out of ten the fish will be seen to turn belly upward and lay motionless. The secret of this is that the impact of the ax on the ice has forced the water against the fish's head with sufficient pressure to stun him. The fisherman hastily chops a hole through the ice, reaches in and pulls out his fish.—Detroit Free Press.

ANCIENT ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.

Iron and Wooden Hands and Legs and Plaster and Silver Noses.

There is in the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, an artificial leg, made about 300 B. C., of bronze, wood and iron. Who has not heard of the famous "Iron Hand" made in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1504, for the German knight, Goetz von Berlichingen? Among the old time Indians ears, noses and lips of plaster were quite common, one of their ordinary punishments being to cut off these useful parts of the human anatomy. Greek and Roman veterans who had lost a leg or an arm in the wars used to replace them by substitutes and Plinius speaks of a Roman veteran soldier who—about 150 years B. C.—was famous for the wooden hand with which he was still able to fight as an able swordsman. In 1604 the Duke of Brunswick had to use an artificial hand.

Artificial limbs with movable joints were also largely made by the famous Ambroise Pare—1517 to 1590—the celebrated French surgeon known as "the father of French surgery." He was surgeon to Henry II.—1552—and also to Francis II., Charles IX. and Henry III. Later on Father Sebastian, a Carmelite monk, was renowned for the manufacture of movable arms and hands. About the middle of the seventeenth century Falcinelli, a Florentine surgeon, mentions artificial eyes of gold, silver and crystal painted in different colors. He also describes gold and silver ears which were either tied to the head with strings or else sewed on the skin of the scalp by the aid of gold and silver wire. Silver noses, too, are spoken of as having been in use for a long time.

Trapped.

His Wife—I met our maid Anna just now on the street, and she pretended not to see me.

Her Husband—You ought to point out to Anna the impropriety of such conduct.

His Wife—But how can I? You see, she had another girl with her, and it was quite evident she didn't want her friend to know she was working for a woman who wore a two dollar and a half hat.—New York Post.

A Divided Village.

In the readjustment of boundaries after the Franco-Prussian war the little village of La Schlucht was divided between the two nations. France and Germany meet in the middle of the main street, and as the boundary line follows a slanting course it is possible for a French and a German soldier to pose for a joint photograph, each remaining within his own territory.

Sunday School Gains Million.

DETROIT, Mich, May 20.—That the Methodist Episcopal church has made a gain of 1,000,000 Sunday school pupils since the organization of the board of Sunday schools six years ago was the statement made by Rev. Edgar Blake, D. D, of Chicago, secretary of the board, in his address in Central Methodist Episcopal church Monday before the Sunday school institute.

A GHOST IN THE CLOUDS.

Curious Experience of an English Army Aviator.

The first air ghost has just been encountered on Salisbury plain by one of the most skillful of the army aviators, who went up in a monoplane on a cloudy day accompanied by his mechanic.

The aeroplane entered the clouds, and the pilot was continuing his flight in them when suddenly he discovered another monoplane, no more than fifty yards away, coming straight toward him out of the mist. He dived almost vertically, and, after a headlong descent, leveled out once more, but his relief was only momentary.

The other pilot must have performed exactly the same maneuver, for no sooner was he speeding along again on a level than he saw the monoplane once again looming out of the mist, heading straight toward him.

Terror struck, the pilot dived again, emerged below the clouds and forthwith landed. Not until then did the explanation strike him. He had fallen a victim to a hallucination of the clouds familiar to every Alpinist and had seen his living shadow projected upon the film of vapor.—Sheffield Telegraph.

Australia's Oil Prize.

The government of South Australia has offered a bonus of $24,830 to the first person or body corporate that obtains from a bore or well situated in South Australia 100,000 gallons of crude petroleum containing not less than 90 per cent of products obtainable by distillation. The oil must be stored at the bore or well from which it is obtained until the whole 100,000 gallons have accumulated, and the minister of mines will require samples of the strata passed through by the bores taken at every fifty feet sunk and a certificate from the government analyst showing the results of his analysis of samples of the oil.

Needless Killing.

Highway accidents have increased so rapidly in the United Kingdom since the very extensive introduction of mechanically propelled vehicles that in the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1913, the number of those killed on the highways in town and country reached the large total of 2,000, while 42,544 were injured, which was an average of nearly six killed and of more than 122 cases of injury for each day of the year.

FIVE PEOPLE HURT WHEN CAR DEMOLISHES AUTO IN DETROIT

Four men and one woman were injured, one man severely, early Tuesday morning at Gratiot and McDougall avenues when an automobile carrying six persons, collided with an east-bound Michigan-Mack street car. The auto was completely wrecked. No one was fatally injured.

Capt. Coller of Lansing, the most severely hurt, was taken to Grace hospital unconscious. The others were taken to St. Mary's. John Temple aged 21, 109 King avenue, who was driving the car, was not hurt. The motor car belongs to Temple's father H. H. Temple.

Young Temple states he did not see the car. The motor car was traveling north on McDougall avenue and ran directly into the path of the on-coming street car. The motor car was tossed to the curb and overturned. The occupants of the car were hurled to the sidewalk and Capt. Coller was buried under the wreckage of the machine in the gutter. Motorman Chas. Soules and Conductor No. 2487 were in charge of the street car.—Detroit Journal.

John Temple, formerly of Britton, is well known in Tecumseh, at one time attending the local high school. His many friends would congratulate him on his narrow escape from injury and death.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., May 18, 1914.

Congress has forced President Wilson to consent to a somewhat shorter program of legislation than was intended. It is now agreed that when Congress passes the anti-trust bills commended by the President and the regular appropriation bills an adjournment will then be made until next December. It is understood, however, that the rural credit bill is to be taken up and pressed to a vote early in December.

Many congressmen are shaking in their shoes because of the ordeal now facing them in regard to the question of national prohibition and national woman suffrage. As these two questions are being handled successfully by the states themselves, it really seems like a mean imposition to force individual congressmen and senators to take sides on such questions. If the State of Indiana, for instance, wants to give the right of suffrage to women, it can certainly do so. If it wants to stop the sale of alcoholic beverages, it can certainly do so. But why should it concern itself about what Texas or Colorado wants to do with these questions? And there are many who think that Congress would be justified in refusing to vote on these problems because if one votes for prohibition, he will lose the "wet" votes in the next election, and vice versa.

Ex-President Roosevelt has completed his extensive trip through the South American republics and will shortly sail for New York, and then for Spain to be present at the wedding of his son Kermit and Miss Willard, the daughter of the American ambassador at Madrid. Ex-President Roosevelt is reported to be very angry because the ex-president of the British Geographical society is skeptical about the claim that Roosevelt has discovered a river hitherto unknown in South America of more than 1000 miles in length and filled with real wet water and a bank on each side. It is hoped, however, that there will not be another fuss between Roosevelt and the British scholar about nature faking.

The peace envoys are busy working out a plan for the pacification of Mexico which it is hoped will result in bringing peace to that unfortunate country. No suggestion, however, which does not involve the elimination of Huerta will be considered by President Wilson, and the envoys themselves as well as the Mexicans, fully realize that this stern fact must be met and dealt with. Huerta has lost all support in Mexico except the army and it is believed that he will be disposed of in the near future, if through no other source Villi is apt to do it himself in a very short while.

A Great Man.

"A great man, my son, is one who manages to gather about him a whole lot of assistants who will take the blame for his mistakes while he gets the credit for their good ideas!"

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 20—About 200 of "Gardner's Rednecks," members of the Thirty-first Michigan volunteer infantry who saw service in the Spanish-American campaign, held their fifteenth annual reunion here Monday and had a banquet that night at the armory.

Judge Wm. Murray one of their number was toastmaster. Among the officers present were: Lieutenant-Colonel Fred Schubel; Adjutant General Vandercook and Quartermaster-General Rogers all of Lansing. A telegram from Captain T. R. Kyle now in Oakland, Cal., was received expressing regret at being unable to attend and the hope that he might be at the reunion next year in Adrian.

Most than 100 members of the regiment have died since the last reunion a year ago.

Several of the veterans went from Tecumseh among whom were: Oscar Hall, Chas. Skinner, James Lowry, John Blessing and Ralph Cummins.

SAM SCHEPPS

NEW YORK. — The state has made rapid headway in presenting its testimony in the trial of Charles Becker, charged with instigating the murder of Herman Rosenthal. It will probably conclude Tuesday. Sam Schepps will probably be the next witness. He is expected to reiterate his story of the crime as told on the stand at the first trial of the accused.

The use of the telephone frequently results in some very funny mistakes. Prior to a meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Chicago a young woman was asked over the telephone if she would take two delegates to the convention. She agreed to do so, and on the day appointed showed up at the hall with two jelly cakes.—Boston Transcript.

NIGHTMARE TERROR.

In Young Children It Causes a Shock That Requires Soothing.

A nightmare is a very vivid and disagreeable dream, in which the sleeper finds himself in various terrifying situations from which there is no escape. When a sufferer's fright reaches a climax he awakens suddenly; sometimes he is aroused by his own efforts to scream for help. A bad form of nightmare occurs in young children. It is called "night terror." The child awakes suddenly from a deep sleep, panting, wide eyed, screaming but inarticulate and clings frantically to any one who goes to the bedside. Such attacks are most common in children between four and eight years old, but they may occur at any age.

When grownup people have nightmare it is generally owing to indiscretions in diet, such as mince pie or lobster eaten late at night. Many persons have to be very careful about what they eat for supper, and can never safely go to sleep lying flat on the back.

One characteristic of nightmare is the startling reality of it. It lacks the misty vagueness of pleasant dreams and has, while it lasts, all the sharp outline of an actual occurrence. Therefore it is important that young children should be wisely and gently handled when they suffer from night terrors. Do not scold them or laugh at them or argue with them. They have suffered a real shock, with consequent loss of nervous force. Until the paroxysm has spent itself, do not leave a child who has suffered in this way alone.

Sometimes, in older children, nightmare accompanies overpressure at school, and the tendency to it disappears in the holidays. In such cases lighten the pressure of work as much as possible, make the evening meal light and digestible and keep the child from excitement during the few hours before bedtime.—Youth's Companion

SIMPLY ROBBED THEM.

Mean Trick a Political Boss Played Upon His Ward Heelers.

A veteran politician when the subject of political graft and blackmail came up told of the experience of the boss of a certain city who was something in the way of a collector himself.

One day near the close of a hot campaign he managed to round up some $5,000. With a couple of his pals he had a bibulous celebration. About 2 in the morning he was clinging to a lamppost and trying to call a cab when two of his heelers hove in sight. He knew they would rob him if they suspected he had money. Bracing himself, he greeted them with:

"Hello, fellows; lucky you happened along. I'm dead broke and want a cab. Get one and take me to my hotel and I'll make good."

When they reached the hotel the drunken boss sleepily asked the clerk to give each of his companions a $5 bill. At the same time he drew from his trousers pocket a huge roll of bills and, throwing it at the clerk, told him to "keep that wad of stuff in a safe place until morning."

Disgustedly the heelers watched the safe door close on the young fortune that had escaped them, while the boss sank into a chair.

"Oh, you thief!" angrily shouted one of the heelers as he shook his fist under the nose of the boss. "That's the meanest double cross you ever gave a friend in your whole crooked career. You said you was broke and you had thousands in the wad. Confound you, there's no one a fellow can trust these days. That money belongs to us by rights and you've robbed us of it."—New York Sun.

Woman's Advantage.

A woman can take a plume and wear it on one side of her hat one day, on the other side another day, on the front of her hat another day and on the back another day. She can wear it curled round the rim, under the rim, across the crown or straight up in the air. But if a man happens to put his hat on with the rear end in front he looks like a durn fool.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Confesses Many Thefts.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Thirteen stores at Sparta were burglarized early Tuesday morning. Soon after the burglary Deputy Sheriff George Barrett, of Kent City, arrested two young men giving the names of Harry Grice and Frank McKay, who are alleged to have had stolen goods in their possession. The men had half a dozen diamonds, several suits of clothing and a variety of wearing apparel.

McKay later is said to have confessed to Prosecutor Earl Phelps that he was the man who recently entered several business places at Nashville, Mich. He also is said to have admitted the robberies at Sparta.

Train Service Suspended.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Although the storm which caused so much damage in this part of the state has been over for more than twenty-four hours, it will be another day and possibly longer before the Kalamazoo, Lake Shore & Chicago railroad will be able to resume service from Kalamazoo to South Haven.

Trains are running only half way to the lake from this city. Water in the river is going no higher, but until it recedes little can be done along the banks. Children in some sections of the city were taken part way to school in boats.

Wife Loses in Death Dash.

NEW BALTIMORE, MICH.—William Finn, one of the two men terribly scalded late Saturday when a steam pipe burst at the Shore Line power house here, died in a hospital in Mt. Clemens, a few minutes before the arrival of his wife who had been visiting in Illinois.

Nab Creamery Officials.

ST. JOHNS, MICH. — Robert Evans and E. F. Day, proprietors of the Michigan Dairy company, who left here about three weeks ago leaving debts amounting to at least $500, have been captured, the former in Lansing, and the latter in Owosso, and face a charge of doing business under an assumed name without having registered with the county clerk.

Evans gave bail. They will have their examination Tuesday.

Schooner Sinks in Canal.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH.—The schooner Mottsford, loaded with lumber and downbound, in tow of the steamer King, struck the end of the south pier while entering the American canal, filled with water and sank. Her cargo will have to be lightered. Her position, however, does not interfere with steamers entering the canal.

Nervy Salvaging Planned.

PORT HURON, MICH. — What is considered in marine circles another piece of nervy marine salvaging is the attempt about to be made by the Reid Wrecking company in this city to take the steel steamer Howard M. Hanna, Jr., from the rocks off Pointe Aux Barques.

The Hanna is one of the steamers which became a total loss in the storm of November 9 last year.

Saw First Tomatoes Eaten.

FLINT, MICH. — John Morley eighty-three years old, a resident of Flint for fifty-seven years and the man whose first home occupied the present site of the city hall, is dead.

Mr. Morely raised the first tomatoes ever produced in Genesee county, it is claimed. They were then called "love apples" and the people refused to eat them, as they were thought poisonous.

Davis Boy Sentenced.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Judge Walter H. North sentenced John Davis to serve not less than five years nor more than 15, with a recommendation of 10 years, at hard labor in Jackson prison for the murder of his father, Harvey Davis, April 26.

Lightning Hits Farm Three Times.

ADRIAN, MICH. — During the storm here lightning centered its attack on the farm of Loren Vedder, near here. Both his barns were struck and burned down with a heavy loss. Almost simultaneously four cows were killed.

CHEBOYGAN, MICH. — Reuben Taylor, prominent farmer, is badly burned. He was cleaning his automobile in his barn when it exploded.

His condition is critical. The barn was destroyed.

The Contrary.

"I dropped some money in the market today," announced Mr. Wyss at the dinner table.

"Again?" exclaimed Mrs. Wyss reproachfully.

"No," replied Mr. Wyss mournfully, "a loss."—Exchange.

Typhoid Fever.

Typhoid is usually disseminated by means of impure water, milk or food and sometimes by flies, but we must not forget that, as Koch said, "there is no other source of infection of typhoid than man." It is fellow creatures of ours who are responsible for its spread. Typhoid fever is a disease of dirt. Unclean habits cause typhoid fever. Be therefore clean and help others to be clean.

'SWEET SINGER OF IOWA' DIES

Poet, Composer and One Time Reporter Passes Away.

CHICAGO. — Mrs. Frances Dewey Park, poet, composer, and at one time reporter, is dead. She and her mother were alone in their residence, 3255 Indiana avenue at the time and she died in her mother's arms. She was called "the sweet singer of Iowa," although she was born in McComb, Ill., and lived in Chicago the greater part of her life.

"Frances Dewey," as she signal all her work, contributed to the magazines and newspapers and was the author of several successful songs. Among some of her best known poems are "Just Suppose," "Drifting," and "If I had You."

NORDICA'S KIN GET JEWELS

Husband and Three Sisters Chief Legatees of Singer.

NEW YORK. — The notable collection of jewels, value at $1,000,000, including the famous Nordica pearl and other gems almost priceless because of their flawlessness and beauty, was disposed of by Mme. Lillian Nordica, the singer, in her will, some details of which have become known.

In addition to the jewels, Mme. Nordica disposed of other property valued at several hundred thousand dollars. Her husband, George W. Young, the New York banker, and her three sisters, it is understood, are her chief legatees.

THREE WANT SENATORSHIP

Senator Chamberlain, Robert A. Booth, and William Hanley Win in Oregon.

PORTLAND, OREGON. — United States Senator George E. Chamberlain, Democrat, was renominated at a general state primary election here. To run against him, the Republicans picked Robert A. Booth, and the Progressives, William Hanley. None was opposed.

Prohibitionists and Socialists did not participate, having previously selected their candidates at conventions. Women did not largely avail themselves of their first opportunity to vote at an Oregon state primary. The man vote also was light.

TIPPING IS MADE A CRIME

Canadian Bill Provides Fine to Give or Take Gratuity.

OTTAWA, ONTARIO. — The bill making tipping and the taking of tips an indictable offense has passed the senate committee of the whole practically without opposition. The bill, when introduced, excited much ridicule. It seems certain now to pass the senate and be sent to the house committee for concurrence.

The bill makes it an offense punishable by a fine of $100 to give or take a tip and makes the employer equally liable to the fine.

The New Woman.

Simeon Ford, the humorist, said at a recent dinner:

"The new woman is a commanding figure. Man buckles down to her.

"Man, the conqueror, when he would win a woman in the past, brought her to the dust. Today, on the contrary, he brings the dust to her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Reckless Driving.

Mabel—I see Charlie has his hand in a sling. Mark—Yes, reckless driving. Mabel—Auto? Mark—No. Mabel—Horse? Mark—No, hammer.—Life.

See that your children be taught not only the labors of the earth, but the loveliness of it.—John Ruskin.

Queer Connection.

"No system of physical exercises yet invented," says Oliver Onions, the novelist, "can compare for one moment with silk stockings for giving an erect carriage to the female head."

PLOT TO SLAY HUERTA FOILED

Inspector General of Police Is Removed from Office.

MANY UNDER SURVEILLANCE

American Aeroplane at Vera Cruz Is Fired at, It Is Believed, by Mexicans—Villa Starts for Attack on Zacatecas—Army Was to Have Assaulted San Luis Potosi.

Mexico City, May 25.—A plan to kill General Victoriano Huerta as he entered the cafe Colon, a restaurant in the Paseo de la Reforma, is said to have been discovered by secret service men. As a result, Huerta became enraged at General Manuel Guasque, inspector general of police, and ordered his dismissal and his arrest. Secret service men are searching for several men known to have been closely associated with General Guasque. If found they will be arrested and tried by court-martial. Conviction of the men will undoubtedly result in their execution.

Villa Starts to Zacatecas.

Torreon, May 25.—General Villa's advance on the city of Zacatecas, which is to be the next point of attack by the constitutionalists, began when 1,500 rebel cavalry and two trains of bridge and railroad track material left this city as an advance guard for the main army which is expected to entrain today.

General Quiroz was chosen as head of the police department to succeed General Guasque. General Quiroz, who has been making an investigation of the alleged plot against Huerta, is reported to have learned the names of the plotters and to have them under surveillance. He, however, is looking for more evidence before he orders their arrest.

Hereafter, greater efforts will be exerted to guard Huerta on his trips about the city.

General Villa explained his sudden decision to capture Zacatecas rather than push on toward San Luis Potosi in pursuit of the 10,000 federals under General Maas and General Demoure, who evacuated Saltillo last week.

Because railroad track between Paredo and Saltillo had been torn up by the Federals, Villa was forced to leave his trains at Paredon. To have placed his trains of supplies, water and equipment of various kinds in Saltillo would have required at least a week of road building before an advance on San Luis Potosi could have been commenced. Since the federals had a long start Villa said he thought it useless to attempt pursuit on foot.

Mexicans Fire at Aeroplane.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, May 25.—A number of shots were fired by Mexican federals near the Vergara outposts held by Captain Hill of the marine corps as Lieutenant P. N. L. Ballinger was passing overhead in his aeroplane. The aeroplane, according to a report received here by Colonel Benjamin Alvord, chief of staff, is believed to have been the target of the Mexicans. None of the shots, however, went near the flying machine. The fire was not returned by the American forces, who were stationed nearby.

GARRETT TAKEN TO PEORIA

Garrett was arrested a week ago in Pineville, Ky., where he was trying to hide from an operative of the Pinkerton National Detective agency. He is said to have obtained $18,200 from the Peoria institution and about $200,000 from bankers and brokers in Chicago.

El Paso, May 25.—Officials of the Santa Eulalia Mining company, a Guggenheim property, have been informed that their property is being looted systematically of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of valuable silver and copper ore. A demand is to be made upon General Carranza for protection.

A report from Chihuahua is that 800 or more inhabitants have been put to work in the Santa Eulalia mine by a coterie of rich Mexicans and that the ore is taken to Chihuahua City where it is being sold to the rebel government to be converted into silver [illegible]

ZAPATA FORCES TAKE MEXICO CITY SUBURB

Chief Awaits Uprising Within to Take City Itself.

El Paso, May 25.—General Zapata's forces have captured Cuernavaca, an important suburb of Mexico City, according to a dispatch received by the rebel junta here.

The dispatch says the Zapatistas are in full possession of the town and are menacing Mexico City, awaiting only the expected uprising against Huerta in the capital. The beginning of rioting in Mexico City, rebel leaders say, will be followed immediately by an attack by Zapata and if he succeeds in taking the city he in expected to hold it until rebel troops can arrive.

PLAN TO TEMPT MOOSE LEADER

Many Republicans Are Ready to Offer 1916 Nomination.

COLONEL MUST DELIVER FIRST

Party Leaders Desire That He Make One Speech Denouncing Wilson Policies—They Also Want Him to Desert Pinchot in Pennsylvania—Soft Pedal on Recall of Decisions.

Washington, May 25.—When Colonel Roosevelt comes to Washington on Tuesday to speak before the National Geographical society, several of his warm friends in the Republican party hope to have a heart-to-heart talk with him. They are going to try to show him he has today one of the greatest political chances of his life and they will urge him not to do anything about this time which will diminish his prospects for another term in the White House.

Republicans in congress who are looking to Roosevelt as the only Moses who can lead the party back to victory will urge him to direct his efforts for the present solely to disclosing the weaknesses of the Wilson administration. They will try to persuade Colonel Roosevelt that he should deliver one speech in the near future reviewing the history of the Wilson administration up to this time The Republicans will urge Mr. Roosevelt to direct his forceful utterances especially toward the administration's Mexican policy and its proposal to pay the Republic of Colombia $25,000,000 for the incident of the Panama revolution.

Would Save Penrose.

Republicans in Washington are particularly anxious that Mr. Roosevelt should not, at least for the present, take an active part in the campaign in Pennsylvania for Gifford Pinchot or in other states. They fear that if he jumped into the fray now most of the bitterness of the last presidential fight may be revived and the Republican party may be forced into a position where it will not be able to make concessions or overtures to Mr. Roosevelt.

It will soon be known for a certainty just what course Mr. Roosevelt intends to pursue. Candidates have been nominated in Pennsylvania and the campaign there will get under way early in the summer. Democratic hope of success in Pennsylvania this year is based altogether upon a militant fight by the Progressives with Mr. Roosevelt at the forefront of it.

Progressives to Stand Firm.

While Republican leaders are carrying on a desperate flirtation with the former president Progressives are trying to hold him in line in that party. If Mr. Roosevelt returns to the Republican party or consents to fusion with that party he will be opposed by such men as Victor Murdock, the Bull Moose captain in the house. Mr. Pinchot and many other ultra progressive Republicans concede this. On the other hand they argue that most of the progressive Republican leadership will accept him.

It is known that some of the Republican conservative leaders have approved of overtures to the former president. The only thing in the Progressive platform of 1912 that is regarded as fundamentally wrong is the plank applying the recall of judicial decisions.

He heard a sermon by the pastor, Rev. Chester Fairman Ralston on "The Church at Ephesus." Dr. Ralston when a pastor at Oberlin, O., knew Mr. Rockefeller.

FARM HAND IS ACCUSED

Jealousy Is Suspected to Have Figured in New Hampshire Murder.

Concord, N. H., May 25.—Eugene Wood was brought here from Henniker charged with the murder of Howard W. Peaslee, formerly selectman of Henniker. Peaslee was shot to death Friday night, his body being found in a small shop near his home. Wood is a farm hand. He has been in the employ of Miss Ida M. Barnes, who manages a farm in Henniker, which is owned by her father, Walter Barnes.

Peaslee, the murdered man, was a friend of the Barnes family and frequently called at their home. It is said that Wood became jealous of him.

Farmer Falls Unconscious After Saving Much of His Stock.

Richmond, Ind., May 25.—John Church, a farmer living north of Richmond, was painfully burned when his barn caught fire and he attempted to rescue his stock. His injuries were so severe that he was rushed to a hospital in Richmond in an ambulance. He is expected to recover.

Church succeeded in saving practically all the animals in the barn and did not abandon his rescue work until he fell unconscious from the agony of his burns.

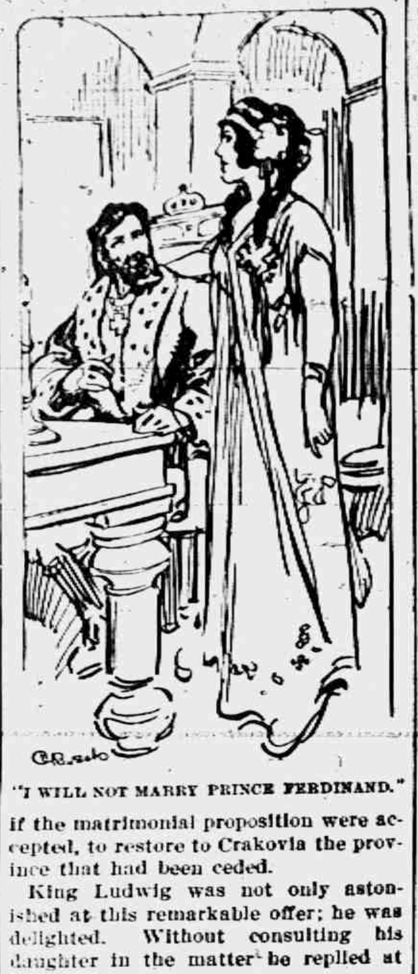
The Princess Aline

She Had Remarkable Diplomatic Talent

By MILLARD MALTBIE

The Princess Aline of Crakovia was an object of great concern to her father, King Ludwig. His majesty had five sons and one daughter. The succession being therefore established beyond a reasonable doubt by her brothers, the princess was of no importance whatever on that account. But she was of great value in another direction. A province, Guadix, had been wrested in war from Crakovia by King Philip of Ancovia, an adjoining power. A proposition had come from Philip for the hand of the Princess Aline for Ferdinand, crown prince of Ancovia. It had been declined. A deputation was then sent by King Philip offering,



"I WILL NOT MARRY PRINCE FERDINAND."

if the matrimonial proposition were accepted, to restore to Crakovia the province that had been ceded.

King Ludwig was not only astonished at this remarkable offer; he was delighted. Without consulting his daughter in the matter he replied at once that the proposition was accepted.

The deputation was about to return with this reply when the princess was informed that she was to take a husband she had never seen without having been consulted. She at once notified her father that she did not intend to marry any one and she certainly would not marry Prince Ferdinand. King Ludwig sent for his daughter and informed her that she must marry the prince because on her doing so depended the restoration of the lost province, whereupon Aline replied that if a hundred provinces could be gained by her marriage still would she remain a maid. At this her father was so dumfounded that he could voice no reply.

When the deputation returned to Ancovia and reported the failure of this second proposition King Philip was both astonished and perplexed. The laws of Ancovia with regard to the marriages of members of the royal family were very closely drawn. So many provisions had been incorporated into them that there was not a single princess of the blood in Europe except Aline who was eligible. The king called his son into his cabinet and told him what had taken place, concluding with the words:

"I propose to declare war against Crakovia and compel the princess to marry you."

"Father," said the prince thoughtfully, "there is an old saying that you can take a horse to water, but you can't make him drink. You may conquer Crakovia and annex it to your kingdom, you may make the princess a prisoner and force her to the altar, but you can't make her say that she will take me for her wedded husband."

"My son," replied the king after weighing the prince's words, "you are right. Such a course might succeed with a man, but not with a woman."

The Princess Aline being the only daughter in the royal family, besides being very attractive—though it was known that she had a will of her own—had been very popular till it leaked out that she had refused in marriage the crown prince of Ancovia, with the lost province in the palm. The cession of this territory had been as sore a point with the Crakovians as the surrender of Alsace and Lorraine with the French. A century and a half before the cession of Gaudix, Crakovia had been obliged to cede one-half its territory to Ancovia, and when Gaudix was lost to them they were broken hearted. For these reasons, when it became known that Aline had refused to give herself in exchange for Gaudix, popular favor turned against her, and she became as much hated as she had before been beloved. She appeared as usual in public places till her treatment by the people became markedly disrespectful; then she retired to one of her father's country palaces, where it was understood she lived a secluded life.

One day Prince Ferdinand happened to go through the room where his sisters were studying their lessons under their governess. His attention was arrested by the young woman, and under pretense of inquiring what the children were studying he fell into conversation with their teacher. So pleased was he with her intelligence that he made frequent visits to the schoolroom and asked his mother, the queen, if the governess might not be admitted to the social functions of the court. The queen assented, and the prince announced the fact to the recipient of the royal favor. To his surprise, the latter declined the honor, saying that her mind was concentrated on the education of her pupils and she would not like to have it diverted.

There was in her something so superior to other women with whom the prince came in daily contact that his admiration for the governess grew rapidly. Whenever he found it possible to get away from the fawning associates who surrounded him he would seek his untitled friend and refresh himself with her engaging though independent personality.

One day the prince awoke to the fact that he loved one whom as a prince of the blood he could not marry. He kept his secret from her for some time, but at last yielded to the pressure within him and avowed his love. She did not reproach him for so doing, but the next day handed in her resignation as teacher for the royal children, and when the prince sought her again he found that she had left the palace. He endeavored to learn where she had gone, but failed to gain any trace of her.

From this time a marked change was noticed in Prince Ferdinand. In public he had caught the popular heart by a happy manner that was natural to him, but now he seldom appeared to the people and when he did looked gloomy and morose. It became known that there was no woman living whom the laws of his country would permit him to marry, and those who attributed the change in him to this cause sympathized with him instead of blaming him. Nevertheless, in the main the prince was an example of the adage, "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone." He fulfilled this almost literally, for princes are dependent on friends the same as other persons, and Ferdinand's intimate friends ceased to find pleasure in his society. He was therefore left much to himself. However, he was very indifferent to all associates.

One day a messenger arrived at the court of Ancovia announcing that if King Philip desired King Ludwig would be pleased to reopen negotiations for the hand of the Princess Aline. King Philip at once sent for his son and announced the glad tidings.

"Something must have occurred to change the conditions," he said to the prince. "I shall withdraw the offer to restore the province of Guadix. We may get the princess without losing this valuable territory."

"Do what you like in the matter," replied Ferdinand. "I shall be obedient to your wishes."

In truth, the prince secretly hoped that the withdrawal of the previous offer would break off the negotiations. The idea of marriage except with the girl he loved was repulsive to him.

So King Philip replied to King Ludwig that he would be pleased to renew his request for the hand of the princess, but he could not now consent to give up Guadix. King Ludwig replied that the matter was in the hands of his daughter and if the crown prince wished for her hand he would have to make the request in person. Philip was delighted.

"I told you so," he said to his son. "Something has occurred to change the situation. Go to the princess, but not as a beggar. We'll get her and keep Guadix."

The prince departed at the head of a splendid retinue and with handsome presents to seek a wife simply that he might give an heir to the throne. There was no method of traveling in those days except on or behind horses and not much communication between the different countries. King Philip waited impatiently to hear of the prince's success, hoping that no cession of territory would be necessary. Finally a message came from his son stating that the Princess Aline would marry him, demanding not only the restoration of Guadix, but that much larger territory which had been ceded to Ancovia a century and a half before. What was more astonishing than this was that the prince urged that the conditions be accepted.

The shock was more than King Philip could bear. He was an old man and in poor health. He fell on the floor in a faint, was carried to his bed and died the next day.

Immediately after the king's demise the chancellor of the realm made post-haste to Crakovia to announce to the crown prince his accession to the throne. He found Ferdinand basking in the princess' smiles, but just as the chancellor was about to kneel with the words, "The king is dead—long live the king!" he stopped, paralyzed. In the Princess Aline he recognized the governess of the royal children of Ancovia. But, recovering himself, he found voice to make the announcement.

Before King Ferdinand left Crakovia he had a consultation with King Ludwig wherein a new distribution of all the territory that had been ceded to Crakovia was made, Crakovia getting the larger share. After the documents had been signed the wedding between the young king and the princess took place amid such rejoicings as had never before occurred in Crakovia. The lost popularity of the princess was not only restored to her, but she could not appear in public without receiving a storm of acclamation.

THE SURGEON'S GLOVES.

He Wears Them While Operating Since He Can't Get Clean Hands.

While the surgeon's success depends to a large extent upon his hands, they are at the same time a source of the greatest danger to himself and his patient.

No process has yet been discovered which makes it certain that a surgeon's hands are free from microbes and incapable of carrying infection to a patient. This is why the good surgeon will not perform the most trivial operation without first covering his hands with properly sterilized gloves.

Prolonged scrubbing with soap and running water, followed by another thorough scrubbing in from 70 to 80 per cent alcohol, removes the outer layers of skin and bacteria and makes the surface of the hands sufficiently clean.

But there still remains the danger that many microbes which stay concealed in the tiny crevices at the base of the little hair glands will be forced to the surface by perspiration and the use of the hands in handling instruments and make an infection of the wound possible. While practical experience shows that his danger is very slight, yet its possibility is sufficient to make it undesirable ever to operate with the bare hands.—New York American.

Influence of Feminine Dress.

Few men realize the influence that dress has upon them. Man thinks that he is an unbiased being, open to conviction, to sound logic. Fond delusion! He is open to nothing except to the eloquence of a few yards of silk and to the persuasion of soft laces.—London Graphic.

Too Swift For Him.

"Do any of the good things you hope for come to pass?"

"They all come to pass, but they come and pass so bloomin' swift I can't grab 'em."—Saturday Journal.

Virtue of Hospitality.

Hospitality solves and annuls even the mysterious antagonisms that exist between races. This glorious and beautiful and sacred rite makes all men brothers.—Exchange.

If some felt the pain they thoughtlessly give to others they would never feel well.

WORK ABOUT TOWN

Work goes on rapidly at the electric light plant, a force of men is kept busy all the time and in the mean time the lights on the street shine bright and clear.

At the new moving picture rooms, everything is nearing completion and soon another call will be made for the nickles and pennies of the small boy and girl, also others

The work on the new 25 foot well at the waterworks is progressing finely. About nine feet of the curbing has already been completed. An elevator or hoist is just finished for bringing the dirt to the surface.

Work is being hustled at the Standish dam though some trouble has been experienced in getting sufficient help, so that the Hayden mill may open within two weeks.

BROOKLYN ABLAZE

The morning papers from Jackson bring news of the burning of the business portion of the village of Brooklyn. The fire broke out in the Culver store. The telephone office being on the second floor, was soon out of commission and all communication with the outer world was cut off. Autos went to Jackson for help. The whole west side of the business portion was burned and the east side threatened. Fears were entertained that the dwelling portion would be fired by the flying embers.

WILL STUDY FOR GRAND OPERA

The following paragraph from a recent issue of a Portland, Oregon, daily paper, refers to a lady who was a teacher of music in the Tecumseh schools a few years ago and has a wide circle of friends here:

"Raye McKenna, a mezzo soprano, with Beatrice Morelles' six Parisian Harmony girls at the Empress theatre was formerly a resident of Portland. Formerly Miss McKenna was Mrs. L W. Burlingame. Until recently Mr. Burlingame was a realty dealer in this city. Miss McKenna lived in Portland for two years during which time she was soprano soloist at the Taylor St. Methodist church. She left Portland three years ago and until she joined Miss Morelle last September, was engaged in concert work in New York, The six Parisian Harmony girls are under contract to appear in England and Germany after completing the Empress tour at Kansas City. While abroad Miss McKenna will study to appear in grand opera."

To the Residents of the Village:

Your attention is called to Village Ordinance No. 342, Section 1, which provides that no person shall deposit garbage, ashes or other rubbish, in any of the streets or public places in the village.

(Signed) The Common Council.

LAVERN M. IDE.

The following clippings from the New York Times of May 18 and the New York Herald of the same date show the esteem in which Lavern M. Ide was held in his business relations and social life in the East:

Mr. Lavern M. Ide, one of the most widely known men in the piano trade in this country, died yesterday of valvular heart disease, at his home, 263 Primrose avenue, Mount Vernon. Mr. Ide was born in Manchester, Mich, 54 years ago and when a young man became identified with the piano manufacturing industry in the West. He rose to the secretaryship of the Farrand Company of Detroit when still a young man. He became known all over the country as one of the most enterprising manufacturers, and eight years ago came to New York when he became treasurer of the Laffargue Piano Company of this city. Mr. Ide held that position until last October when he retired on account of ill health and had since been living quietly at Mount Vernon. He was president of the New York Piano Manufacturers' Association for the last two years and was president of the Piano Club of New York.

Mr. Ide is survived by his wife, one daughter and mother, Mrs M A. Ide of Tecumseh, Michigan. The funeral will be held at his late residence this afternoon and the body will be taken to Tecumseh, Mich, for burial.—New York Herald.

Laverne M. Ide, 54 years old, 263 Primrose Avenue, Mt. Vernon, for many years a well-known piano manufacturer, died yesterday at his home after a year's illness from heart trouble. Until last October Mr. Ide was vice president of the Laffargue Piano Company of this city. He resigned on account of ill health. He also resigned as president of the New York Piano Manufacturers' Association and of the New York Piano Club on January 1.

Mr. Ide was born in Manchester, Mich., and taught school before coming East. He was for a number of years secretary of the Farrand Piano Company of Detroit. In New York he was well known in club circles and was a member of the New York Athletic Club and of the Friars. He was also a 32nd degree Mason. Mr. Ide is survived by one daughter, Mrs James Postal of Evart, Mich., and his mother, Mrs. Wm. Ide of Tecumseh, Mich., where his body will be taken for burial.—New York Times.

The Indicator of May 23 contained a fine picture of Mr. Ide and a lengthy tribute to his memory both socially and in his business life. Also in the Musical Trade Review of the same date a page is given in a review of his life and in a loving appreciation of his worth. A fine picture is also given.

Bit of First Aid.

In cases of shock and collapse it may be advisable in certain cases where collapse is imminent to administer a little stimulant in the shape of brandy and water, but it has to be noted that the use of alcohol under such circumstances must be carefully carried out, inasmuch as in certain cases (as in apoplexy, for example) the administration of alcohol is calculated to prove highly injurious.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is faith in action. "Faith believeth in all things." Enthusiasm puts that belief to the test. The enthusiast believes that the thing can be done; he has faith to believe that it ought to be done; he has enthusiasm to do it. To the unthinking, enthusiasm is but the foam on the deeply stirred waters. In truth, it is the striving of the waters themselves. It is the very life of effort.—From "The Power of Mental Demand," by Herbert Edward Law.

A PETITION TO FATHER TIME

Backward, turn backward, oh Time
in your flight,
Give us a Tango-less day and a night;
Go back to days when our woman-
kind sweet
Wore something more than a smile
on the street;
Turn back to split-less, low-neckless days,
Turn back from make-up, a very long ways,
Give us a drama without the white slave,
Give us a tip-less and less fancy
shave;
Give us our movies in one single reel,
Sans all the ad-slides that make no appeal;
Backward we'd go to an auto-less
age,
Back to a cubist-less artistic stage;
And oh, Father Time, if you will be so good,
Swing back to a time of high-living less food!

TENTH ANNUAL FIELD MEET.

CLINTON DEFEATS BLISSFIELD FOR THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Adrian Wins the Track Meet and Relay.

The weather man finally agreed to let us have a good day for the tenth annual county field meet. The weather had been threatening on the early morn.

The first on the program was the baseball game between Blissfield and Clinton for the W. B. Jarvis championship cup. The game was a very poor one all the way through. Clinton started right off and piled up a seven run lead in two innings. Blissfield made an uphill fight but could not overcome it.

The tennis tournament took place at the same time with the following schools represented: Adrian, Clinton, Morenci and Tecumseh. The Tecumseh boys won all of their matches and the girls lost all. This puts Tecumseh boys and Clinton girls tied. They will probably play it off soon.

The track meet started off with the 100 yard dash which was won by Bartley of Adrian in 10 seconds. Frazier of Adrian came near to busting the Michigan Interscholastic record of 52:3. Hood also of Adrian made a fast mile in 5 16. Exelby of Britton outshone all of them taking three firsts He jumped 5ft. 6 in. without touching the pole once which was four inches higher than his nearest rival. He could have put four inches on top of that with easily copped the Wright, Kay & Co. track cup and also the Relay Championship cup with the time of 1:46.

100 yard dash—Bartley, Adrian, first; Schneider, Tecumseh, second; Hunt, Morenci, third. Time 10:2.

220 yard dash—Bartley, Adrian, first; Schneider of Tecumseh, second; Hunt, Morenci, third. Time 24:1

MR. LEWIS A. RIFFLE tells his experience with coughs and colds that lead to nervousness and debility.

Mr. Lewis Riffle.

Colds are often aggravated during the Summer because inactive bowels and a stomach out of order are prime causes in keeping a cold from getting well.

Pe-ru-na has very beneficial laxative qualities that neutralize such conditions. Its tonic ingredients tone up the system, and thus invigorate the stomach's functions to normal activity.

Mr. Riffle's experience is especially interesting at this time of the year because it shows the close relationship there is between a nervous breakdown and a neglected cold.

Pe-ru-na should be kept in the home at all times, that a cold upon its first appearance may be treated promptly and successfully. This often saves money and time, and what is more important, a great deal of vitality.

Mr. Riffle, of 758 Gautenbein Ave., Portland, Ore., writes: "I have found Pe-ru-na a most remarkable medicine for building up the system and for curing coughs and colds.

"I took it for four weeks a few months ago when I was all run down, nervous and debilitated, and it quickly restored my health.

"I always keep it on hand, as a few doses will cure a cold if taken in time."

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Pe-ru-na Tablets.

FELLOWS SAYS M.A.C. CANNOT OBTAIN CASH

Loan Plan of State Board Is Called Unconstitutional.

Lansing, Mich., May 25.—The Michigan Agricultural college's last hope remains in the decision of the supreme court, which is not expected before June 1.

The proposition of borrowing funds to tide the institution over until such time as the supreme court's decision clarifies the atmosphere was sent glimmering, when Attorney General Fellows handed down an opinion, asked for by the state board of agriculture, as to the legality of the board making a loan of $75,000.

The attorney general holds that the act of creating the state board of agriculture does not include the right to borrow money, that it would be beyond the power of the legislature to bind the state by borrowing money in any case except as particularly specified in section 10 of article X of the constitution, which says the state can borrow money only "to meet deficits in revenue, repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state or aid the United States in time of war."

Port Huron, Mich., May 25.—An erring wife and an angry spouse, and of course the other man, figured in an exciting arrest at the Hotel Union here, when Mrs. Alive Roberts, of Flint, was taken into custody with Earl Randall, of Battle Creek. Randall is employed as a fireman on the Grand Trunk, and when he pulled out of Battle Creek Friday night he was accompanied by Mrs. Roberts.

"Mr. Randall is not to blame," sobbed Mrs. Roberts, when arraigned in police court. "I coaxed him into it."

The Pink Sunbonnet

How an Artist Found His Model

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Neal Whitcomb whistled cheerfully as he climbed the hill to the low white farmhouse. On every side the ground sloped away from the hospitable looking domicile. In front was a tree covered lawn, on the north was a vegetable garden, on the south a flower garden and on the east sunny fields of strawberries.

Neal went up the front walk and rang the doorbell.

A middle aged black woman responded to his summons.

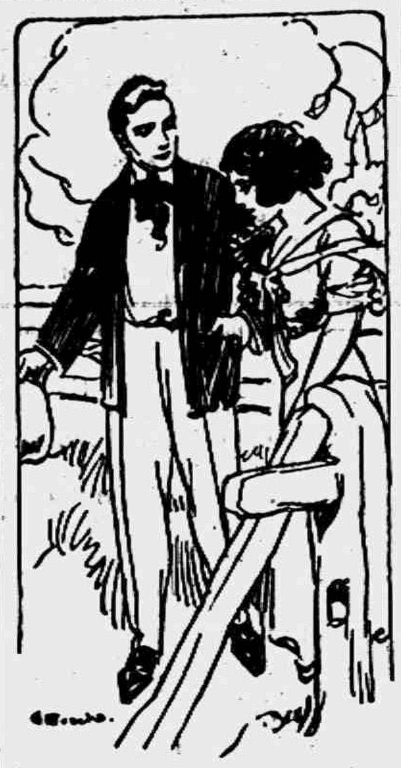
"I am looking for Mr. Huxford," said Neal.

"Mistah Huxford am gone to town with a load of berries," replied the servant, "and Missis Huxford am gone to de sewin' s'ciety."

Neal smiled pleasantly. "Then I'm afraid I must call again. Perhaps you can tell me if there is a Miss Huxford here?"

The woman shook her head. "No, sah; ain't never heard of no Miss Huxford. Dere's young Master Huxford, but he's away at school jes' now."

"I am a painter—an artist," explained Neal as he turned away. "I am staying at the hotel. The proprietor told me I might find a young lady to pose for me up here at Huxfords'. I told him I wanted some one dressed as a country girl in a pink sunbonnet—to put in a picture, you know." Then, suddenly realising that he was doing much useless explaining, he added hastily, turning away, "Of course there may be another Huxford."



"MISS BEMIS, I WONDER IF YOU REMEMBER ME?"

"Dere ain't no mo' Huxfords around heah," advised the woman, and she added, with a twinkle in her eyes: "P'raps mebbe Mr. Dowd down to the hotel meant yo' could find a young lady out in our strawb'ry beds here. Dere's any sight of 'em pickin' berries this minit."

"May I go around and look for myself?" inquired Neal. And without waiting for permission he started around the house.

"Mebbe yo' might find a pink sunbonnet yander in de field," called the servant after him.

Neal Whitcomb went around to the back of the farmhouse, through the green tunnel of a long grape arbor and down a winding path that led to a barred gate. Over the gate he went into a small field, and, crossing this field, where several cows were pastured, he came to another gate, against which he leaned in stunned surprise.

Here were several acres given over to long rows of strawberries, and thickly scattered over the field was a sea of pink sunbonnets!

There was the sound of laughing voices, merry questions and answers, pink sunbonnets bobbing up and down as sun browned hands filled the square wooden baskets, which were quickly removed by several older women, who kept tally of the pickings of each girl.

Out of this sea of pink sunbonnets he was to choose his model! The landlord of the village hotel was evidently a joker. No wonder the black servant at the house yonder had grinned when he mentioned pink sunbonnets!

Neal turned away and tramped with what dignity he could muster back through the grape arbor and around the path to the front entrance. He had started down the path when the servant ran out and spoke to him.

"Scuse me, sah," she said timidly. "I hope yo' all don't think I was gettin' a joke off on yo'?"

"Not at all," said Neal stiffly.

"If yo'll scuse my presumptiousness, mistah, I'd like to say somethin'," went on Delia. "Yo' was sayin' yo'd like to paint a young lady inter yo'r pictur'?"

"Yes."

"I spects dere's money in it fer de young lady, sah?"

"Of course I always pay my models," said Neal.

The woman came closer and spoke confidentially.

"Den, sah, I'd like to recommend Miss Sally Bemis, the pretties' young lady in de county, lak a rose, sah—so pinky and sweet! Her folks has come down in de worl', and dey's livin' in dat little cottage yander on a weeny corner of de big plantashun dat belonged to Miss Sally's grandpap, old General Bemis. Dere's jes' Miss Sally and her ma, and her ma's deliket, and Miss Sally works all kinder ways to earn money. Now she demeans herself by pickin' strawb'rys fer Mr. Huxford. It ain't no ways fer a Bemis to earn money erlong wid de village gals hereabouts."

"Thank you, auntie, for the information," said Neal, who was much interested in the story of the plucky young girl. "Shall I call upon Mrs. Bemis?"

"Well, sah, suppose yo' tak' a look at Miss Sally fust. If yo' spoke fust it might lift up dere hopes, and mebbe she might not suit. If she don't yo' must be mighty particular!" she ended rather belligerently.

"Where shall I find her, auntie?" asked Neal patiently. "I certainly can't go into the field and face that battery of sunbonnets."

"Why, jes' set here on de end of de varanda behin' de honeysuckle vines. Dey'll all come trailin' past pretty soon, and yo' jes' fix yo' eye on de pretties' and most uppsy one of de whole lot, and dat's Miss Sally. If yo' satisfied yo' can go and see 'em. I gotter go, sah."

He went up to the wide piazza and sat down in a great easy chair close to the honeysuckle that screened the piazza from the path around which the strawberry pickers must come.

Two years ago, at the art school, there had been a little student, and he was sure her name was Sally Bemis or something of that sort. He had given several talks to the students, and he remembered the girl's lovely, earnest face upturned to his. If he had met her oftener he would have fallen in love then and there, but he was very busy at that time, and he was about to sail for Italy, and the little student had drifted out of his memory.

Voices were heard approaching from the rear of the farmhouse, and presently there strolled past, singly or in groups, the strawberry pickers.

Nineteen girls had gone out of the big gate, and he confessed himself disappointed that not one would do. There came a light step along the path and a rich contralto voice trilling softly. Through the honeysuckle vines he saw her coming, sunbonnet slipped back on the dark masses of her curls; her fair face with its magnolia-like complexion tinged with soft pink; her lovely dark eyes, fringed with long, curling lashes; her sweetly curved lips, so tenderly smiling.

It was Miss Sally Bemis. More than that, she was the one girl for his picture. She was the girl of his dreams, and she was the little student of the art school!

Neal overtook her at the gate.

She turned lovely, surprised eyes at him, and suddenly a deep rose flush stained her cheek from brow to chin. There was embarrassed recognition in her glance.

Neal lifted his hat.

"Miss Bemis, I wonder if you remember me?" he asked eagerly.

"One does not soon forget a celebrity like Neal Whitcomb, the artist," she said quickly, holding out a stained little hand. "What are you doing way down here in Dixie?"

"Painting," said Neal, falling into step beside her. "I've been looking for a model to pose in a daisy field. I wanted a girl in a pink sunbonnet, and when I expressed my wish somebody sent me up here to Huxfords'. Fancy my dismay when I went out to the strawberry field and saw twenty pink sunbonnets!"

Sally laughed deliciously.

"The pink sunbonnets are Mrs. Huxford's idea. She bought a piece of pink calico and made sunbonnets for all the girls; said she liked to see us in the field."

"It's an amazingly pretty sight," agreed Neal as he went down the hill beside her. "You are taking home some of the strawberries?"

"Yes, to my mother. She is an invalid. Her failing health, combined with lack of money, compelled me to abandon my art career," she explained cheerfully.

"That was a hardship," said Neal sympathetically.

Sally laughed again.

"It was at the time, but I have found out that my talents are more in the domestic line than otherwise. I am fortunate in finding it out in time, don't you think so?"

"Brava!" cried Neal. "And now tell me, Miss Sally, is this your home that we are approaching?"

"Yes, and there is mother on the porch waiting for me. You will come in and have a cup of tea with us, Mr. Whitcomb?"

"It will give me much pleasure," he said, so emphatically that they both laughed with some sudden knowledge of good fellowship.

Sally led him to the porch and introduced him to the sweet faced little lady who was her mother, and then she disappeared while Neal talked to Mrs. Bemis.

Mrs. Bemis declared that she and Neal fell in love with each other long before Neal fell in love with Sally, but they all agreed that it didn't matter in the least so long as Neal and Sally were married and lived happily ever after.

If you ever see Neal Whitcomb's famous painting "He Loves Me—He Loves Me Not!" showing a pink sunbonneted girl telling her fortune in a daisy field you will recognize the lovely girl stripping the petals from the daisy as Miss Sally Bemis, and those who know will add that she is the artist's wife.

FORMER DETROIT MAN DIES IN AUTO WRECK

John Maine Killed on Way to Assume New Position.

Hudson, N. Y. May 25.—John Maine, chief auditor of the S. S. Stafford Ink Company of New York, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon at Blue Store, nine miles below this city when the left rear tire on his car exploded and he lost control, sending the car into the ditch and being pinned under its body. His wife, who was with him, was not even scratched. The body was shipped to Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Maine left New York Saturday morning for Detroit, Mr. Maine's former home, where he was to have taken charge of the local office of the Stafford company. They had planned to spend Saturday night in Albany and reach Detroit on Tuesday. Mrs. Maine said that when the tire blew out they were on a straight road. She said she heard the explosion of the tire and knew nothing more until she found herself being helped to her feet in the field into which she had been thrown.

FEDERALS NASTY

Rebel Leader Scents Plot to Cause Intervention.

PREDICTS ATTACK ON BORDER

General Funston To Take No Official Notice of Firing on Aeroplane—Work of Guerrillas—Cargoes Must Clear from Rebel Agents—Federals Lose Many in Late Battle.

TAMPICO. — Trouble of a small but serious nature may be expected in Tampico by the night of Thursday, May 28, unless the one million pesos demanded from firms, consuls, priests and citizens by the rebel commander has been paid at that time. Meantime the priests have been jailed for ransom, the Spanish and German consuls have been asked for money and the oil companies told they must pay for the maintenance of the rebel army now quartered in this port.

General Gonzales has demanded his one million pesos as follows: From the Aguila Oil company, (English) 400,000 pesos; from Senor Trapaga, Spanish consul, 150,000 pesos; from a Spanish commercial house controlled by Senor Trapaga, 100,000 pesos; from the German consul, 100,000 pesos, and from the citizens of Tampico, 250,000 pesos. All will probably pay or endeavor to pay the sums assessed against them except the German consul, who has refused, saying, "Germany will protect her subjects without the payment of a single peso."

EL PASO, TEX. — Flying columns of Federal volunteers, mounted, are making their way through southwestern Coahuila towards the border with the avowed intention of precipitating intervention by attacking American border patrols when they reach the international boundary, according to private telegrams received by Rafael Musquiz, rebel consul in El Paso.

One detachment of the federals has passed through Cuatro Cienegas, Coahuila, headed northward. Cuatro Cienegas is about 175 miles south of the frontier at Eagle Pass, Tex. Another column is reported marching toward Ojinaga opposite Presidio, Tex., from the vicinity of Curevo, between Cuatro Cienegas and the border.

No exact estimate of their numbers is available, but it is reported that three different groups will total 700 or 800 men. The names of their leaders are not known.

It is reported that these volunteers are ex-members of the volunteer commands under General Orozco and other leaders who took part in the Orozco revolution. Until recently they were garrisoned at Monclova, but on the evacuation of that city they turned westward instead of going south towards Saltillo. Among them, too, are troops who escaped the rebels after their defeat at Paredon last week. These straggling forces, all making for the border, will be intercepted by Constitutionalist troops from Coahuila and Chihuahua points, according to Mr. Musquiz.

TORREON, MEXICO. — There will be no battle in Mexico City, but the final stand of the Federals will be made at Queretaro, according to information reported to have been received by Villa.

Aeroplane Marksmen Guerillas.

VERA CRUZ. — General Funston, in accordance with the American policy, will not take any official notice of shots fired at the aeroplane flown by Lieutenant P. N. L. Bellinger. It has been agreed officially that the shots which whizzed dangerously near the fragile flying machine were fired by irregular Mexican troops, guerillas, who are scouting on the edge of the United States lines. They operate independently although avowed Federals.

Must Clear from Rebel Agents.

JUAREZ, MEXICO. — Foreign ships landing cargoes at Tampico must have clearance papers from rebel commercial agents if they have cleared from any port where there is an authorized representative of the revolution, according to an order issued by General Carranza.

Want Foreigners to Return.

EL PASO. — Constitutionalists in the territory between Juarez and Torreon are anxious for foreigners to return and take up their business affairs, according to Special Representative George C. Carothers, of the state department. Mr. Carothers returned from Torreon where he had been with the revolutionary army as a special observer for the state department.

FARM HAND IS ACCUSED

Jealousy Is Suspected to Have Figured in New Hampshire Murder.

CONCORD, N. H. — Eugene Wood was brought here from Henniker charged with the murder of Howard W. Peaslee, formerly selectman of Henniker. Peaslee was shot to death Friday night, his body being found in a small shop near his home. Wood is a farm hand. He has been in the employ of Miss Ida M. Barnes, who manages a farm in Henniker, which is owned by her father, Walter Barnes.

Peaslee, the murdered man, was a friend of the Barnes family and frequently called at their home. It is said that Wood became jealous of him.

WOMAN INCINERATES SELF

Builds Fire, Saturates Clothes With Kerosene, and Applies Match.

DAVENPORT, IOWA. — Magdalena Prouter, 65, widow of Franklin Prouter, burned herself to death early in the day.

When members of the family stepped out of the house, 1404 Franklin street, Mrs. Prouter locked all the doors, and, going down into the cellar, piled papers and wood together in the coal-bin. Then, sprinkling the heap and her clothing with kerosene, she laid down and touched a match to the pile. When the police arrived, fifteen minutes later, she was burned to a crisp. Ever since her husband's death Mrs. Prouter had brooded over her sorrow, and it is believed that she was temporarily deranged.

MESOTHORIUM CANCER CURE

Powder Has Radium Properties; Physicians Get Results.

CHICAGO. — Two glass tubes neither larger than a match and each containing a small quantity of a brownish powder, were taken from the customs office by officials of Michael Reese hospital. The brownish powder was mesothorium, a radia-active substance containing 25 per cent of radium. It is the output for nine months of a German factory, has a monetary value of $12,500 and a humanitarian value not to be computed in the treatment of cancer. The scientists at the hospital say that mesothirium holds more curative possibilities than radium itself, its radiating powers being greater, and that the Michael Reese institution now has the best equipped cancer department in the country.

The mesothorium is to be used in conjunction with the X-ray in a cross-fire treatment. The biggest coal for X-rays ever built has been installed at the hospital. It throws a sixteen-inch spark. Since the establishment of the cancer department fire months ago seventy-five cases have been treated with results that the attending physicians describe as "nothing short of astonishing."

PONTIAC, MICH. — Mrs. Jennie Stark, thirty-two years old, a patient at the Pontiac State hospital, escaped from her guards, wandered on the Grand Trunk tracks and was killed when she ran in front of a yard engine.

She resided at Oxford.

Shiawassee Boy Held as Burglar.

CORUNNA, MICH. — Chester Pratt, eighteen, son of a prominent Vernon township farmer, waived examination on a burglary charge in a Durand justice court and is in the county jail, awaiting arraignment in the circuit court. He is accused of stealing two typewriters.

CRAZED MAN SHOOTS WIFE AND COMPANION

Turns His Gun on Himself and Blows Brains Out.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Jealousy, a divorce suit and a shotgun were responsible for one of the most shocking tragedies Calhoun county has known for years.

The dead man is Henry Manke, a farmer, thirty-four years old, and those dying are his wife and Walter Berhammer, the latter also a farmer.

The tragedy was the result of a suit for divorce brought a year ago by Mrs. Manke, who alleged cruelty, and which suit is pending in the supreme court.

Manke, who was driving in a single rig, met Berhammer and his wife driving together and followed them for half a mile when he opened fire on Berhammer with a repeating shotgun. Two charges of shot entered his back before he reached the farmhouse of Edward L. Root, nearby, where he was again shot.

Manke then turned the weapon on his wife, firing two shots at her. The backs of both the wife and Berhammer were torn away by the lead, and they are dying at the Root home. Leaving them, Manke next shot his own horse and then blew out his own brains.

CAR SIDESWIPED; EIGHT HURT

Boys Said to Be Responsible for Eight Broken Legs.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Recklessness of unidentified boys caused injury to eight foreigners employed on the new Kalamazoo-Grand Rapids interurban railway when the men were returning to the city. The boys shoved a flat car that was standing on a siding up near the main line. The foreigners who were coming to the city on a flat car sat with their feet hanging off the side. The darkness prevented them from seeing the other flat car, and it sideswiped the car on which the men were riding.

All had their legs crushed, one may lose his right leg, and four had both of their legs broken.

RIVER YIELDS MISSING MAN

Preston Strong, Lost in November Storm, Is Found.

ALGONAC, MICH. — The body of Preston Strong, who was lost in the fateful gale of November 9, while on his way to Strawberry Island in a canoe with Alfred R. Welch, Pontiac auto man, was found floating in the steamer path in Lake St. Clair, twelve miles off Algonac.

Welch's body was found in the Detroit river near Grosse Isle last Sunday, nearly fifty miles from where the badly decomposed corpse of Strong was sighted by a steamer captain.

A brother of Welch came to Algonac and positively identified the body by a gold watch, the gold fillings in the teeth, and his shoes.

Flint Man Raps "Dancing."

FLINT, MICH. — Superintendent of Schools Alvin N. Cody, relative of "Buffalo Bill" Cody, has warned Flint school teachers not to become victims of the fancy dance craze.

Mr. Cody believes that those who teach the nation's young, should not indulge in overly hilarious dancing activities.

Faces Trial for Murder.

CHEBOYGAN, MICH. — The selection of a jury in the trial of Joe Tarjeft, for the murder of his father, Julius Tarjeft, prominent Alverno farmer, early in April, has consumed two days.

It is evident that insanity will be the plea entered in Tarjeft's behalf.

FELLOWS SAYS M.A.C. CANNOT OBTAIN CASH

Loan Plan of State Board Is Called Unconstitutional.

LANSING, MICH. — The Michigan Agricultural college's last hope remains in the decision of the supreme court, which is not expected before June 1.

The proposition of borrowing funds to tide the institution over until such time as the supreme court's decision clarifies the atmosphere was sent glimmering, when Attorney General Fellows handed down an opinion, asked for by the state board of agriculture, as to the legality of the board making a loan of $75,000.

The attorney general holds that the act of creating the state board of agriculture does not include the right to borrow money, that it would be beyond the power of the legislature to bind the state by borrowing money in any case except as particularly specified in section 10 of article X of the constitution, which says the state can borrow money only "to meet deficits in revenue, repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state or aid the United States in time of war."

TURN IN RIVER DEATH TRAP

Craft Is Swamped and One Man Fails to Come Up.

ROCKWOOD, MICH. — Max Werthewafka, a cement worker, of Romulus, was drowned and two companions saved when their launch capsized in the Huron river one half mile from here.

Werthewafka's companions were Emmett Deaudry and Edward Thomas, of this place. They were trying for a turn in the river, which is but fifty feet wide, when the craft dipped and was swamped. When Deaudry and Thomas came up and struck out for the shore they could see nothing of their companions.

CHILD DROPS INTO CISTERN

Rotten Cover Boards Cause Quick Death of Active Yougster.

MT. CLEMENS. — Eluding her mother, who was in the front part of the house, Gertrude Frederick, three years old, broke through the top of a cistern and was drowned.

A few seconds after Mr. and Mrs. Frederick missed their daughter they went outdoors and around to the rear of the house. The broken boards, which were rotten, told the story. There was but two and one half feet of water in the cistern, but the child was dead.

WRECKAGE MENACES TRAFFIC

Derelict That Went Down Friday Is Source of Danger.

DETROIT, MICH. — Wreckage of the steamer W. H. Gilbert, which went down after being struck by the steamer Calvera last Friday, is menacing vessel traffic in Lake Huron, according to a wireless message received in Detroit.

The message said wreckage was afloat thirty-five miles southeast of Thunder Bay.

ATTEMPT TO CHANGE SEATS

Two Men in Boat Overturn and One Loses Life.

ST. CLAIR, MICH. — Carl Fleury, thirty-one years old, was drowned in St. Clair river here. He and Albert Busha were fishing in a small boat when they attempted to change seats and the boat capsized.

Busha held on to the boat while Fleury started to swim ashore, but was taken with cramps and sank.

MARRIAGE MOURNERS.

Rites of a German Club When One of Its Members Weds.

There are other places besides All Souls' college, Oxford, that penalize a member who marries. Many readers have doubtless heard of the Bachelors' club in London. When a member so far forgets the principles of the club as to marry he is promptly expelled. By payment of a fine of $125 he can, however, retain an honorary membership, but of course he cannot enjoy the privileges of this select band of nonmarrying men.

There is a similar organization in Germany—the Junggesellen club. Whenever there comes to the officials of this club any intimation that a member contemplates matrimony he is immediately summoned for trial in the club court, with the president as judge. The culprit is allowed to plead in extenuation of his offense, and upon his skill in presenting such plea depends the amount of his fine, which ranges from $100 to $1,000.

The humorous feature of the fine consists in the purpose to which the money is applied. The money is devoted to a dinner, whereat all members appear in mourning attire. At the conclusion of the repast the president solemnly reads the sentence of expulsion, and the delinquent is led from the room amid the groans and lamentations of his erstwhile clubfellows.—London Tit-Bits.

LUXURY IN ARGENTINA.

The Big Story They Tell of a Buenos Aires Hotel Charges.

The hotels of Buenos Aires are fairly good and very expensive. One of the cheapest rooms I saw in the Plaza hotel was $7 a day, European style. There are good Spanish hotels with rooms from $2 a day upward.

The Plaza is, perhaps, the most cosmopolitan of all the hostelries of the city. In its ballroom and its drawing room I was reminded of the Waldorf-Astoria. The meals are a little higher than in the big hotels of New York city. But there are numerous small restaurants where good refreshments may be had at reasonable prices.

As an example of the charges in the big hotels of Buenos Aires I may quote a story told me by an Argentine official. He said that some years ago a commission of European ambassadors was entertained by the Argentine government at the Bristol hotel on the Avenida de Mayo and that the bill for soap and perfumery was $15,000 a week. Nobody seemed to complain and apparently everybody was satisfied.

Luxuries seem to be necessities to the Argentines, for I was told that the tariff on champagne is only 2 per cent, while that on a plow is 50 per cent.—National Magazine.

The Shrewd Advertiser.

The thoughtful man thinks ahead. The prudent man profits by his ability to forecast the future as well as to scrutinize the present. One of the most prominent advertisers in the country says he makes it a rule to increase his advertising appropriation whenever business slackens and he doubles and trebles it in times of severe business depression. This is his logical conclusion: "The new customers that I get when times are hard I always keep when times become good. They come to me largely from those who lose them because they fail to continue their publicity campaigns. A business depression in this country never lasts long and it is always seed time for me. The harvest follows when prosperity returns." It is a wise man who knows his own business better than the other man does.—Leslie's.

Weight of a Lion.

What does a lion weigh? Those who know the look of the king of beasts best and how small his little body really is will probably come farthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate, but a full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger this size has, however, considerably more muscular strength than the big cost lion.

THE LOST IDEA

I am largely a solitary, and having a sufficient income, employ my time by sitting in my studio and collecting thoughts. One evening a literary friend dropped in. Perceiving after a time that he appeared to be embarrassed, I asked what the difficulty was.

"I have a request to prefer," he said.

"I shall be happy to do what I can for you."

"Upon my last visit, you entertained me with an idea. Would it be possible for me to borrow that Idea from you? I promise to return it."

In a whisper he described what it was. I controlled myself as I listened. Alas! He thought it was mine—but I myself had borrowed it. I determined, however, from pure vanity, not to inform him of this fact.

"Certainly," I replied. "I shall be most happy to let you have my idea. Keep it as long as you like."

He departed with it joyfully, and the evening another friend dropped in. As I saw him, I became astonished. It was long since he had favored me with a visit, and I recognized him as the one from whom I had borrowed the Idea I had loaned. Smiling, he took his seat.

"By the way," he began, "I hope you will excuse me, but some time ago you borrowed an Idea of mine, and if I could have it back——"

"Certainly. I will see that it is put in order and returned to you at once. Thank you for reminding me." This I said with outward ease, but inwardly I was greatly troubled.

My second friend laughed at my manner. "Confess," he said abruptly, "that you have not that Idea now in your possession. I know this, because I am a day late."

"What do you mean?" I asked sternly.

"I was to have come last night. Indeed, I did come as far as the entrance to this studio. There met a friend of yours coming out."

"And what happened?" I asked feverishly.

"I perceived," he replied, "that he had my Idea with him—under his arm. 'You have borrowed that,' I shouted, 'from the man whom you have just visited! It is mine! You must give it to me!'"

"And what did he reply?"

"He drew himself up haughtily and said, 'what nonsense! This is my own original Idea.' While we were disputing together, a third man came up, and before we knew it he had grabbed the Idea and made 'way with it." I leaned forward anxiously. I was fond of that Idea, and to have it stolen was a calamity; for, alas, I had no other.

"Who was he?" I asked. "Do you know this thief who stole it?"

And my second friend smiled back "Certainly. He was the one from whom I borrowed it originally."

Maybe He Got It Back.

Brown and Jones were leaning on a polished counter and talking intimately. Then said Brown to Jones:

"Look here, old man. Suppose you were to come around to my apartments one of these days and should walk up to my room and, receiving no answer to your knock, should come in and find my lifeless body stretched out cold across the bed. Now, in a case like that, what would you do?"

"I'll tell you," answered Jones after thinking it over. "I'd institute an immediate search for the $5 you have owed me for two years."—Exchange.

THEN AND NOW

In looking over an old copy of the Tecumseh Herold bearing date February 12, 1863, the first line on the local page to meet our eye is:

"The draft takes place in this county today."

This item to those who lived in the time of our Civil war, is full of significance and they will remember what it meant to those who not enlisted in the army. But, what most attracted our attention was the market report of that day.

MARKET REPORT
February 12, 1863.

White wheat	$1.30-1.35
Red wheat	1.20-1.25
Rye	.40
Corn (ear)	.23
Corn (shelled)	.45
Oats	.35- .37
Potatoes	.35- .40
Butter	.15- .16
Eggs	.15- .16
Lard	.06- .08
Hay	6 00-7.00

We can see quite a differance in prices when we compare them with the report of today, and with the exception of wheat everything was lower then than now.

WESTMINSTER GUILD HOLDS OPEN MEETING.

Talk on Mexico.

At the meeting of the Westminster Guild Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, a very interesting program was given, the attraction of the evening being Mrs. Jennie C. Law Hardy in her talk on Mexico.

Preceeding the lecture the ladies of the Guild and their guests enjoyed a short musical program consisting of piano duets by the Misses Edith Rector and Lulu Brown and songs by the Boys' Glee Club of the high school who were accompanied by Miss Genevieve Halladay.

Mrs. Hardy gave a short history of Mexico from its early days up to the unsettled condition of the present time—commercially, socially and politically, also the relation now existing between that country and our United States. She presented for inspection a splendid assortment of curios with which she illustrated her description of the Mexican's life.

For pureness of diction and clearness of perception, Mrs. Hardy's talk was exceptionally fine. Those who were in attendance felt well repaid for any effort they may have made and went away with a better knowledge of the Mexican situation.

At the close of the lecture punch and wafers were served by Mesdames Floyd Ager, Wade Jones and Elmer Slayton.

FLAG DAY PROCLAMATION

Every civilized nation symbolizes its governmental ideals. The story of the origin and growth of the Stars and Stripes is the story of American patriotism. Patriotism constitutes the very soul of a republic. The 48 stars represent our Union and the stripes symbolize the enduring attributes of this Union

It should be remembered that Old Glory becomes more and more precious in proportion to the spirit of loyalty cherished by our citizens. We know the awful cost of this flag, we know its protecting influence, we know its message to all the peoples of the earth. Let it be carried in time of war and in time of peace consecrated to the ultimate reign of human justice.

Let the people of Michigan on Sunday, June 14th, display this sacred emblem and conduct such exercises as will encourage our youth to love and reverence the flag and what it symbolizes.

Therefore, I Woodbridge N. Ferris, governor of Michigan, do issue this proclamation and enthusiastically urge the observance of Sunday, the 14th of June, 1914, as Flag Day.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this 27th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1914 and of the Commonwealth the 78th.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Frederick C Martindale, Governor,
Secretary of State.

ADVICE TO THE GIRLS.

The following clipping is published by request of a subscriber who thinks it might do some good if girls who follow the fads of fashion know what others think of them:

"No wonder the boys and kids call you 'some chicken,' little girl, or that is sure some dress you've got on—it sure is. That dainty, clinging filmsy stuff is the prettiest cloth the merchant can display, and that silk sash of many colors so gracefully wrapped about the center of your little anatomy would put Joseph and his Biblical shirt to shame. You are laced and tailored to perfection according to some crazy Frenchman who wants to see all he can of your form. Your dress is too low at the neck and your sleeves are too short, and your skirt is far and away tighter than skirts were meant to be—that slit up the side is shocking—shows a stocking above your slipper that is almost transparent. And you haven't any more petticoat than a jack rabbit—you know you haven't, little girl. Oh! you're some top, you are indeed. Did you notice how that bunch of dirty loafers at the corner ogled at you as you went tripping along to some Sunday-school gathering? And you never stop to think, little girl, that they were rubbering out of pure admiration. Ask your big brother about it. If he has any sense he'll tell you something that would make your blood boil and your vanity go sideways and if you have any sense you'll take his word for it and lay that dress away and dress like mother used to. Put on something that is wide enough at the bottom for two petticoats and one pair of legs. There never was a Paris design, little one, that is half so beautiful as a young girl's modesty. Take it from us, little chicken or old hen, you can still make yourself a question mark and live next door, but keep on your own side of the high board fence."—Eaton Rapids Review.

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY.

Honoring her sister Mary, Miss Gertrude Kreidler entertained eighteen of her young lady friends at a six o'clock dinner Wednesday evening. The table was prettily decorated with flowers and the place cards bore on the reverse side the announcement of the marriage of the honored guest.

A bountiful three course dinner was served. Just as the company were engaged with their ice cream and cake, a telegram was brought to the door for Miss Florence Linton, the contents of which she read aloud to the others as follows:

Hear Ye.
We wish to announce to the friends of the bride
That soon the connubial knot will be tied Joining Mary and Otis whose surname is Smith.
The fact is a sure one and not any myth;
The day is appointed, is coming right soon,
The 24th day of the fair month of June,
We give you this notice, the truth to reveal,
And sign and deliver the same jingling spell.
The Public Announcer.

The evening was passed in a social good time, with much music both vocal and instrumental and each guest wished Mary a happy voyage on the Sea of Matrimony.

NOTICE

To whom it may concern.

Notice is hearby given that a meeting of the Township Board of the Township of Macon will be held at the Macon Township Hall on Friday, May 29 at 8 o'clock p. m. to consider the locating and establishing the extension of the Watson Drain traversing said Township.

Twp. Clerk.

TO ROAD OFFICIALS

Gentlemen:

With the Governor's proclamation calling for a State wide "Road Bee Day" on June 4th and 5th, there is open to you an opportunity to organize the forces in your community for two days of a real campaign against the bad places in your highways, and a corresponding responsibility if this opportunity is neglected.

DON'TS

Don't try to do too much.

Don't start more than you can finish. You cannot build a macadam road, nor very long stretches of gravel road in two days.

Don't haul gravel onto roads that have not been properly graded and drained.

Don't plow up long stretches of road and leave them impassable for passing vehicles to smooth down.

Don't grade roads that have not been properly staked out on correct lines.

WHAT MAY BE DONE TO ADVANTAGE

You can remove logs, rocks, stumps and stones from the roadway: fill holes preferably with good earth; cover stretches of sand with clay or gravel; drain wet places in the roadway; scrape off and outwards sod margins where they hold the water in the traveled track. When drained and graded, clay may be covered with sand or gravel, but the gravel should not contain any clay unless it is to be placed on sand. Culverts may be repaired, or new culverts put in.

Road drags (of planks or split logs) should be made and arrangements perfected for using them after rains, throughout the season, on all clay and loamy soils.

ORGANIZATION

All these things will be of great value to the roads of the State, but they will not be accomplished unless the work is well planned and performed under intelligent supervision. Let each community organize by road or school districts and appoint the best road builder in the neighborhood as "road boss" for two days, and then turn out and work loyally under his direction. See how much real good can be done to the roads in your district and by the concerted efforts of every district to the entire 70,000 miles of rural highways in Michigan. Let us all give this first State wide "Road Bee Day" an honest, earnest trial.

FRANK F. ROGERS,
State Highway Commissioner.

WHIRL OF THE WILLY WILLY

Fearful Force of the Miniature Cyclones of Australia.

Writing in Harper's Magazine, Norman Duncan tells of his first experience with the whirlwinds of the Australian desert:

"All at once a diminutive whirlwind took life under our very feet and went swishing and swirling to the east.

"'What's that?' cried the artist, astounded.

"It might have been a partridge whirring to new cover.

"'A little willy willy,' said the bushman.

"It was a singular phenomenon. Its force and activity were amazing, and the noise it made—the swish and hum and crackle of it—astonished us no less. We watched its erratic course. Its outline was definite. Its path no man could guess. And it moved swiftly, only occasionally stopping in indecision to spin like a top. It darted, it swerved, it circled. Had it returned upon its tracks—and there was no certainty that it would not immediately do so—we should have taken to our heels! It was so visible and small that, having short warning, we might have leaped aside and escaped. And a man would earnestly desire to elude it. It had a fearsome violence; it caught up the twigs; it scattered the pebbles; it tore at the scrub; it gathered a cloud of dust. When at last it vanished, a thick, red mist, high in the air, we laughed heartily at this comical little six foot cyclone, as we were disposed to regard it.

"Traveling subsequently in the midst of a host of these small winds, we had no laughter left.

"Precisely speaking, the willy willies are those destructive cyclones which originate in the ocean to the north of the continent and, blowing to the southwest, fall heavily on the northerly Western Australian coast from December to March. Off Ninety Mile beach, near Broome, the pearl fishers call them Cockeyed Bobs. Five years ago two visitations of the willy willies sent sixty luggers to the bottom and accounted for the disappearance of 800 men and more. It is now the custom of the pearlers to lie discreetly in harbor during the willy willy season. If, however, the great willy willy, instead of following the coast line in a southerly direction, deviates to the east, as sometimes happens, it crosses the continent to the great Australian bight, on the south coast, and its course is marked by torrential rains. A fall of as much as twenty-nine and one-half inches has been recorded. All the dry lands—where, too, we traveled—are in this way sometimes refreshed."

KILLS GIRL CHUM

Chicago Athlete Takes Life After Tragedy.

CLAIMS GIRL'S DEATH ACCIDENT

Dead Man Declares He Tried to Caress Her and Her Neck Was Broken in Struggle—Physicians Find Girl's Vertebrae Intact—Suicide Leaves Letter.

CHICAGO. — Reginald Barr, Chicago Marathon swimmer, died under the wheels of a train at Lisle, Ill., three miles west of Downers Grove, twelve hours after the body of his boyhood sweetheart, Florence Bentley, a model of the Paris Fashion Cloak company, had been found dead in a leafy bower near the latter town. A posse of men under Sheriff Kuhn of DuPage county has passed the night in the woods looking for Barr, whom they suspected of killing the girl.

Girl's Neck Not Broken.

With Barr's death was cleared up in part what promised to become one of the strangest death mysteries of the year. A note in the young man's pocket, evidently written under great excitement, told in disjointed sentences the story of the girl's death. Barr had tried to caress her; she had resented his attentions and in a struggle her neck had become broken, he said. Crazed by grief and anguish Barr had taken to the woods.

Physicians at Downers Grove, on hearing that Barr wrote he broke Miss Bentley's neck, made an examination and declared that the girl's neck was not broken, thereby complicating the mystery surrounding what really caused her death.

Letter Found on Barr.

The letter found on Barr is given herewith with the errors as found:

"Lisle, Ill., May 26, 1924—Dear Folks: God forgive me for causing me sweetheart's death. I didn't kill her.

"We walked out there and sat down. I tried to kiss her and she repulsed me. I asked her if she didn't want to be my sweetheart any more. She wouldn't answer.

"I took hold of her waist, leaned toward her and tried to love her. She started to scream. I couldn't think what ailed her. I became excited and put my wrist on her windpipe to stop her screaming, and I went completely out of my head. She became quiet all of a sudden.

"I thought I had hurt her and she was breathing heavily, but was senseless. I covered her up and don't remember what happened until I woke to find myself asleep laying along the road near Naperville. My mind came back. I realized what I had done and I went over to the place to end my life.

"The girl died of heart failure or fright. I surely could not kill the one I thought the most of in the whole world.

"I love her more than words can tell, and I would die for her, and will die for her. I have been partly insane for the last two days. Forgive me, and I pray to meet my sweetheart in heaven.

MISSING PREACHER LOCATED

Man Claiming to Be Rev. Louis A. Patmont Found in Barn.

ST. LOUIS, MO. — A man who claims to be the Rev. Louis A. Patmont, a prohibition advocate, who has been missing since he addressed a "dry" meeting at Westville, Ill., March 31, was found in a barn at an abandoned farmhouse near Columbia, Ill.

He claims he was kidnaped and has been kept under the influence of drugs since two men seized him on his way to deliver a local option address. He was in a terrible state of exhaustion when found.

Patmont was brought to St. Louis and provided with clothing, a bath and shave, and was accompanied by officers who took him to Danville, to tell his story to the grand jury today.

The authorities of several Illinois counties, and operatives from the Burns Detective agency are working in conjunction on the case.

A striking clew in the mysterious case is a big red automobile. Patmont says it was a big red automobile that carried him to the deserted farm house, near Columbia.

POPE NAMES 13 CARDINALS

United States Represented at Consistory by Four Cardinals.

ROME. — Thirteen cardinals were named by Pope Pius X. This was the first time in history that the United States was represented at a consistory by four cardinals, namely, Gibbons, O'Connell, Farley and Falconio. Cardinal Diomede Falconio, formerly apostolic delegate to the United States, was created a cardinal archbishop.

Cardinal Deacon F. Della Volpe was appointed camerlingo. The camerlingo is the pope's chamberlain and in the event of the pontiff's death he serves as the nominal head of the Roman Catholic church until another pope is elected. The first of the new cardinals to be notified was the Most Rev. Louis Nazaire Begin, archbishop of Quebec. Next in order were Mgr. Giasola Mendez, archbishop of Toledo, Spain; Mgr Caernoch, archbishop of St Rigonia, and Mgr. Piffl, archbishop of Vienna.

A Betrothal

Story of a Dancing Mania

By F. A. MITCHEL

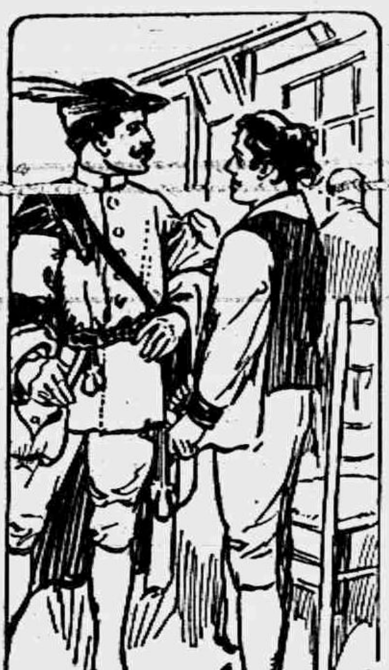
In medieval times on the coast of Denmark, overlooking the North sea, was a village the people of which made their living by fishing.

Martin Aarhuus, who followed in the footsteps of his father in getting a living by his nets, wooed and won Maria Stahr, who was conceded to be the prettiest girl in the village. Maria had pale blue eyes and a wealth of very light hair. As to her complexion, it was like milk tinged with rose leaves.

Unfortunately for the lovers, Maria's father was opposed to the match. He was a covetous man and wished to save his daughter's dowry. She was so beautiful that he believed some man having a fair supply of this world's goods would be glad to marry her without the customary settlement on her. He found her with far more resolution than would be expected from beneath those mild eyes of hers. Martin, too, vowed that he would have the girl if he had to run away with her. The old man grew more and more angry, and at last, when quarreling with Martin on the subject, said, in a fit of passion:

"Before you shall possess my daughter I will give her to the devil."

Considering that the words were spoken in anger, nothing was thought of them. In spite of the old man's opposition, the lovers clung to each other and at last summoned their friends to witness their betrothal.



"WE NEED SOME ONE," SAID MARTIN, "TO PUT SPIRIT INTO US."

Since the gathering could not take place at Maria's home on account of her father's opposition, the guests were invited to meet at the house of Martin's parents.

While the festivities attending the betrothal were in progress old Stahr was at home grinding his teeth, though his wife was present at the betrothal.

When early in the evening the guests, recognizing that the occasion was one of sorrow rather than enjoyment, were thinking of returning to their homes there came a rap at the door, and on its being opened a tall, thin man in red doublet and hose, black breeches and a black velvet cap on his head, ornamented with a single red feather, stood in the opening.

"Good people," he said, "I am a traveler from the south on my way to Copenhagen. Not being used to your climate, I am benumbed with cold. I beg shelter of you and something to eat."

No one in those days would think of turning away a traveler who asked to be taken in, and the stranger was made welcome. Some of the viands that had been prepared for the betrothal, with a flagon of wine, were set before him, and he ate and drank heartily. After he had finished and wiped his lips with a napkin, giving his mustache a slight upturn, he seemed to be much refreshed.

"How can I repay you," he asked, "for your hospitality? I am aware that no one, except one entertained at an inn, would offer money. I see that you are gathered to make merry. May I not do something to enliven you?"

"We need some one," said Martin, "to put spirit into us. We are met to celebrate a betrothal. I am to marry this maiden," pointing to Maria, "but you would suppose from her lugubrious appearance that I was going to do her harm."

A shock passed through the assemblage at this harsh remark of Martin's concerning his betrothed, so unlike him, for throughout all old Stahr's opposition Martin had been singularly tender with his beloved. As for Maria, she cast an indignant glance at him and, advancing to the stranger, put her hand on his arm and, leading him from one to another of her guests, introduced him. Martin watched them with flashing eyes, and it was apparent that a turmoil had been stirred within him.

It was evident that there was something in the coming of this stranger that made a great change in the spirit of the assemblage and especially in the pair whose betrothal they had come together to celebrate. In a twinkling he seemed to have irritated Martin and insinuated himself into Maria's good graces. Presently it began to appear that he had enthralled her. The sad look she had worn before was now changed to merriment. She chatted briskly with her companion and laughed gleefully at everything he said. When walking with him and passing Martin she either did not deign to look at him or regarded him with hate.

Maria's mother saw all this, as did every one else, and was desirous of doing something to break it up. She accosted the stranger thus:

"Good sir, do you not play on any musical instrument or sing?"

"I will sing for you with pleasure. Have you a harp?"

The woman brought one of those rude cases on which catgut was stretched and from which have been developed our modern stringed instruments. He struck a chord, and in an instant silence fell on the assembly. There was something weird in it that no one present had ever heard before. Then he began to sing. Every person within sound of his voice was thrilled with a strange sensation. He began low and soft, as if singing a lullaby to a child, gradually rising till his song had all the wildness of a storm wind passing through the rigging of a ship. Then, after a succession of demoniac notes, his voice fell into a basso profundo, giving an impression that infernal fires were rumbling in the bowels of the earth.

Meanwhile Maria had kept her eyes fixed on him spellbound. Martin, who was watching her, now and again half drew a short dirk he carried in his belt, as if about to plunge it in the stranger's heart. But every time he did so something in the song unnerved him, and he let the knife slide back into its scabbard.

When the song ceased Maria's mother made another attempt to change the conditions. She asked the stranger if he would not play for the company to dance. Immediately he struck a chord that shot a current of exhilaration through every one present. He struck another, and all began to sway. A third drew men and women together in couples. Then began the merriest music that had ever been heard in that quiet village.

First the younger persons present went spinning over the floor, then those who were older, till all were whirling. Children, youths, married persons and white haired old men and women were dancing merrily, while shouts of laughter accompanied the spirited music to which they moved. The longer they danced the wilder grew their antics. Most of them wore wooden shoes, and the clatter was deafening. Now and again when a dancer kicked high his shoe would fly off and go sailing across the room, but no one paid any attention to the missiles, though they were in danger of receiving serious injury.

Persons who had not been invited to the betrothal, hearing the noise, came to the windows and looked in. So catching was the music and the dancing that before long couples were moving on the sidewalk in a wild whirl. As the dance went on these were joined by others till it seemed as if the whole town were bent on beating the pavements with their wooden shoes in crazy capers.

The man who made this mad music, seeing Maria dance past him without a partner, dropped his instrument and put an arm about her, and the two went whirling like the rest. The legend goes that the music went on without the musician, though some versions have it that by this time the people were so crazed that music was not needed to keep them in their mad dance. In vain old Aarhuus and his wife endeavored to call a halt within, and the mayor of the town tried to stop the dancing without. It was all the mayor and old Aarhuus and his wife could do to refrain from dancing themselves.

Finally there was a clap of thunder, and a sudden silence fell on all the village. Persons stood looking at one another, wondering why they had been dancing now that they had no desire to dance. In the house where the betrothal was celebrated all the candles went out. They were at once relighted, and everybody began to look for everybody else. Martin was there, pale and haggard. He had been dancing more wildly than any one else and showed the effect more than others. Then cries arose:

"Where's the stranger who bewitched us?"

"Where's Maria?"

A search revealed neither of them. A girl said when the clap of thunder came she had seen the stranger and Maria whirl up in the air and disappear above the housetops. One gave one story; another gave another. Martin seemed paralyzed. He was thinking what old Stahr had said on one occasion, "Before you shall possess my daughter I will give her to the devil."

For a long while the legend was that Maria was never seen again on earth. Then after men's minds had been broadened it ran that when the clap came the stranger was about to spirit Maria away, but met the village priest, who was coming with a view to quiet the tumult, and the stranger, catching sight of the cross suspended to the father's rosary, slunk away and disappeared. This version adds that Maria was found at her father's house, and the old man, horrified that he had so neatly given his daughter to Satan, relented, gave his consent to the match, and Martin and Maria were married. But when they went to the church for the ceremony Maria carried a cross with her, fearing the devil might be on the watch for her and spirit her away.

SCAN FACES OF DEAD FOR LOVED

Only 209 Bodies Recovered From Steamer Wreck.

PITIFUL SCENES ARE ENACTED

Most of Victims of Empress of Ireland Show Signs of Mutilation—Difficult of Identification—Twenty-five Coffins of Children—Unidentified Are to Be Photographed.

Quebec, June 1.—Stretched in three rows in a low ceiling pier shed were 188 black, brown and white pine coffins containing 188 bodies, less than one-fifth of the victims of the collision between the Empress of Ireland and the Collier Storstad. Twenty-five of those coffins covered with white satin had bodies of babies. All had just arrived from Rimouski.

At the heads of those forty lines of coffins stood lines of men and women, many survivors, looking for relatives and friends. Each coffin lid was lifted by one of the searchers while others crowded close to get a glimpse at the body in the coffin.

Suddenly a woman or a man or the muffled scream of a woman broke the silence: "Oh, Mary," "My husband," or some name of endearment was uttered. A stalwart man bent forward and kissed the gashed forehead of his wife. A woman would fall fainting on the coffin she had just raised. Thus it went on all day long until forty-eight bodies were identified.

By nightfall there were twelve other bodies of partially identified which the relatives were not sure because of their bruised condition.

Nearly All Bear Marks.

Almost every body bore marks of violence. There were bodies of women whose heads were split open or gashed. It is possible that women running from their state rooms in the darkness of the collision ran against stanchions or were hurled against the walls of the sides of the alleys. The wounds also indicated that some of the women had been crushed when the collier buried her steel nose in the side of the Empress.

Officials in Rimouski have said that the bodies of the women showed that several of them had been stabbed. At any rate, it was apparent by a glance at the shrouds that had been placed on the bodies of both men and women that there were other wounds not disclosed on the faces.

209 Bodies Recovered.

In addition to the 188 bodies received here 21 had been identified at Rimouski and shipped to the homes of relatives. That makes 209 bodies recovered out of a total of 1,000 victims. The probability is that the remainder will never be identified, for the current will sweep them out to a watery grave. If the Empress is raised, many other bodies trapped in their staterooms will be recovered, but there is a question as to whether the ship will be raised.

The bodies not identified will be kept for a few days longer. Then they will be photographed by representatives of the Canadian Pacific and buried in graves marked " unknown" by that company. The prospects are that few more will be identified. All the bodies that have been recovered have been shipped from Rimouski.

ASKS HILLQUIT TO GET OUT

William English Walling Wants Him to Quit Socialists.

New York, June 1.—William English Walling, author of "Socialism As It Is," "Progressivism and After" and other Socialist books, in an address in the Berkeley theater, denounced Morris Hillquit, national chairman of the Socialist party before Bouck White's congregation. He called upon Hillquit to get out of the party.

Hillquit has been quoted as saying that such persons as Upton Sinclair and Bouch White ought to be put out o fthe Socialist party as punishment for "Silent Mourning" in front of the Standard Oil offices and the attempt to speak in Calvary Baptist church of which the Rockefellers are members.

Quebec, June 1.—Captain Kendall of the ill-fated Empress of Ireland, went through here on his way to Montreal, where he was received by officials of the Canadian Pacific.

"Was Captain Anderson to blame for the collision?" he was asked as he lay in his berth, his freckled hand running over his eyes.

"I can't answer," he said. "You'll have all that in a few days."

NO CHANCE FOR AQUA PURA

There Will Be No Election at Saginaw In June.

Saginaw, Mich., June 1.—There will not be a second election to vote for a new consolidated water plant in Saginaw this year; at least not if the commission council continues the stand it has taken on the resolution of the board of trade.

The commercial organization asked that the bond issue defeated in April be referred to the voters again in June. The council refused, first because there would not be time enough to conform to the legal preliminaries in holding an election of this kind and, second, because the council does not favor a resubmission.

EMPRESS OF IRELAND

Vessel That Went Down Noted for Her Speed.

COLLIER IS BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF 964

Captain Kendall, of Ill-Fated Ship, Tells of Orders.

Rimouski, Que., June 1.—While final tabulations of the casualties in the sinking of the ill-fated steamer Empress of Ireland were being made, showing that 403 of its passengers and crew had been rescued and 964 had perished, Captain Henry George Kendall of the liner was telling his story of the disaster at an inquiry conducted by Coroner Pinaud here.

Captain Kendall, in substance, declared that he had taken all possible precautions against a collision. His ship had been stopped, he gave the requisite signals when the Danish collier Storstad, which dealt the blow which sent the Empress to the bottom, was still two miles away, but the collier had kept on through the fog which settled down soon after the two vessels sighted each other and had rammed the Empress of Ireland while the lattter was virtually motionless.

Then, despite his plea to the master of the collier that he run his engines full speed ahead to keep the hole in the liner's side plugged with the Storstad's bow, said Captain Kendall, the Danish vessel backed away, the water rushed in and the Empress sank.

NO BONDS ACCEPTED SUNDAY

German Steamer Fails to Get Away from Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz, June 1.—The Hamburg-American line steamers Ypiranga and Bavaria did not sail Sunday as expected owing to the refusal of the American port authorities to accept a bond which would cover the fines imposed on the two vessels for landing arms at Puerto Mexico for the Huerta administration. The fines amount to over a million pesos. The amount assessed against the Ypiranga is 894,625 pesos.

The authorities declared that the acceptance of the bonds could not be done on Sunday.

REBEL SHOOTS UP PLACE

Rebel Leader Didn't Like Food Given Him by American Negro.

Torreon, Mexico, June 1.—When the food did not suit him, General Martin Severein, chief of the rebel artillery in Villa's army, shot up a restaurant here conducted by an American negro named Lewis. He wanted to shoot Lewis, but the negro fled. The incident occurred early in the morning and caused a riot which required the presence of a special detail of troops to put it down.

General Severein, it is claimed, had been drinking heavily at the restaurant.

TWO PRESIDENTS RULE IN MEXICO

Carranza Assumes Position of Provisional Executive.

BEGINS SELECTING CABINET

Movement Believed to Have Been Made to Forestall Action by Mediators—Provisional Government Is Temporarily Established at Saltillo, Pasqueria Mexico City Governor.

Torreon, Mexico, June 1.—To forestall action by the peace mediators at Niagara Falls in selecting a provisional government for Mexico, General Carranza virtually assumed the position of provisional president and began the work of selecting his cabinet. Advices to this effect were received here from Durango and also that Carranza had left Durango for Saltillo to formally establish a provisional government. The new capital will have the protection of nearly 5,000 troops of the army of General Pablo Gonzales, who has transferred his army from Monterey to Saltillo. He will protect Saltillo, while it remains the provisional capital, and will send detachments of troops to garrison the smaller towns in that vicinity, while Villa's main army is conducting the campaign against Zacatecas and San Luis Potosi. When the rebel army moves upon Mexico City, General Gonzales and his army will escort the provisional president and his cabinet to the permanent capital.

This action by the rebels, it is claimed, puts them in line to be entrusted by the mediators with the task of governing Mexico after the Huerta government has been removed and until a new government can be chosen by elective method.

Pasqueria Is Named.

Carranza already has selected a portion of his cabinet and has decided upon Roberto V. Pesqueria, formerly rebel diplomatic agent at Washington, to be governor of the federal district, in which is Mexico City. Rafael Zuburan, who now is representing Carranza in Washington, is to be one of the cabinet and later will be named as ambassador to the United States.

Upon his arrival in Saltillo, General Carranza, it is announced, will perfect his plans for establishing a provisional government.

Federals Leave Panucho.

Vera Cruz, June 1.—The last of the Federals moved out of Panucho, the main army under Generals Zaragoa and Aguilar having evacuated the town the day before although they were strongly entrenched. They left behind about 150 federal soldiers disguised as laborers, but the latter fled at the approach of 500 rebels.

WINTERS AND WIFE PUT UNDER ARREST

Charged With Conspiracy to Kill Daughter Catherine.

Newcastle, Ind., June 1.—After having been held for more than six hours in the police station, Dr. W. A. Winters and his wife, Byrd Winters, were released when they furnished bond in the sum of $5,000 each. W. H. Cooper, a telegraph operator and boarder in the Winters home when nine-year-old Catherine Winters disappeared March 20, 1913, is still in jail. He also is charged with conspiracy to commit a felony.

The charges against Dr. Winters and his wife are made by Robert H. Abel, a private detective who has been working on the case.

On what evidence Abel has to hold Winters and his wife on such a charge he refuses to say. It is not believed here that the bare evidence discovered in the finding of the red ribbon, sweater and undergarment which were buried in the basement of the Winters home is all that moved Abel to cause the arrests. The police still insist that the torn undershirt bears blood stains.

Dr. Winters asserts that the red sweater found in his home, together with the undershirt and red ribbon, has no significance. He asserts that the sweater coat belongs to a nephew and was thrown away by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ritter, who lives in the home. The hair ribbon, he said, was part of the trimming on a hat and the undershirt was thrown away because it had served its usefulness.

TOOK NO CHACES ON LIVING

Young Man, Determined to Die, Shoots Himself Twice.

Charlotte, Mich., June 1.—Claude Creitz, a Chester township boy, eighteen years old, killed himself. He fired two shots, one at his head and the other over the heart. The first shot was not fatal and the boy fired another.

His parents can give no reason for his act.

Another Pioneer Lumberman Dies.

Saginaw, Mich., June 1.—Saginaw lost another of her pioneer residents of the lumber days in the death of James W. Bearinger, at the age of seventy-four years. Death resulted from paralysis, the fatal stroke being the fifth one he had suffered.

Killed by Falling Crane.

Sault Ste aMrie, Mich., June 1.—Martin P. Dube, fifty years old, was killed at the plant of the Lake Superior company in the Canadian Soo when a traveling crane toppled over. Besides the widow eight children survive.

Veteran Dies in Line.

Charlotte, Mich., June 1.—Carrying a small American flag and waiting the order to march, Comrade G. S. Beardsley of A. S. Williams Post, G. A. R., dropped dead in line.

DELMORE'S BUBBLE

"All's Well That Ends Well"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I don't believe in bubbles!" cried Pauline Fane pettishly.

"You would believe in this one if you had heard Jim Hard tell the story," protested Delmore earnestly. "Of course I don't want to undertake such an expedition without your approval, but, dear, it would make our future very happy and care free if I could discover that great diamond called 'the Bubble.'"

Pauline laughed at her lover's earnestness.

"Nonsense, Dick," she replied scornfully. "If you must go, you must. But you will take with you my utter disbelief in the project and my disapproval of your risking what little money you have in such a hazardous undertaking. So there!"

Dick flushed painfully. He was looking thin and careworn as the result of a long illness, from which he had recovered to find that he had lost his position as sales manager for a man with some influence and considerable money with which to invest in the company's stock.

"The voyage down there will brace me up again," argued Dick for the twentieth time.

"Oh, you can take the voyage just the same, only don't risk your money on that insane venture," said Pauline.

"And if I decide to do that?" asked Dick quietly.

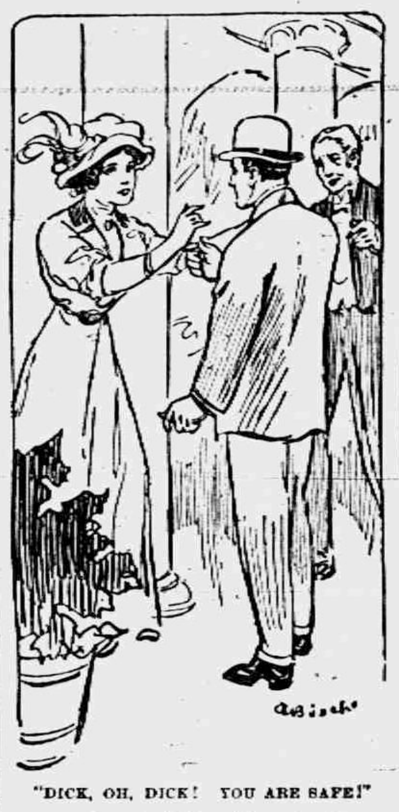
Pauline slowly drew Dick's ring from her finger.

"You will have this for a reminder of me," she said cruelly.

Dick slipped the ring into his pocket and turned away.

"And if I really discover the Bubble?" he asked dryly.

"Then I'll believe your story," smiled Pauline, rather uneasily. "If you bring the Bubble—and I really believe the story to be a bubble of imagination on the part of a dying sailor—then you can replace the ring on my finger."



"DICK, OH, DICK! YOU ARE SAFE!"

"In the meantime our engagement is broken because you do not approve of my going?" asked Dick wonderingly.

"Yes," she replied in a bored manner.

Dick bade her a very formal farewell and went away. He did not offer to replace the ring on her finger, and after he had departed Pauline cried a little in her lace handkerchief, and then, because she was rather a spoiled child, she decided to forget about Dick.

Dick felt a strange sense of freedom as he sailed toward the southland where Jim Hard had told him the diamond was buried.

"You go to Porto Rico, sir," the man had whispered feebly. "In the city of San Juan you will hunt up a black named Maturin. Give him this bit of paper and he will take you in his boat to one of the outlying islands of the Virgin group. There you will land in a tiny cove. The island is only a few hundred feet in extent and is almost entirely covered at high tide, when nothing save a group of cocoanut palms is visible. You must land at high tide. Wait among the trees until the tide falls and the cove is only a bed of mud.

"Then you will follow directions on this little chart. A hundred and fifty feet due south from the big palm tree will take you to the middle of the cove. Dig there until you uncover a bit of rusty chain. Attached to the chain is a small iron box. If you can get it up you will find inside of it the diamond. It is yours. I hoped to get it, but I couldn't make out. If you find it send something to my old mother in Kansas. Thank you, sir. There is nothing else."

So Jim Hard passed away with his horny hand in Dick's, and it was characteristic of Dick Delmore that he wrote a sympathetic letter to Hard's mother and shipped the body to his western home and sent money to give the man decent burial and leave a sum over for the lonely old woman. Of course this dipped into his meager savings, but Pauline never knew of that.

One May morning Dick found himself in San Juan, Porto Rico, conferring with the black man named Maturin. He did not tell Maturin about the diamond. He merely told him that he was going to the cocoanut island to search for "hidden treasure" and Maturin had laughed good naturedly and told him that "plenty white mans like fun that a-way, suh!"

But Maturin was ready to set out in his sturdy little boat, and, with a plentiful supply of provisions and water, they sailed among the green islands, set like jewels in the deep blue waters, until on the second morning after their departure they came upon the group of cocoanut palms, apparently rising out of the sea.

There was no other island in sight. On every side stretched the limitless ocean.

"This must be the island, boss," said Maturin as he beached the boat upon the scrap of sand under the trees of the island.

"We can soon find out, Maturin," said Dick as he threw himself down under the shade of the palms and waited while the man prepared an appetizing meal.

By the time they had concluded their dinner the tide had begun to fall. Little by little a shelving, pebbly beach was uncovered until at last the receding waters bared the sandy bottom of the cove. Finally the tide went out beyond the entrance and at ebb lapped the teeth of the coral reef.

"Now!" exclaimed Dick, who had been impatiently waiting for this moment to arrive.

He drew on a pair of hip boots of rubber, provided himself with pick and shovel, and, under the wondering, half amused gaze of the black, Dick Delmore went to seek the Bubble of which he had come in search.

He carefully made the required measurements, and when he believed he had located the exact spot indicated on the little map which Jim Hard had placed in his hand at the last moment Dick thrust his shovel in the wet sand and worked steadily.

Suddenly the blade of the shovel clinked against metal.

In a few seconds he had uncovered the rusty link of a ship's anchor chain. It gave him a clew, and he changed the direction of his delving. In half an hour he had exposed three feet of chain, the shank and one fluke of a small anchor. In the mass of links where the chain caught the shank was embedded a large quantity of shellfish—that was all.

Or was it all?

Dick tore at the incrusted mass and finally dislodged a small iron box, which he promptly dropped into his pocket. Then he flung aside the chain and anchor, picked up his pick and shovel and left the cove.

Maturin was nodding drowsily, and he smiled commiseratingly upon his employer as he threw himself down on the island to rest.

"Massa Boss no find treasure?" he asked pityingly.

"Go and see!" replied Dick tersely, for he wanted a moment alone with the iron box.

Dick Delmore returned to the shade of the palms, pulled the iron box from his pocket, broke its rusty lock with a blow from his shovel and found within it a smaller box of coral. This coral box when opened disclosed something hard and round wrapped in oiled silk.

For a long time Dick sat there gazing at the treasure which lay in his palm.

The Bubble was indeed a fact. It was his! Jim Hard had spoken truly—and Jim's mother would live in luxury the rest of her days. Dick bid the great round diamond, which gave back a myriad colored lights, and fell to thinking of Pauline. When she had so distrusted him how could he go back and offer her his riches? If she had only proved herself to be the pure gold he had believed her to be, for he still loved her!

So Dick Delmore was not entirely happy as Maturin sailed him back to Porto Rico and the city of San Juan. When they reached the city he dismissed Maturin with a substantial sum of money and went to the best hotel.

He was passing through the lobby, which was quite deserted at this hour of the day, when he heard a sudden rush of light feet and the sound of a sweet voice calling his name.

"Dick, oh, Dick! You are safe!"

It was Pauline, and behind came her father, looking anxious and then relieved as he caught Dick's hand in his own and wrung it.

"My dear boy," said Mr. Fane hastily, "this girl fell to worrying about you and your harebrained expedition, and she gave me no peace until I brought her down here to try to dissuade you from carrying it out. I—I believe she has something to say to you. I'll wait outside here for you!" So he pushed them into a deserted little parlor.

Inside the room Dick faced his sweetheart. Tears were in Pauline's lovely eyes.

"Oh, Dick, can you forgive me?" she whispered. "I don't care how poor you are so long as you are safe. And I want my ring back!"

Dick smiled happily and took her into his arms. When the ring was on her finger once more he asked her amusedly:

"You haven't inquired concerning the success of my expedition, sweetheart."

"But you haven't been!" she cried in amazement.

For answer he brought out the Bubble and put it in her pink palm.

But Dick was happier in the knowledge that his love was true, after all, than he possibly could have been merely as the owner of the great Bubble diamond.

SENATOR CUMMINS

He Has Plan to Compromise the Panama Canal Toll Bill.

Washington, June 1.—In the effort to tempt the friends of repeal of the canal tolls subsidy Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa offered an amendment that would cause the people of United States to bear only one-half the expense of passing ships owned by American citizens through the canal. The amendment proposes to tax foreign owned ships an amount based on their proportionate cost of the expense of operating the canal, including 2 per cent on the investment.

Aguilar Governor of Tuxpan.

Juarez, Mexico, June 1.—Advices from Durango state that General Candido Aguilar, who recently captured the port of Tuxpan, in the state of Vera Cruz, has been appointed by General Carranza as governor of the state of Vera Cruz. He will establish his capital temporarily at Tuxpan.

Woman's World

Miss Mabel Boardman and the Red Cross Work.

MISS MABEL BOARDMAN.

One of the most interesting women in the United States at this time is Miss Mabel Boardman of Washington, society woman and philanthropist, whose position as chairman of the executive committee of the Red Cross society makes her practically head of that organization.

No sooner did the trouble with Mexico assume alarming proportions than Miss Boardman called a meeting in Washington, which was attended by representatives of the Red Cross society, various patriotic organizations and women's clubs, all anxious to co-operate in the work.

Miss Boardman and her associates told what the society was prepared to do in case of war.

For volunteer nurses there was no need, since Miss Jane Delano, head of the American Society of Red Cross Nurses, had ready for active service 5,000 experienced trained nurses. In fact, all that was needed was funds and supplies to carry on the work should there be need of them. An emergency committee with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president, as honorary chairman was appointed.

BAKING DISHES.

They May Be Adorned With Handsome Hand Embroidered Bands.

Baking dish bands offer opportunities for the needlewoman to make a gift that would certainly be acceptable to the busy housewife who loves dainty table accessories.

These bands are made to fit around the baking dishes and are fastened with linen or crocheted buttons and loops. They are perfectly straight and either scalloped or hemstitched along the edges.

The hemstitched ones are usually made of homespun linen decorated with cross stitch in some quaint design with colors which harmonize with the dishes. A little pine tree pattern, seen the other day on one of these bands, was done in two shades of green and was very effective.

The scalloped bands may have as the only decoration a monogram of three letters. The scallops and monograms could be embroidered in colors or all white, whichever was preferred.

These embroidered bands present a more elegant appearance than if a folded napkin were wrapped around the dish.

SUMMER BLOUSES.

Dressy Models Carried Out In Transparent Materials.

Fashion has never been more seductive in the matter of blouses. In the homes, at luncheons, at tea, at bridge, the modern blouse plays a great part. It is transparent. Made in lace, in tulle, in a thin crepe de chine, the charm of the blouse consists in its being void of lining.

Not only is the neck exposed, but even the shoulders and arms are seen dimly through the thin silks, laces or nets. The blouse then comes directly upon the neck and arms without an intervening fabric of batiste or cambric or the band of ribbon, once so fashionable.

A woman well gowned recently observed at a smart afternoon bridge wore a pale yellow blouse in a kind of spongy crepe de chine, semi-transparent, opening low at the neck, clinging to the firm white shoulders and loose about the body.

Renovating Overshoes.

A particular woman dislikes rubbers that look dull and shabby, and there is no reason why they should look so if she does not mind a little work.

Give the rubber shoes a coat of shoe polish, preferably the paste kind, and then brush them as you would calfskin shoes. After each treatment mud spots may be rubbed off easily with a dry cloth and the overshoes will have as good an appearance as ever.

Sewing Thin Fabrics.

Great annoyance is often caused when sewing silk ninon or any other flimsy material on the machine by the material puckering up. If a piece of paper is stitched at the back of the material the machine will work quite smoothly over the thinnest of goods, and the paper can be torn away quite easily afterward.

Allah and the Cotton Worm.

This glimpse of oriental character is from John A. Todd's "The Banks of the Nile:

"Well, how is the cotton worm now?" said an English cotton worm inspector to an old Egyptian sheik. "Finished. There is none. How can there be cotton worms now? It is more than our life is worth. If we do not pick the cotton worms you fine us, you send us to prison, you take us as prisoners to another man's fields and make us pick his cotton worm. What can we do? And so there is no cotton worm." "And hasn't it saved your cotton this year?" "Assuredly, the praise to Allah." "Then won't you do all this picking next year without us coming to make you do it?" "No." "Why?" "Because that is the way Allah made us!"

Involved.

Binks—I notice that you have a thread tied round your finger. I suppose that is to remind you of something? Jinks—Not exactly. It is to remind my wife to ask me if I forgot something she told me to remember.—Exchange.

SILVER SHOWER

Honoring Miss Phoebe Knight and Floyd Bryan who are to be married June 20th, the B. Y. P. U. met in the parlors of the church on Friday evening. A large company assembled for the occasion and a merry time was enjoyed by all.

During the evening Rev. W. B. Hartzg, in behalf of the B. Y. P. U., in a few very appropriate remarks, presented the bride-to-be with a silver offering consisting of knives, forks, a gravy ladle and a berry spoon. A dainty book with the B. Y. P. U. names accompanied the gift. Miss Phoebe responded in a very pleasing manner thanking the Union for their kindness to her during the many years she has been associated with them.

Light refreshments were served later and the crowd dispersed with many kind wishes for the future of Floyd and Phoebe.

BASE BALL

Tecumseh Independents vs Clinton.

The Tecumseh Independents crossed bats with the Clinton Crack Team at Clinton Saturday afternoon. The final score was 11 to 5 in favor of Tecumseh. Battery for Tecumseh—Lenardson, pitcher; Harris and Exelby, catchers. For Clinton—Campbell and Marble, pitchers; Mattison, catcher.

Lenardson pitched a fine game for Tecumseh, holding his opponents to one hit until the ninth inning. The features of the game were the fine hitting of Exelby and Hanna.

LECTURE

Tecumseh will have the opportunity of hearing Professor W. W. Florer of the University of Michigan Thursday evening at 8.30 at the M. E. church. He will deliver a travel talk on Germany. The slides used in this lecture, both colored and plain, are especially beautiful and are arranged to tell a complete story. The story could be well understood even without the explanation. The idea of illustrated talks is carried out in these entertainments in that the slides illustrate the talk, rather than the talk the slides. The slides have been selected which show the home towns of the thousands of citizens of German descent who have helped to make Michigan a most progressive state. The illustrated lectures of Dr. Florer have aroused a new interest in German culture throughout the state. The young people are always interested in these travel talks.

Dr. Florer is not a stranger to many people of Tecumseh. He is in charge of the educational policies of the German American Alliance in Michigan and this lecture is given under the auspices of this society which has 2,500,000 members in the United States.

The announcement that Dr. W. W. Florer will lecture in Tecumseh has aroused considerable interest among all lovers of the German language. These lectures have been received with unusual enthusiasm in all parts of the state. Last fall Dr. Florer lectured in the same hall in Lansing three times within two months. The last time many were turned away. The lecture is different from most of the travel talks in that the pictures illustrate the lecture, rather than that the lecturer describes the pictures. The Germans recognize their home towns and their children can see where the parents have come from. In preparing these lectures Dr. Florer first studied the German settlements in Michigan. Then he built up the slides around the old Heimat. This is the reason why the slides are so effective.

The Britton orchestra furnished music also a piano selection by Mrs. Wm. H. Curry and a violin solo Miss Lillian Gorham.

ALUMNI RECEPTION.

On Friday evening was given the annual alumni reception of the Britton high school in Lenardson's hall. The hall was prettily decorated with the senior colors, maize and blue, large boquets and pennants.

After all had assembled various games and contests caused much amusement. Following this a dainty luncheon was served with hand painted place cards and smilax as favors.

Loree Nivison acted as toastmaster and toasts were given by Misses Mildred Linton, Lillian Gorham and Jennie Gregg. Several others were called upon who responded very willingly, making it a very interesting time. A business meeting was then conducted and the following officers elected:

President—Chas. F. Brown.
Vice president—Millard Cheever.
Secretary—Miss Ida Gibson.

Thus ended for another year an event in which so many pleasant school days are brought to memory and which is treasured by all.

Chemist's Cocktail.

Modern organic chemistry has a language of its own. The following is an example from a recent article: "The dianhydride of 1.8.4.5-napthalenetetracarboxylic acid was heated for three hours at 170 degrees C with four times its weight of the diethyl-ester of malonic acid, together with twice its weight of zinc chloride, whereby 5.10-diketo-3.8-dihydroxypyrene was formed which on distillation with zinc dust gave pyrene, recognised by its characteristic picrate, m. pt. 223 degrees C."

MEMORIAL DAY

Sunday dawned bright and beautiful with a gentle breeze that wafted the Stars and Stripes to and fro catching the gleam of the morning sun thus giving an added glory to the red, white and blue. From early morning the people were going to the cemetery with their wealth of flowers in loving tribute to the friends who had passed over to the other side, and whose graves were made beautiful on this day set apart for Memorial Day, not only for our soldier dead, but for all our loved ones.

At two o'clock the services at the opera house were held with a large concourse of people gathered to honor "the boys in blue" who had answered the last bugle call, and also those who were still living, after serving, their country long and well and now are enjoying the peace and plenty, the glorious liberty that their valor had made possible.

The program was opened by a selection by the band followed by the invocation by Rev. G. H. Whitney.

Miss Edna Taylor read the governor's Memorial Day Proclamation.

A band of school children, under the guidance of Miss Caldwell, rendered "Michigan, my Michigan" in a most delightful manner and received a round of applause.

Dr. North read the famous speech of Lincoln at Gettysburg.

Mrs. Kenrick and Mrs. R. S. Moore each sang solos that were patriotic and much enjoyed by all.

Postmaster Bidwell introduced Rev. Bussing of Adrian who took as his theme "The Higher Patriotism." He paid glowing tribute to the Grand Army of the Republic for their wonderful achievement in bringing our country out of the turmoil of war and dissention to peace and prosperity with "No North, no South, but one grand United States of America." He brought out the fact that no other nation honors its people as do we Others honor their great generals and men in office and so do we, but we also honor the most humble man who wore the blue and died for his country.

His speech abounded in many fine quotations from the poets and in closing he paid a grand tribute in verse to the glorious flag of our nation, the red, white and blue, emblem of a free and happy country.

The procession formed for the cemetery many automobiles being provided for conveying the old soldiers, the T. B. A., the speakers and clergy. The beautiful weather brought out a crowd of people and the procession was a long one, with the Sons of Veterans and the band leading.

The services at the cemetery were brief. The soldiers bearing flowers decorated the graves of their dead comrades while the band played dirge-like music. Then with the peace of the twilight, the evening songs of the birds the silent City of the Dead was at rest. And as the people wended their way homeward, they felt that this had been a good day for all and that it was good to set aside one day of the year to honor the fathers, sons, brothers and lovers who gave up their lives that our nation might be free.

MEMORIAL DAY
IN OUR SCHOOLS.

Friday afternoon Memorial exercises were held in most of the schools in town. At the high School, J. D. Shull and H C. Daniels made some vero patriotic speeches. At the close of the programs of the two divisions These programs were of a patriotic nature with readings and singing. At the East branch, J. W. Wightman made a telling speech that seemed to impress his young hearers as they gave close attention and showed by their earnest faces that they understood what he was saying The afternoon was a very pleasant and profitable one to all concerned and the lesson in true patriotism and loyalty to the flag was one long to be remembered.

AN APPRECIATION

Stomach Trouble; Wholly Restored!

Mrs. Wilson Robison

Mrs. Wilson Robison, 744 Nessle St., Toledo, Ohio, writes:

"I feel like a new person. I have no more heavy feelings, no more pain, don't belch up gas, can eat most anything without it hurting me. I want to be working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds.

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

No argument is needed for Peruna. Just get a bottle and try it. If you have catarrh of the stomach you have a serious trouble. If you want to find a remedy it would be very easy to make the experiment. Before you have taken Peruna a week you will likely find yourself better, then you will need no testimonials on the part of other people, or arguments to convince you. Until you try Peruna, however, all the testimonials in the world and arguments, however logical, will not move you. Just one trial of Peruna will convince you.

Persons who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 6 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

She Made Her Point.

"Dearie," said the young married man, "I have to go to New York on business. It will only take a day or so, and I hope you won't miss me too much while I'm gone, but"—

"I won't," answered his young wife positively, "because I'm going with you."

"I wish you could, dear, but it won't be convenient this time. What would you want to go for anyhow? I'm going to be too busy to be with you, and"—

"I have to go. I need clothes."

"But, darling, you can get all the clothes you want right here on Euclid avenue."

"Thank you. That's all I wanted."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Logic Below Stairs.

A country gentleman recently had his house fitted with electric bells, and, giving instructions to his servant, he said, "Now, I want you to understand me clearly, Joseph, that when I ring once I want you, and when I ring twice I want Maggie, the housemaid." The bell rang. Joseph never moved. Presently it rang again, and Maggie hurried to her master, who was very angry. "Why didn't that rascal Joseph come when I rang for him?" demanded the gentleman. "Why, sir," answered Maggie, "Joseph was busy reading the paper when he heard the first ring, and he said to me, 'Now, Maggie, wait until master rings again, and then it will be you he wants.'"—Pall Mall Gazette.

Anecdote With a Moral.

"I used to know twin brothers. They looked exactly alike in their youth, but one of them got rich, while the other remained poor. One developed a discontented expression; the other always looked happy."

"Well, you can't blame the poor brother for looking discontented."

"You have it twisted. It's the rich brother who looks discontented."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

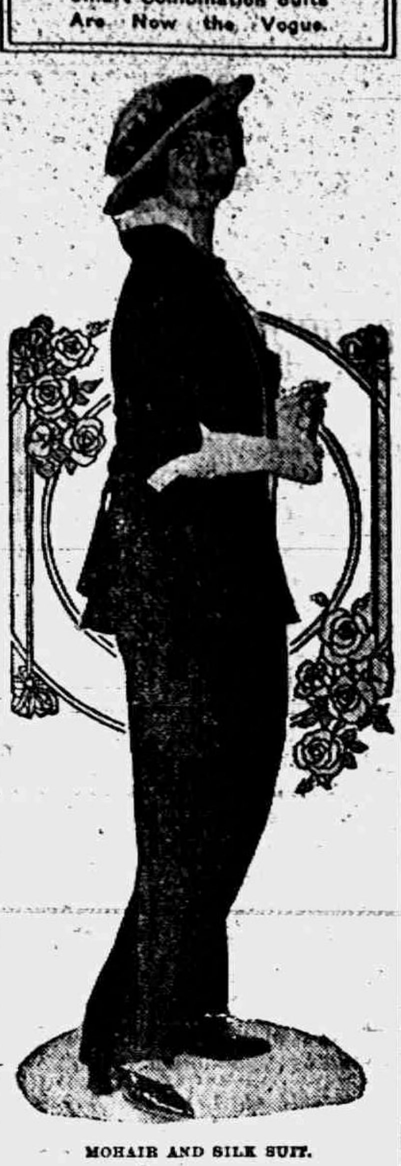
Marriage of Saginaw Girl Recalls Sensation Short Time Ago.

Saginaw, Mich., June 1.—Announcement is made of the marriage on May 9 of Miss Lilian F. Boynton of this city, and Eugene Smith, of Philadelphia. Some time ago quite a sensation was created here when a young man named Reynolds took out a marriage license to wed Miss Boynton. He afterwards admitted he didn't marry the young lady, who comes from one of the oldest and best families.

The license appeared in the papers and he was the object of considerable good-natured "joshing."

MOHAIR STREET DRESS.

Smart Combination Suits Are Now the Vogue.



MOHAIR AND SILK SUIT.

The vogue for combinations of materials has taken the world of fashion by storm and shows itself in almost every outer garment, whether it be of silk or of cotton or of wool. In this suit blue mohair and plain silk are combined to make a most striking effect in the modish short jacket and the box plaited peplum. Since collars are the features of all smart garments here we have the regulation effect with a softening of lace. The right finishing touches are found in the wreath trimmed hat and the gray topped button boots.

WHITE GLOVES.

Keeping Them Clean When on the Way to Evening Affairs.

To appear in town, either in the evening or for daylight affairs, with spotless white gloves has always been one of the troubles of the suburban woman. Of course you may say she need not put on her white gloves till she arrives at the place for which she is bound, but it is not always practical to do this.

One woman has found a way—there always is a way out of every predicament—and she has kindly passed the idea on for the benefit of others. In the fall she purchases, usually at bargain sales, one or two pairs of white silk gloves, one-quarter size larger than the size of gloves she wears; these she draws over her white kid gloves and does not remove them until she reaches her destination. Silk gloves fit snugly over the kid ones and do not look so bulky as cotton ones would. They are easily stored away in her coat pocket until needed again.

A WORN QUILT.

May Be Attractively Repaired With Pieces From the Scrap Bag.

An old quilt with worn covering may be repaired and give much service. Use pieces from your scrap bag about as they come, leave them large as possible and do not be afraid of irregular shapes. Sew them right down to the surface of the quilt, sewing the edge of one patch right over the raw edge of another in a seam, then turn the last patch over right, leaving a finished edge where just sewed; where this cannot be done turn in the edge of patch and finish it that way.

Thus you are making a crazy quilt of big patches and finishing the edges of them instead of adding fancy stitches to hide the seams. You are sewing on your cover and quilting it at the same time. Besides, you are able to use all sorts of patches, and, if large, there is much less sewing to be done. Flannelette and outing flannel make soft and serviceable covers.

VICTORIAN SCARFS.

They Have Been Successfully Revived For Evening Wear.

Net scarfs are embroidered in gold, silver or colored beads in all kinds of fanciful designs. Quite new are the little tiny lappet scarfs in a mosaic of iridescent beads, worn at the throat to fill in the interstices of the evening cloaks.

The patterns on these are worked in colored flowers and even "landscape scenes," such as decorate those quaint bead bags—a revival of old Victorian days. Tiny as these scarfs are, the work must sorely tax both the patience and the eyesight of the embroideress.

Their groundwork is a compact mass of gold, silver or milk white beads, the whole of this miniature wrap combining no inconsiderable amount of warmth and weight with its undoubted picturesqueness.

A Change Of Program

A Story For Memorial Day

By CAPTAIN F. A. MITCHEL

General Hassett, commanding the —th division of the —th corps of the Army of the Cumberland, was a military man from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot. He was a colonel in the regular service.

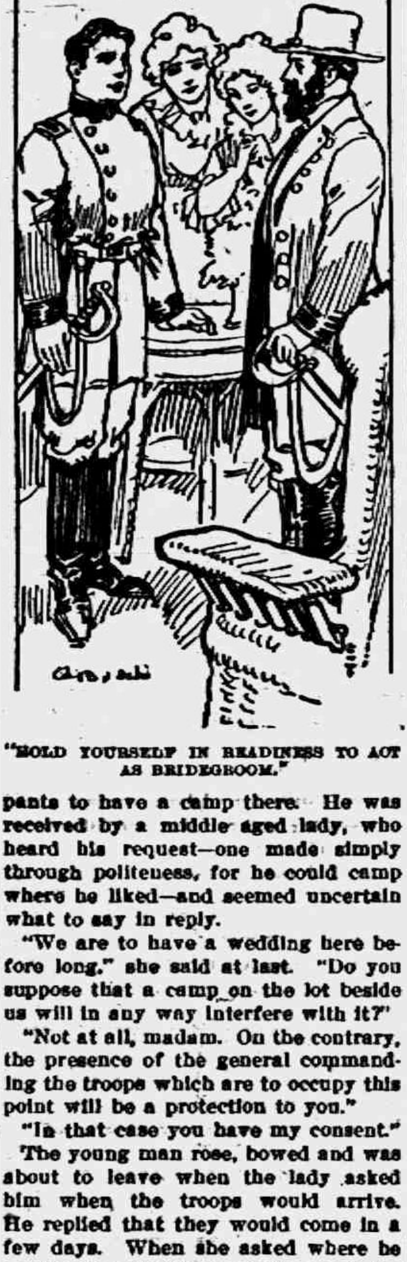
It was the general's personality that insured obedience to his orders. He was born to command. He was nearly twice the age of those to whom he gave orders, and this, with the double star on his shoulder strap, insured him great respect from them. If he had ordered a soldier to commit harakiri the man would not have consulted the army regulations to learn if the order was legitimate. But the strongest hold that the general had on his troops was a real kindness of heart that underlay his external sternness.

Captain Garland of General Hassett's staff was twenty-two years old and handsome as a picture. Moreover, he was a favorite with all who knew him. The country girls along the line over which he passed, who had never seen anything above those indigenous to the soil on which they lived, wilted before him like flowers under a hot sun. The captain had nothing to do with this except to smile, and he smiled on them all alike. Indeed, he was unconscious of the blights he was leaving behind him. One day the general said to him:

"Captain, we will march from here soon and proceed to M., thirty miles south. I desire that you proceed in advance and find a site for our headquarters camp. Take a couple of orderlies with you and set out at once."

Within half an hour the captain was riding along the turnpike headed southward, the two orderlies riding at the regulation forty paces to the rear.

Garland selected for his general's headquarters a vacant lot on the southern extremity of the town next to a residence. But before appropriating it he dismounted before the house to ask if it would be agreeable to the occupants to have a camp there. He was received by a middle aged lady, who heard his request—one made simply through politeness, for he could camp where he liked—and seemed uncertain what to say in reply.



"HOLD YOURSELF IN READINESS TO ACT AS BRIDEGROOM."

"We are to have a wedding here before long," she said at last. "Do you suppose that a camp on the lot beside us will in any way interfere with it?"

"Not at all, madam. On the contrary, the presence of the general commanding the troops which are to occupy this point will be a protection to you."

"In that case you have my consent."

The young man rose, bowed and was about to leave when the lady asked him when the troops would arrive. He replied that they would come in a few days. When she asked where he would stay in the meantime and he replied that he would bivouac on the lot he had chosen she was moved with compassion and invited him and his men to stop at her house. Garland accepted the invitation, but his men preferred the lot. They had their rations in their haversacks and were soon engaged over a fire, while the captain supped in the house.

It was at supper that Garland met Miss Lucile Rutlidge, the bride expectant. She was one of those willowy southern girls with peach complexions to be found only in the southern states. Southern ladies during the war whenever they would come in contact with their enemies almost invariably treated them with politeness, often with consideration. Miss Rutlidge made a slight inclination to Garland, though it was her mother who caused him to feel at ease by conversation.

During the chat Garland asked if music had been provided for the wedding, whereupon Mrs. Rutlidge informed him that no music was to be obtained. There had been an amateur orchestra in the town before the opening of the war, but the players were now all in the Confederate armies.

"In that case," said Garland, "our general will, I have no doubt, be pleased to direct the band of one of his regiments to furnish music for the occasion. One of our bands, that of the —th regulars, is the best in the service, and if you prefer an orchestra one composed of the players can easily be made up by the bandmaster."

At this Miss Rutlidge looked at Garland to express her appreciation of the offer, and for the first time their eyes met. Whatever of antagonism for a Federal officer had been with the young lady went out like a candle and was replaced by something very different. It was impossible for antagonism to exist under the gaze of the captain's eyes, which expressed only kindliness and admiration.

Garland took his meals and slept in the house, waiting for the arrival of the command. Having nothing to do, he sat during the day on the veranda, entertained either by Mrs. Rutlidge or her daughter, usually by the daughter, for the mother took upon herself the preparations for the approaching wedding.

One day while Garland and Miss Rutlidge sat on the veranda a man rode up on horseback and handed the latter a letter. She tore it open and read it hastily. Then she arose and went into the house. Garland could hear her talking with her mother, but not what was said. Mrs. Rutlidge was evidently much excited, not to say angry. The young lady did not appear again on the veranda, but sent a note by a negro to the messenger who was waiting without.

Garland did not see either of the ladies again till supper time, and then only the mother. She sat with a stormy brow till the meal was ended, not speaking a word, then revealed the cause of her irritation. The wedding for which she had been waiting for weeks, months even in some respects, was indefinitely postponed. The bridegroom wrote that owing to the approach of the Federal army his affairs were in a deplorable condition and he must remain on his plantation to take care of them. "But this is not the real reason," added the lady—"at any rate, not the only one. We have heard recently that a widow has been setting her cap for my daughter's fiancé, and we suspect that she has captured him."

Communications had been kept up between Captain Garland and the army to which he belonged. He had written a brother aid-de-camp of the approaching wedding, that he had offered music for the occasion and that he hoped the command would reach M. in ample time for him to redeem his promise. The matter had been talked over at the mess table in presence of the general, who evinced an interest in it, saying that Garland's offer must be made good and if the command did not march in time for the wedding half a dozen musicians should go anyway.

But one night an order came from the department commander to move the next morning at daylight. When the sun rose every regiment and battery was in the road ready to move, and the order "Forward!" was given.

It so happened that General Hassett reached M. on the day before the wedding was to have taken place. Garland was sitting on the veranda with Mrs. and Miss Rutlidge when he heard a clattering of horses' hoofs and the general with staff and escort came down before the captain could vacate. Seeing his aid, the general rode up to the house, dismounted and tramped to the jingling of spurs and rattling of side arms to where the three sat.

"Happy to meet you, ladies," he said, removing his forage cap and bowing low. "I presume this young lady is the bride to be. Captain, I was about to send the music when the order came to move."

All this, of course, was very embarrassing. Mrs. Rutlidge, thinking it better to have the changed conditions known and over with, spoke up:

"General, there is to be no wedding."

"No wedding. Why not?"

"There is no bridegroom."

"But there is a bride."

"Yes; there is a bride, but her fiance has deserted her for another."

The general looked sympathetically at Miss Rutlidge.

"There shall be a wedding," said the general decidedly. "I command here, and since the preparations are made and the music provided the wedding shall take place."

All looked astounded at this, and the general proceeded:

"Captain Garland, hold yourself in readiness to act as bridegroom on this occasion. When was the marriage to have taken place?"

"Tomorrow at noon," replied the captain, a smile breaking over his face.

"Very well. You will report here in person tomorrow at 12 o'clock for duty —I mean"—

"You're not going to force me on the bride, are you, general?" asked Garland.

"The bride! Oh, I forgot that. Of course not. All is subject to the will of the bride."

Now, if there were not cases in which love acts like lightning this story would have a very abrupt and unnatural ending. The little god had begun his work at the first meeting of Captain Garland and Miss Rutlidge and had been galloping on ever since. Garland looked at the young lady, and the young lady looked at Garland. And these looks were a mute proposal and acceptance.

The next day the wedding took place, the band playing both the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie." And this is how one southern girl was brought north as a wife by a Federal army.

BOY WHO DISOBEYS MOTHER IS DROWNED

Philadelphia Lad, Unable to Swim, Dies in River.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., June 1.—Adolph Plongren, nine years old, disobeyed his mother and went swimming. Less than an hour later a messenger told her that Adolph had been drowned.

Mrs. Plongren, with her daughter and son, came from Philadelphia to visit her mother, Mrs. John Paterson. When Adolph asked his mother if he could go swimming she told him no, fearing because of his inability to swim.

Elmer Lang and Oscar Blaisdell, each thirteen years old, accompanied Adolph to the river, and when they saw him struggling in the water tried to save him. They also were nearly drowned. Adolph drowned in about four feet of water. The bottom of the river at this point is muddy, and he probably slipped and fell. His lungs filled with water, and he was unable to extricate himself.

When told of the death, Mrs. Plongren and her daughter collapsed and are in a serious condition. The body will be kept here until the father arrives from Philadelphia and arranges for the funeral.

SHIP CO.'S FIGHT

Captains In Marine Disaster In Dispute Over Orders.

GOVERNMENT PROBE JUNE 9

Bitterest Fight In History of Admiralty Courts Likely to Spring From Investigation—Each Steamship Company in Empress of Ireland Disaster Stands by Its Own Captain.

QUEBEC. — Captain Kendall of the Empress of Ireland asserts:

That he shouted to the Storstad to keep full steam ahead, to fill the hole in the Empress of Ireland's side, but that the collier ignored the request.

That those who were saved were saved by the Empress' boats, and not by the Storstad, with only a few exceptions.

That he had stopped his ship and given adequate signals when the collier was two miles away, but that the latter vessel went ahead in the fog.

Captain Anderson of the collier Storstad asserts:

That his course was set to pass the Empress safely, but that the latter ship changed its course.

That the Storstad's engines were reversed when the crash occurred.

That the Storstad did not back away, but that her engines were ordered ahead, but that the Empress twisted the collier's bow out of the gash.

That he did all he could to rescue survivors and actually took 350 on board his vessel.

MONTREAL. — The bitterest fight in the history of admiralty courts is likely to spring from the investigation of the St. Lawrence disaster. Already marine interests, navigators and officials are at issue, one side charging that Captain H. G. Kendall of the Empress was to blame, the other accusing Captain Thomas Anderson of the Storstad. Each commander almost unqualifiedly places the responsibility upon the shoulders of the other.

It is evident that the Canadian Pacific railroad, owner of the Empress, has determined to support Captain Kendall and to make a fight for his exoneration. It is equally evident that the Dominion Coal company, owner of the collier Storstad, will stand behind Captain Anderson and will resist any efforts to fasten the blame upon him.

Government Probe June 9.

MONTREAL, QUE. — The government investigation of the sinking of the Empress of Ireland will be held in Montreal and will begin Tuesday, June 9. This announcement is made at the offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway company. The investigation will be conducted by a board composed of two judges of the Canadian admiralty, to be appointed by the dominion government, and one representative of the British admiralty, appointed by the imperial government.

The sharp point of an anchor projecting from the twisted bow of the Norwegian collier Storstad may explain why that vessel did such terrible execution when it rammed the Empress of Ireland last Friday morning in the lower St. Lawrence. An examination of the collier's shattered plates revealed the anchor jammed in a position where it could have ripped through the hull of the Empress like a great can opener. The anchor point and portions of the battered steel surrounding it bore stains of blood.

Captain Was on Bridge.

Pilot Nault, who navigated the Storstad up the St. Lawrence from Quebec, said that Captain Anderson told him that Anderson, his first officer, and Pilot Lechance, who brought the Storstad from Father Point to Quebec, were on the bridge at the time of the collision.

"Captain Anderson is deeply grieved over the tragedy. Several times during the run from Quebec I came upon him crying, with his face buried in his hands. Anderson told me he had been instructed not to talk about the accident."

QUEBEC. — The total number of passengers on the Empress of Ireland when she was struck by the Storstadt, it is asserted here, was 1,467. Of that number 465 survived, leaving 1,002 dead. About 100 passengers were taken on at Rimouski and the names and number of those passengers were not in possession of the officials of the company at Montreal at the time of the sinking of the Empress.

ASKS HILLQUIT TO GET OUT

William English Walling Wants Him to Quit Socialists.

NEW YORK. — William English Walling, author of "Socialism As It Is," "Progressivism and After" and other Socialist books, in an address in the Berkeley theater, denounced Morris Hillquit, national chairman of the Socialist party before Bouck White's congregation. He called upon Hillquit to get out of the party.

Hillquit has been quoted as saying that such persons as Upton Sinclair and Bouch White ought to be put out o fthe Socialist party as punishment for "Silent Mourning" in front of the Standard Oil offices and the attempt to speak in Calvary Baptist church of which the Rockefellers are members.

Swain, Angered by Refusal to See Him, Blows Up Home.

HALIFAX, N. S. — Miss Myrtle Robinson, a young woman to whom Thomas Reilly of Halifax was paying attention, would not respond to his appeal to come to the front door of her home early in the morning and see him. He exploded a stick of dynamite on the sidewalk. The explosion blew in the front of the house and smashed the windows in two blocks.

The dynamite had a time fuse so that Reilly was able to get out of danger. No one was badly hurt, but the damage to property is considerable. Reilly was captured an hour after the explosion and put in jail charged with attempted murder.

PRINCE OSCAR

Kaiser's Fifth Son to Wed Girl Below Royal Family's Rank.

POTSDAM. — The engagement of Prince Oscar, fifth son of the German emperor and empress, to Countess Ina Marie von Bassewitz-Levetzow, maid of honor to the empress, has been announced. The prince was born July 27, 1888. The marriage will be the first morganatic union which has occurred in the Hohenzollern family since 1853. It is assumed that the emperor, who consented to the engagement, will confer a higher rank in the nobility on the young countess. The countess was born on aJnuary 27, 1888, and her father, Count Charles von Bassewitz-Levetzow, is premier of the grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

COLLIER IS BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF 964

Captain Kendall, of Ill-Fated Ship, Tells of Orders.

RIMOUSKI, QUE. — While final tabulations of the casualties in the sinking of the ill-fated steamer Empress of Ireland were being made, showing that 403 of its passengers and crew had been rescued and 964 had perished, Captain Henry George Kendall of the liner was telling his story of the disaster at an inquiry conducted by Coroner Pinaud here.

Captain Kendall, in substance, declared that he had taken all possible precautions against a collision. His ship had been stopped, he gave the requisite signals when the Danish collier Storstad, which dealt the blow which sent the Empress to the bottom, was still two miles away, but the collier had kept on through the fog which settled down soon after the two vessels sighted each other and had rammed the Empress of Ireland while the latter was virtually motionless.

Then, despite his plea to the master of the collier that he run his engines full speed ahead to keep the hole in the liner's side plugged with the Storstad's bow, said Captain Kendall, the Danish vessel backed away, the water rushed in and the Empress sank.

The greatest fool is the one who fools himself.

MEDIATORS IN TILT

U. S. Delegates Cause Deadlock Over Carranza.

A. B. C. ENVOYS WON'T YIELD

Persons Close to South American Diplomats Say They Will Not Reverse Their Position—Looters Paid by Huerta—Bonds Accepted; German Ships Sail.

WASHINGTON. — The first definite evidence of a serious difference of opinion between officials of the United States government and the A. B. C. mediators over the admission of the constitutionalists to the Niagara Falls conference came last night. The disclosure took the form of a statement by Luis Cabrera, Carranza's spokesman in Washington.

Cabrera takes the position that the mediators' chief function is bringing together the parties in controversy, and that to refuse the request of the United States that the Carranza representative be admitted with the other representatives in the Niagara Falls parleys is beyond the limits of the scope of mediation.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. — The crisis in the mediation proceedings between Mexico and the United States is at an acute stage. The three South American diplomats and the American delegates have reached an absolute deadlock and nothing further will be done on either side before a solution of the latest difficulty has been found.

Won't Yield on Carranza.

After conferring for more than two hours Saturday night and an hour and a half Monday morning on the issue in dispute, namely the participation of General Carranza in the mediation conferences, Justice Lamar and Frederick W. Lehmann have not been able to induce the mediators to view the situation in the light in which the state department at Washington would like to have them see it. Ambassador De Gama of Brazil and Minister Naon and Suarez of Argentine and Chile are positively determined to yield no more to the Mexican revolt leader than to Mr. Bryan.

Persons who are close to the mediators declare that all three envoys will positively refuse to reverse their position regardless of any pressure which may be brought to bear upon them. It was pointed out that the mediators have adopted this attitude not only for the good of Mexico, but also to protect their personal dignity. All three are of the opinion that Carranza was offered every opportunity to enter the conference on the same footing and at the same time as General Huerta and that he should have availed himself of the opportunity.

Looters Paid by Huerta.

EL PASO. — Rodrigo Quevedo and Cristoforo Cabellero, Mexican filibuster leaders, arrived at Fort Wingate, New Mexico, where they will be placed in the prison camp with Maximo Castillo and other Mexican prisoners.

The arrest of Quevedo has released additional facts of his operations. Originally organized as a federal filibustering force, the followers of the Quevedos, Jose Orozco and Manuel Gutierrez, it was learned, were to have been paid by the Huerta government.

Bonds Accepted; Ships Start.

VERA CRUZ, MEX.—The agents of the Hamburg-American line presented a bond of 1,013,625 pesos, or $506,317.50 United States gold, as a guaranty of the payment of the fines of the Ypiranga and the Bavaria. The bond was acceptable to collector of the port Captain Stickney and the steamships were allowed to proceed.

The Ypiranga goes to Havana and the Bavaria will go to Hamburg

STEEL COACHES SAVE MANY LIVES IN WRECK

Flyer Leaves Rails, Cars Turn Over, Nobody Hurt.

LANSING, MICH. — The fast night mail on the Bay City division of the Michigan Central was wrecked at Eden, seventeen miles south of Lansing.

With the exception of the engine and tender the entire train left the track. It split into three sections and toppled quarter-way over. Outside of a few bruises not a passenger was hurt and the railroad men are singing the praises of steel coaches.

Coming through Eden at forty miles an hour the front truck of the express car left the track. The car pulled away from the engine and tender and took the rest of the train with it. Two heavy Pullmans at the rear were equiped with emergency brakes, and these worked, with the result that the coaches stopped within a few car lengths, probably averting serious injury to occupants. The day coaches ahead kept rushing along on the ties for a couple of hundred yards and then toppled over.

Including the crew there were possibly thirty persons aboard. Not one of them was hurt enough to need the attention of a physician.

SUICIDES ON THIRD ATTEMPT

Long Vigil at Husband's Bedside Weaken's Woman's Mind.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Her third suicidal attempt within three weeks was successful, Mrs. John A. Watson, wife of a Bancroft merchant, and former sheriff of Shiawassee county, shooting herself through the heart with arevolver

Since her husband was stricken with apoplexy three months ago, Mrs. Watson has kept vigil at his bedside and accompanied him to Ann Arbor, when he was taken to a hospital. Loss of sleep and worry caused a nervous breakdown, and temporarily demented, she tried to end her life in the Shiawassee river. Later she got away from the St. Louis sanitarium and again tried to drown herself, but was saved.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Announcement is made o fthe marriage on May 9 of Miss Lilian F. Boynton of this city, and Eugene Smith, of Philadelphia. Some time ago quite a sensation was created here when a young man named Reynolds took out a marriage license to wed Miss Boynton. He afterwards admitted he didn't marry the young lady, who comes from one of the oldest and best families.

The license appeared in the papers and he was the object of considerable good-natured "Joshing."

HOAXED THE STATESMEN.

And at the Same Time Paul Birault Proved His Proposition.

Paul Birault, a writer on the Paris Eclair, contended that too many statues were being erected all over France to obscure heroes, too many official speeches made to celebrate intellectual nonenities, and Radical politicians generally are the blindest leaders of the blind.

To prove his theory that this was due to the fact that the living were delighted by public posing, he invented a celebrity to glorify and called him Hegesippe Simon. No such man ever existed, but he described him in his letter as a most wonderful precursor of modern light and progress. To give his letter a certain importance he headed it with a motto to the following effect, "Darkness fades when the sun rises," representing it as the most remarkable dictum of the remarkable Hegesippe Simon.

Under this glorious motto he placed the title of his bogus committee, which he dubbed "public committee for the celebration of the centenary of Hegesippe Simon." He selected the names of 100 Radical deputies in alphabetical order and sent them each a letter, in which he said: "Thanks to the liberality of a generous donor, the disciples of Hegesippe Simon are now enabled to erect a statue in his honor. We desire to inscribe your name as an honorary member of the committee to celebrate the centenary of this great educator of democracy."

Bright Definitions.

Here are some schoolboy "howlers" sent us by a Welsh schoolmaster:

"The principal vegetable and mineral products in America are tinned meat and barking stiefors."

"The temperate zone is the region where no one drinks too much."

The English lesson is not altogether free from humor.

"The masculine of sultana is raisin; of heroine, kipped."

"The feminine of he-goat is she went; of hero, shero."

"A corps is a dead gentleman; a corpse is a dead lady."—London Tit-Bits.

Blind Obedience.

"I have often wondered," remarked Mrs. Rogers, "how a horse feels. A horse hasn't any idea what is going to happen to him when he is harnessed. He doesn't know how far he is going or what he is going for. To be driven hither and thither, blindly, seemingly without purpose, with no idea of what it's all about or when it will be over—how must the poor creature feel—what must he think about it all?"

"I suppose," said Mr. Rogers wearily, "that he must feel just as I do when you take me on a shopping expedition with you!"—London Mail.

Three Able Eaters.

The biggest eaters in public life, when one narrows it down to three men, are Secretary William Jennings Bryan, Senator Ollie James and Senator Moses E Clapp. Secretary Bryan always eats his usual dinner at home before going out to attend a formal dinner. His one specialty, however, is cheese of various denominations. Clapp is most formidable at consuming good, thick cream. James is best in an all around eating tournament.—New York Sun.

Wheeling Yourself.

Electric wheel chairs, which need no practice to operate, have now appeared as a substitute for the push chairs common at seaside resorts. Pressing on a lever with the foot makes them go ahead, and the harder the pressure the faster they will go, though the top speed is not much faster than a walk. Removing the pressure on the foot lever puts on the brakes. The steering is done by means of an ordinary steering lever.—Exchange.

MATTING THE MISSISSIPPI.

Memphis Carpeting the River Bed to Save the Channel.

The bottom of the Mississippi river, or, rather, portions of it near Memphis, Tenn., are being supplied with a carpet in the shape of gigantic mats woven of willow trees, which are being constructed in sections on the surface of the river and then sunk into place. The river for several years has been cutting a new channel that threatens to leave Memphis high and dry a mile away. The turbulent river already has to its credit, or discredit, a score of towns deserted in this manner, with consequences serious enough. In the case of Memphis, however, these consequences would be disastrous almost beyond description. Her costly harbor facilities would be utterly ruined and the city left with a huge mudbank between its fine levee and the stream.

The threatened danger was first noted by government engineers about a year ago, and preparations immediately started to avert it. While the insatiable river has for several years been eating railroads, houses and farms in the vicinity of Memphis, sucking them into its muddy maw and carrying them down to the gulf of Mexico, it seemed that the hungry stream had at last met something that would check its appetite when a sheer wall of solid rock appeared at Hopefield Point, opposite Memphis. But the rock was soon being undermined.

The willow mats now being placed in the river at that point are expected to put a stop to the erosion. Some of these mats are a mile long and 200 feet wide. As fast as a section is completed it is weighted with rocks to sink it into place and then pinned to the bottom with piles. The Mississippi is the only river in the world that enjoys the distinction of having its bottom carpeted.—Christian Herald.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

In Use to a Limited Extent In Some European Mines.

The dream of wireless telephony—that a person will be able to carry in his pocket a telephone instrument and at any time or place call up a number and have a conversation—has actually become true in a limited way. Such pocket wireless telephones are in daily use in some European mines for communication with the surface and with other places in the mine.

Wireless telephony has been a complete success for some time for short distances of transmission, and in the short distances needed for use in one mine wireless telephony is as practical as wireless telegraphy. Instruments are located at convenient places in the mine, with wires already attached to pipes, rails or some other means of getting a good electrical connection with the ground, and it is these stationary instruments that are depended on for most uses.

In addition, however, portable instruments are used frequently. These weigh too much to be carried in one's pocket and so are carried like a hand bag.

Besides these portable instruments there are provided for the officials pocket instruments that can send, but cannot receive messages.

When a message is sent all the stations in the system receive it, but in practice it has been found to work much like a party line telephone, giving little trouble to the stations for which the message is not intended.

Pocket receiving instruments for wireless telegraphy are also appearing now. They are useful, of course, to only a limited degree, for they can only receive and not send, and they receive only strong signals, such as those of nearby stations or government time signals.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Sense of Humor.

Dr. Ingram, bishop of London, once declared that a "sense of humor is essential to success. If a young man has no sense of humor I would keep him at college until he got one."

Nature.

Nature is just toward men. It recompenses them for their sufferings; it renders them laborious, because to the greatest toils it attaches the greatest rewards.—Montesquieu

Regret is of little good except as a milestone at the beginning of a steady ascent.

FOR A MORE SANITARY VILLAGE.

Recently the Board of Health served notice on all property owners in the down town district to remove all out houses in the rear of their places of business before July 1st failing to do this the Village Council immediately after date, will have the buildings removed, and all expense incurred will be charged against the owners in a special assesment pursuant to power vested in the Said Council. A like notice has also been served upon the School Board to remove all such buildings located on school property. This certainly is a move in the right direction for a cleaner more sanitary village. It might be well for the Common Council to see to the providing of suitable covered recepticals for the use of the various households for the disposal of garbage the same to be gathered up once or twice a week as necessity may require, thus avoiding the throwing of garbage on the ground for a breeding place for flies and mosquitos and the germs for typhoid fever, and other diseases.

We believe this matter could be taken care of by the village or thru some private parties at no great expense to our people. We will be glad to print any article along this line which our readers may bring in to us. Think it over and let us join hands in an effort to make Tecumseh a better and healthier place in which to live.

TOWN MAINTAINS HOBOES' HAVEN

How Tramp Problem Is Dealt With In Oneida County, N. Y.

STOPS BACK DOOR BEGGING.

Lodging, Supper and Breakfast Supplied and the Sick Cared For—Poormaster and Grocer Divide Profits on Allowance of 25 Cents For Each Meal Served In Unique Institution.

The village of Clayville, in Oneida county, has a unique tramp house. It is a wooden building about twenty feet square. It has one door and one window, plank floors and no basement. Its sanitary provisions would make a health officer gasp for breath, says the New York Times, but it is popular with tramps, and since it was opened about twenty years ago more than 25,000 men have been fed and lodged in the building.

Every tramp who enters the village is entitled to lodging, supper, and breakfast in the tramp house. Sometimes if a tramp is ill he remains there for a week or two and comes out looking better than if a metropolitan hospital had had him in charge. The town of Paris pays the cost for the purpose of keeping tramps from sleeping in barns or begging food or lodgings from the people. Before the house was opened the town suffered great annoyance from tramps. Barns were burned and people attacked by men who had been denied food or shelter. The tramp house has solved this problem in a very satisfactory manner.

Goal of Tramps From Many Points.

Tramps come into the village on foot or on freight trains from Utica on the north and Binghamton on the south. The town of Paris is the gateway to the hop fields of the county, the promised land to the tramp fraternity. The men call the little old building "The Castle" and make direct for it after entering the village.

The meals are served on the European plan, and table etiquette is never thought of, for the reason that there isn't any table. Spoons or other silverware is never stolen for the same reason. The guests believe in the old adage, "Fingers were made before forks."

Tramps usually begin arriving at the building about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. When dusk comes a committee of two is selected to make arrangements for the grub. The town poormaster has an understanding with a nearby groceryman whereby the latter supplies food to the tramps. The committee makes an official call upon the merchant, who inquires about the number of men waiting to be fed.

Mealtime at "the Castle."

Then he grinds enough coffee for the crowd, mixes it with some sugar and water in a two gallon pot and throws a slab or two of bologna, several loaves of bread and some canned beans in a flour sack. If he happens to have a supply of stale cookies or fried cakes, in they go too. The committee carries the food down to "the castle," the coffee is boiled on the stove, tin cups are passed around, and everybody digs in.

During the evening the storekeeper goes to "the castle" and takes the name and address of every man. His book shows that "Texas Tommy," "Box Car Jimmy," "One Eye Smith," "Sandy Kelly" and a lot of other men with odd names have a fondness for registering at "the castle."

The town pays the poormaster 25 cents for every meal served, and the poormaster divides profits with the storekeeper. The latter very often contributes without charge old clothes, shoes, stockings, chewing tobacco and pills to those who need them.

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE BILL.

Move to Make Mount Weather an Abode For President.

Various suggestions that the government should provide a summer White House for the president and his family crystallized in a bill introduced by Representative Carlin of Virginia calling for the conversion of Mount Weather, near Bluemont, Va., into a presidential summer home. The place is already government property.

Mount Weather is 2,000 feet above sea level, on the ridge separating the Shenandoah and Loudoun valleys, and is within two hours' ride of Washington. The property was acquired by the weather bureau while Professor Willis Moore was chief of the institution. Hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent in improvements, but experience demonstrated that it was not available for a weather station. The agricultural appropriation bill provides for the abandonment of the location as a weather observatory.

CHILD'S WELFARE LEAGUE

Mrs. Millie Johnston Supervisor and Mrs. Arthur Cameron District Superintendent of the National Child Welfare League were in town Wednesday in the interest of their society.

This society is organizing local leagues in all communities for the study of Child Welfare and Investigation to find out the causes for the increase in dependent children. A study is made of Family Desertion, hastening the day when out-handed children will be less numerous because human life will be better protected.

Diseased and crippled children are cared for and treatment is provided for them. The Society is doing a good work and the work is supported intirely by voluntary gifts and membership fees. Their Detroit Office is located at 1207 Chamber Commerce.

NEW ERA TO FIGHT FOR LEGAL RESERVE FUND

Filed Petition for Amendment to State Constitution Aimed at Mobile Law.

Lansing, Mich., June 2.—Petition for an amendment to the state constitution, aimed at the Mobile bill, passed by the last legislature, was filed, with more than 100,000 petitioners' names attached, by Charles D. Sparrow, general manager of the New Era Association, at the secretary of state's office this afternoon.

The passage of the amendment at the next election would give fraternal beneficiary societies the right to operate with a legal reserve fund or to collect assessments upon a basis of rates which would in operation collect an amount annually in excess of the average mortuary cost for $1000 of insurance.

Under the Mobile law, the societies are compelled to charge an additional 100 per cent.

Feeding on Sunlight.

Major Miramond de la Roquette of the French army medical corps in reporting to the Academie des Sciences the results of some observations in southern Algeria on the relation between diet and sunlight gave it as his opinion that the tissues of the human body directly utilize the radiant energy of the sunshine. The normal diet of the natives of hot and sunny climes is far lower both in quantity and in nutritive quality than that of inhabitants of less favored regions, the sunlight seeming to make up the difference.

Bullet Parts Ensign's Hair.

George B. Junkin, an ensign on the battleship Utah, has written to a friend in Philadelphia of his narrow escape from death as the officers and bluejackets went ashore at Vera Cruz. In the first action there Ensign Junkin, who was leading a company of bluejackets, which later took the custom house, felt a bullet cut a hole in his hat and part his hair with the furrow it left.

SOME WIND AT THE BAPTIST CONVENTION

Rev. W. B. Hartzog was in Weston yesterday attending the Lenawee-Monroe Baptist convention of which he is president. He reports that a terrific cyclone swept the southern part of the county yesterday, moving barns off their foundations and generally wrecking things. It was accompanied by a severe thunderstorm.

One old gentleman, in his excitement and fear that his barns be destroyed, seized Rev. Hartzog's hat and left for his home about six miles away, so the reverend brother had to get another to wear home.

JUNE 12, 1914.

So far as is known every living alumnus has been notified, either verbally or by letter, and the committee hopes that every one will feel a personal interest in making the day a success. It is urged that Tecumseh citizens as far as possible, display the high school colors, orange and black, on their homes and business places on June 12, thus adding to the welcome to be extended to the many out of town alumni who have signified their intention of returning for the day. THOSE CHICKENS

That Mrs. A. O. Howard is a busy woman is plain to be seen. as she has shipped between eleven hundred and twelve hundred little chicks to different parts of the country this week, and has thirteen hundred left, to care for. Last week she shipped one hundred and eighty dozen of hatching eggs to the Eastern market all this besides what has been done at home. A visit to the farm just west of town would furnish a fund of entertainment as every chick has a special note of its own when interviewed.

AT 81 SHE RIDES HORSEBACK

She Hadn't Ridden That Way For Sixty Years.

CASE CITY, MICH. — Mrs. Julia Huffman celebrated her eighty-first birthday by riding on horseback to Elk Lake cemetery, where she witnessed the decoration of the graves of departed veterans.

It is sixty years since she rode any distance. Before that period, however, horseback riding was her favorite pastime, and in those days it was quite fashionable for all young ladies to ride.

KENDALL'S ANSWER LACONIC

Declines to Give Statement of Wreck Until Further Inquiry.

QUEBEC. — Captain Kendall of the ill-fated Empress of Ireland, went through here on his way to Montreal, where he was received by officials of the Canadian Pacific.

"I can't answer," he said. "You'll have all that in a few days."

NERVOUS HEADACHES

Heavy Feeling, as If My Brain Was Pressing Down

MRS. EFFIE HILL,
Blanchester, Clinton Co., Ohio.

Mrs. Hill says: "I cannot tell you how much I have suffered during the past twelve years." Twelve years is a long time for any one to suffer. A great multitude of women in this country know exactly what Mrs. Hill means when she says, "Heavy feeling, as if my brain was pressing down. So nervous I could not get my rest at night. Would have sinking spells and then so weak that I could not do my work." A great many women in the United States will recognize in this description their own experience.

Mrs. Hill found a remedy. After taking four bottles of Peruna she gained in strength and flesh and wrote us that she was a well woman again. She says, "I cannot thank you enough for my recovery."

This is no ordinary incident. Twelve years suffering. Four bottles of Peruna. Restored to perfect health. If Peruna can do this for one woman why can it not for another? Is it not worth your attention? Is it not worth trying?

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 4 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

A Promise

It Was Well Kept and Did Great Good

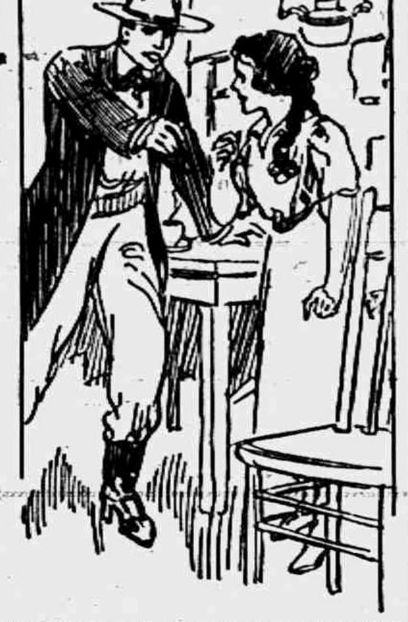
By EVERITT P. CLARKE

I.

About the middle of the nineteenth century, when the wild and woolly west deserved the appellation, a girl in a frontiersman's cabin was getting supper in anticipation of her father's coming home from attending to his daily duties. She was about fifteen years old and seemed to be made up principally of arms and legs. Nevertheless her face was pretty, and she gave promise after passing the filly age of making a comely woman. While she was standing over the cook stove she heard a clattering of horse's hoofs without, which grew rapidly nearer, and in a few moments a horseman galloped up to the door and threw himself from his animal, which he struck on the haunch and sent on its way.

"Hide me! For heaven's sake, hide me!" he said to the girl.

His haste made it plain that there was no time for explanation, and the girl, moved by his piteous condition,



"FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, HIDE ME!" HE SAID TO THE GIRL.

led him to an upper story of the house and put him in a closet. Then, going below, she waited breathlessly for what might happen. But a few minutes elapsed before half a dozen men broke into the clearing and came toward the house. All passed on but one, who pulled up at the open door and called out to the girl:

"Seen a man go by here just now?"

"Yes."

"Which way did he go?"

"I heard his horse gallopin' into the timber over there," pointing.

The man started off and joined the others. After awhile the fugitive came downstairs. He was not over twenty-five years old and good looking, though his face was ashy pale. He went up to the girl, took her hand in his and said feelingly:

"You've saved my life."

"What did they want with you?" she asked.

"They wanted to hang me."

"What for?"

"Well, I'm the slickest gambler in the territory. I went into the settlement down the creek and cleaned 'em all out. Besides, I've done more shootin' than all the rest of 'em put together. They decided that I am too desperate a character to have around, so they concluded to git rid of me."

The girl listened to this with a sober countenance.

"What makes you look so sorry?" asked the man.

"I don't like to think of you as a gambler."

He seemed touched by her interest in him. "What difference does it make to you whether I'm good or bad?" he asked.

"Reckon I'd rather save a good man from the vigilantes than a bad one. I suppose I should have given you up."

The man looked at her intently for a few moments, then, "But you didn't," he said. "Would you have given me up if you had known I was a gambler?"

"I don't know that I would."

"Would you rather I wouldn't be a gambler?"

"Yes."

"Or a shooter?"

"Yes."

"Little girl, give me some of that supper you're cookin'. I'm hungry and need sustenance."

The girl, who had been frying some bacon and potatoes, put a part of them on a plate and set it on the table. The young man sat down, and she poured him a cupful of coffee. He had somewhat recovered his nerve and ate heartily. When he had finished he rose and, pouring out on the table a heap of money that he had won by gambling, looked at her as much as to say, "Will you take it?"

She shook her head.

A look of disappointment crossed his face.

"What can I do," he asked, "to repay you for saving me from the vigilantes?"

"Stop gamblin' and shootin' and all the other things."

He made no reply to this, but seemed to have been deeply moved. He stood looking out through the open door in the direction the vigilantes had taken and listening. Presently he said:

"I reckon I'd better git out of here while I have a chance. They'll overtake my horse and, seein' no rider on him, will know that they've passed me. They'll come back for me."

He took the girl's hand and looked earnestly into her eyes.

"Say, little gal, if it hadn't been for you I'd be swingin' now. You own the rest of my life. For you I'll stop gamblin' and shootin' and the other things. Goodby."

He bent down, kissed her, then struck out for the timber on that side of the clearing from which he had come.

II.

In a gambling house a man was dealing faro to a motley crowd, few of whom possessed some claims to respectability, while the most of them were roughs. A young clergyman, whose calling was denoted solely by a white necktie, entered and announced that services would be held that evening in the building commonly used for a dance hall and he hoped that all in the room would make it a point to attend. No one paid any attention to him. Presently his attention was arrested by a girl of twenty who entered the room, walked up to an elderly man who sat at one of the tables, where a game of poker was being played and, placing her hand on his shoulder, said persuasively:

"Come away, father."

The clergyman watched her, looking into her face inquiringly. When she spoke he started. Memory seemed to be working within him. Then suddenly something was recalled, and his face lighted up.

"You go home with your daughter," he said to the man the girl was trying to get away, "and I'll play your hand for you."

Every one at the table looked at the speaker wonderingly, for a clergyman to gamble, even for another, was remarkable. The man he addressed looked up at him curiously and saw something in the resolute face that led him to obey. He rose from the table and gave the clergyman his seat. The girl, too, looked at the latter curiously, then took her father by the arm and was leading him away when the clergyman asked:

"How much have you lost?"

"All I had—$1,200."

The father and daughter passed out, and the game went on. There were three men at the table besides the one in the white necktie, and every one of the three was a card sharp. There were old tricks and new tricks practiced by the sharpers. The clergyman seemed a bit unfamiliar with the new, but thoroughly versed in the old. However, he had not played long before all schemes were alike familiar to him. The game was simply one of wits against wits. When a player was detected in cheating he returned his winnings. He was not abashed, and no one objected. As the game went on a number of persons stood about the table watching it, especially interested in the clergyman's sleight of hand. Slowly, but surely, the pile of bank bills and gold pieces before him increased. It was not only his skill in card manipulating that attracted attention, but that one of his calling should be so versed in the ways of card sharps. At last he called a halt and counted his winnings. They figured $1,260. Shoving the $60 over to the others, he scooped the rest into his handkerchief and, rising from the table, said:

"Gentlemen, I trust you will all be at the services this evening."

What five years before had been a clearing had now grown into a town. True, there was but one street in it. but the clergyman, leaving the gambling den, pursued that street, stopped before a house and knocked at the door. It was opened by the girl who had led her father from the game.

"I have brought you," said the latter, "the sum you told me you had lost to those card sharps."

And he emptied his handkerchief of its contents on the table.

Both father and daughter looked at him with the same continued astonishment.

"Do you remember some years ago," said the cleryman to the girl, "saving a man's life from a vigilance committee?"

"I do."

"He was to repay you by abjuring his evil ways and trying to be of some use in the world."

"You are that man?"

"I am."

"You are no older looking than then, but you are different looking, else I would have known you."

"I have kept my promise. I find I can do most good among the people with whom I was familiar in those days, now horrible to me, when I was a card sharp and a desperado. It is to you I owe my reformation as well as my life." Then, turning to the father of the girl, he added: "The men with whom you were playing are cheats. You are no match for them. What they took from you dishonestly I got back honestly, for we all knew that it was not cards we were playing, but sleight of hand with cards."

The fame of the clergyman who had beaten card sharps at their own game spread abroad and curiosity to see him brought him a large assemblage at the meeting he had announced for the evening. Many were moved by his eloquence. Before he left the place he had reformed it, and with him as his wife and coworker went the girl who, by reforming him, reformed many others.

A CURIOUS WARNING.

It Was a Clever Ruse and Thoroughly Scared the Burglars.

For a time during the eighteenth century in England there was a lull in the robbery industry owing to an odd incident. Shortly after the execution of an English burglar named Elliston a curious communication purporting to have been written by him was put into circulation.

"Now, as I am a dying man," it ran, "I have done something which may be of good use to the public. I have left with an honest man—the only honest man I was ever acquainted with—the names of all my wicked brethren, the places of their abode, with a short account of the chief crimes they have committed, in many of which I have been the accomplice and heard the rest from their own mouths. I have likewise set down the names of those we call our setters, of the houses we frequent and all of those who receive and buy our stolen goods. I have solemnly charged this honest man and have received his promise upon oath that whenever he hears of any rogue to be tried for robbery or housebreaking he will look into his list and if he finds there the name of the thief concerned to send the whole paper to the government. Of this I here give my companions fair and public warning and hope they will take it."

It is said the hint was so effectual that for a long time pickpockets and burglars in that part of England went into panic stricken retirement. And, this being so, it is just as well they did not know that the letter was a clever forgery, the work of that prince of wits and humorists, Dean Swift.

EX-MAYOR SHOT THROUGH DOOR

"He Refused to Treat My Sick Child," Says Assassin.

DU QUOIN, ILL., DOCTOR VICTIM

Assailant Known as Bad Man—Entered Office and Proceeded to Provoke Quarrel—Pushed Out and Door Is Closed; He Fires Six Shots Through Panel.

Du Quoin, Ill., June 8.—D. D. Winton Dunn, formerly mayor of Du Quoin, was shot and fatally wounded here Saturday night by Jessie Joplin.

"He refused to treat my sick child because of an unpaid bill," said Joplin in extenuation of his act.

News of the shooting so inflamed the community that the authorities took the precaution of hurrying Joplin to Pinckneyville, where he is held in the Perry county jail.

Dr. Dunn was taken to St. Louis on a special train soon after the shooting, but died in a hospital the morning following. He had been wounded in six places by Joplin, none of whose bullets failed to hit the physician.

Shot Down In Office.

Policemen who accompanied Joplin to Pinckneyville declare that the prisoner announced on the way he hoped Dr. Dunn would die from the wounds, but that if the physician should happen to recover he would kill him as soon as he was released.

Dr. Dunn was alone in his office in the Odd Fellows' building about 8:30 o'clock in the evening when Joplin entered with a revolver in his hand. His eyes snapped, but his manner was cool as he said to the physician:

"I came here to kill you, and I am going to do it. I am going to send you where you belong." Dr. Dunn told his son, Theodore, were the words used by Joplin.

The physician, who was sixty-two years old, realized he was not a match physically for Joplin, who is thirty-five and muscular. Joplin is known in the community as a somewhat reckless man.

Fires Through Door.

Dr. Dunn knew this and sought to parley. He argued with Joplin for several minutes. Suddenly Dr. Dunn sprang from his chair, and before Joplin could move shoved him through the open door, then slammed it shut. Joplin was on the outside. Instantly he opened fire through the door. Each of the six bullets took effect, the physician crumpling at the foot of the perforated panel, against which he had thrown his weight to keep the door closed.

A few minutes later he recovered sufficiently to drag himself to the telephone and call up Dr. M. Adler across the street. "I am mortally wounded; come over quick," said a weak voice.

Dr. Adler found Dr. Dunn stretched on a couch. After a hasty examination, in which the wounded man himself assisted, Dr. Dunn ordered that a special train be made up to take him to St. Louis.

Meantime Joplin had gone away and reloaded his revolver. The chief of police had been notified of the shooting, and as Joplin reappeared at Dr. Dunn's office he was disarmed and taken to Pinckneyville.

CATHOLICS ASKED TO BOYCOTT EXPOSITION

Church Societies Resent Nathan Representing Italy.

New York, June 8.—A resolution calling upon all Catholics to take no part in the Panama-Pacific exposition because of the appointment of former Mayor Ernesto Nathan of Rome as the official representative of the Italian government was unanimously adopted at the Third annual reunion of the Laymen's League For Retreats and Social Studies. More than two thousand men and women of the Catholic faith, were present.

Among them were the leaders of many Catholic organizations which may be expected to take action on the Nathan appointment before the exposition opens.

The introduction of the resolution had a special place in the program. It describes Nathan as "an unprincipled enemy of religious liberty and therefore against the spirit of our constitution" and also as "persona non grata to the 16,000,000 Catholic citizens of these United States." When the question was put the resolution was carried unanimously.

DUTCH CAPTURE HOLLAND?

Michigan Town Votes to Put Saloons Back In City; Vote Large.

Holland, Mich., June 8.—Holland voted to re-establish saloons in the city, after a saloonless period of six years. The campaign for the special election was one of the hottest ever conducted in the city, and the large vote which was polled is evidence that both the wets and drys worked the city thoroughly. The vote was 1,187 for and 914 against the return of the saloon.

During the last six years Holland has not been entirely dry, the wholesale liquor dealers having enjoyed a thriving business.

CRISIS IS NEAR IN REBEL RANKS

Carranza-Villa Quarrel Is Lining Up Their Followers.

JEALOUSY IS REPORTED CAUSE

Former Bandit's Successes Are Said to Have Stirred Keenest Rivalry Among Others—Efforts Being Made to Check His Brilliant Exploits—He Remains at Chihuahua.

Juarez, Mexico, June 8.—A crisis rapidly is approaching in the quarrel between General Pancho Villa and General Venustiano Carranza. Military commanders of the Constitutionalist forces are being lined up, it is claimed, for the opposing leaders and jealousy over Villa's military successes is prompting many who have been passive in the controversy to take a decided stand against the terror of the north. Villa, despite his plans to leave ranza's appointment of General Pan-City and in almost constant communication with his friends on the border. It is said by Villa's men that the commander is determined to bring the controversy to an immediate issue and to that end has decided to ignore Carranza's appointment of General Panfilo Natera to be commander of the central division and will himself assume command in the campaign at Zacatecas.

Jealousy Says Villa's Friends.

Villa's friends say the opposition which has developed against him among the commanders of the Constitutionalist forces is prompted purely by jealousy and has been held in check by fear of the anger of the former bandit. The claim is made that there is a widespread plot to curb the successes of Villa and detract from his fame by giving to other commanders the opportunity to win successes in the south and keep the army of Villa inactive in Torreon. Villa has more than twenty thousand fighters who are eager to enter the campaign at Zacatecas and it is said by those who have been in communication with Villa that he is determined to proceed at once to Zacatecas to direct the fighting there and direct his own forces in storming the federal stronghold.

GREECE DENIES ATROCITIES

Government Attacks Report Issued by Carnegie Peace Foundation Body.

Washington, June 8.—The Carnegie Peace Foundation, whose purpose is the promotiton of universal peace, is severely attacked by the Greek government in an official statement issued here by Alexander Vouros, Greek charge d'affaires, from the Greek legation. According to the statement the Carnegie Foundation's commission, sent to Europe to investigate alleged atrocities in connection with the Balkan wars, was so pro-Bulgarian that in an effort to shield the Bulgarians, it slandered Greece through misstatement, in extraneous matter, ignored documentary evidence regarding the barbarity of the Bulgarians and heaped upon Greece false charges.

Hired His Newspaper.

Lady Taylor once took a friend to see the poet Tennyson and was rather coldly received. On Lady Taylor rallying him on his manner he said:

"Madam, I am a poor man, and as I can't afford to buy the Times I have it from the stationer. He charges me 2 cents for it, which entitles me to keep it an hour. Why will people select just that hour to come and call on me?"

This is the first opportunity they have had to show their allegiance to Mrs. Pennybacker and the great institution which she leads. They plan to emphasize their presence by being the first delegation to register.

Nose Almost Broken by Ball, but He Will Play Tuesday.

Westbury, L. I., June 8.—Captain Cheape, the hardest hitter on the English polo team, was hit in the face with a ball in the final practice of the team and for a while it was feared that his nose was broken and that he would be incapacitated for the first game of the international series Tuesday.

Later in the evening, the doctor, who examined the injured player, said that the bridge of the nose wasn't broken and Captain Cheape would be in condition to play on Tuesday. The cartilege of the nose was torn and that caused it to bleed profusely.

PROSPECT FOR FRUIT IS UNUSUALLY GOOD

Everything Except Peaches Is Prolific in Michigan.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., June 8.—The prospect that the peach crop is going to be the next thing to a complete failure in this section this season doesn't make the fruit growers feel so very "blue" after all, because they are now practically sure of having one of the best crops of strawberries they have had in several years, and the prospects for nearly all other kinds of fruit are unusually good.

This applies strongly to apples, for in the majority of orchards the trees are hanging full of well set fruit, and if anything like normal conditions prevail through the summer, say the fruit growers, the apple harvest will be an especially profitable one.

Small fruits of different varities also give promise of a bumper yield. Particular attention to systematic spraying has had much to do with the bright prospects for a profitable fruit harvest in Eaton and adjoining counties this season.

BASS FISHERMAN WARNED

Season For Black Fellow Opens June 16, Says Authority.

Lansing, Mich., June 8.—Any person discovered catching black bass in Michigan Monday, June 15, will be prosecuted.

This statement was made by Game and Fish Warden William R. Oates after his deputues had reported that it was generally believed by fishermen throughout the state that the season for black bass opened June 15. The law provides that no black bass shall be caught from Feb. 1 to June 15 inclusive. The black are the only kind of bass covered by the law.

The Green Umbrella

Its Pursuit Brought Him Good Luck

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Chester Folsom stood in the doorway of his club watching the procession of dripping umbrellas passing up and down the sidewalk. The newest member of the Quill and Ink Pot club frowned disconsolately as he recollected that the editor of a popular magazine had demanded from him a story of amazing adventure at once.

"Put plenty of punch in it and have the love element strong—go to it!" the editor had said, and Folsom, who badly needed the forthcoming check, had been vainly racking his brains for an idea.

"It's like looking for a needle in a haystack seeking an adventure in New York on a rainy day," he grumbled, setting his broad shoulders against the doorway.

At that instant an idea came.

"I'll follow the first green umbrella that comes along and see what happens," he muttered, with a return of his natural enthusiasm. He straightened up and looked eagerly up and down the street, which was one of the principal crosstown thoroughfares of the city.

"There it comes!"

Looming like a gigantic mushroom among a hundred smaller ones came a large green umbrella. Originally it might have been black, but now, worn by time and weather, it was a most unmistakable green. It was a cotton umbrella upheld by a little, dwarfed old woman whose limp skirts were held primly above a pair of small rubber boots.

"Here goes!" said Folsom as he raised his own umbrella and joined the procession.

Suddenly the green umbrella swayed uncertainly and then turned down Fourth avenue. Chester Folsom followed close behind.

The rain dripped heavily, and just when the little old woman paused to struggle with closing the umbrella a little gust of wind tore it out of her frail grasp, and it went bounding skittishly along the pavement, upsetting the dignity and risibilities of the passersby.

IT WENT BOUNDING ALONG THE PAVEMENT.

Chester Folsom closed his own neat umbrella, and with half a dozen nicely calculated leaps he succeeded in capturing the green monstrosity and, furling it, went back to its flustered little owner, who stood in the doorway of a bird shop.

"Thank you, sir," she said gently; "it was very heavy."

"If you would not consider it a liberty," said Chester eagerly, "I should like to exchange umbrellas with you. Mine is much lighter and"— He paused awkwardly, for a quizzical smile broke the primness of her lips.

"And much more valuable," she added. "In spite of taking advantage of your gallantry, young man, I will exchange umbrellas with you, and believe me, sir, you will find that you have a most interesting bargain."

"I am willing to take the risk," said Chester lightly as he gave his handsome silk umbrella to the trembling little hands of the old woman and received in exchange the big green cotton umbrella, which he now discovered to wear a small blue patch on one side.

Presently he noticed that in his progress down the avenue there continued behind him the same steady rhythmical beat of feet, one man walking heavily, one man stepping lightly, but swiftly.

Suddenly Chester whirled about and faced his pursuers, for such he believed them to be.

Two men, one a very giant for size and hulking strength, and the other a small, wiry, alert individual, with a dark, eager face, almost fell over him.

"Why are you following me? What do you want?" he demanded.

"It is nothing," the little man was stammering when a girlish form darted from a taxicab at the curb and held Chester's arm in a tight grip.

"Where is she? What have you done with her?" she demanded indignantly.

"Now, miss, you've spoiled the nicest bit of detective work I ever saw," rumbled the big man in a disappointed tone. "You forget I told you that if we undertook this job we wouldn't stand for any interference."

"I know it!" half sobbed the girl, still clinging desperately to Chester's arm. "But when he is right here you can ask him, the big, big villain!" She unconsciously gave Chester's arm a vicious little shake as she spoke.

"Do you mean me?" he gasped.

"Of course I do! Where is she? What have you done with her?"

"I haven't the least idea what you are talking about," said Chester, with what dignity he could muster.

"You have Aunt Ophelia's umbrella! Here is her note. I found it fastened to her pincushion this morning when I went to carry in her chocolate. Can you deny that you are the man mentioned in that note?" Her little gloved finger traced some lines of crabbed handwriting before Chester's bewildered eyes.

"Dear Phyllis," it read, "the clock is striking the witching hour of midnight. The moon that shines on all true lovers is drawing a cloud over its friendly face, so that I may fly with my adored Alexander. When you read this I will be his wife. Sweet thought! Although he is many years my junior, he appreciates the rich maturity of my years, and I know we shall be very happy together. I will send for my trunks."

"Am I to understand that your aunt has eloped with a young man and you believe that I am—er—the Alexander mentioned in the note?" asked Chester, with amusement.

"Why not? You have her umbrella. It is the only thing that was missing. She is eccentric and always carried the green umbrella when it looked like rain. It rained last night. Where did you get that umbrella?" And the young lady fixed accusing eyes on Chester.

"I see no harm in telling you," he said gravely as he gave her one of his cards. "It is apparent that I exchanged umbrellas with your aunt. She seemed so tiny and the umbrella was so large and unmanageable that I was constrained to offer her my lighter one. She disappeared around the corner of Twenty-ninth street. I am afraid that that will not be of much help to you in your search."

Phyllis Spencer looked gratefully at him, but the two detectives continued to eye him with some doubt.

"Did your aunt have any friends or relatives in or near Twenty-ninth street?" asked Chester of the lovely dark eyed girl.

She smote her little gloved palms together in sudden excitement.

"Of course! There is Miss Weldon, the nurse she was so fond of. Miss Weldon took care of Aunt Ophelia during her long illness. The poor dear has never been the same since. Of course I meant Aunt Ophelia," she explained in response to Chester's look of puzzlement. "Miss Weldon lived in Twenty-ninth street somewhere. Mr. Jones, you must have some suggestion to make." She turned impatiently to the large detective.

"I'll find out," he said gruffly and disappeared in an adjacent shop. Presently he returned with the required information, and the four, entering the waiting taxicab, were driven up to Twenty-ninth street and to the number Jones had discovered.

"I shall go up and see her myself," said Miss Spencer as they went up the steps. "Perhaps Mr. Folsom will go with me. She may recognize him as the owner of her new umbrella."

At the first landing Ophelia tapped lightly at a door, and a pleasant faced woman broke into relieved smiles at sight of her.

"Oh, Miss Spencer! I'm so glad to see you!" she whispered cautiously. "I've tried to telephone to your house, but the servants said you were out looking for your aunt. She frightened me half to death. She came here in the middle of the night and said she was going to live with me. She went out this morning, and I hoped she had gone home, but she came back in an hour, and now she is resting quietly."

"Miss Weldon, this is Mr. Folsom," said Phyllis, "whom I have treated most rudely because I found him with Aunt Ophelia's umbrella."

"I will return it reluctantly," said Chester, "because it has been the means of—of—well, some day I may have the opportunity of explaining to you why I pursued the green umbrella," he ended, with eager embarrassment.

"Perhaps you could come and tell me about it some day, and you will want to inquire for Aunt Ophelia," said Phyllis demurely.

When Chester reached the street he was amazed to find that the address Miss Spencer had given him was on the most fashionable residence street in town, and when he made the promised call in polite inquiry for the health of Miss Ophelia Simms he found that the green umbrella had actually led him to an adventure where romance was waiting for him in the fair person of Phyllis Spencer.

"What's the matter with you, Folsom?" demanded his editor when that young man submitted the long delayed story. "This yarn hasn't got an ounce of punch, but the love interest—well, you've found your forte now. This is one of the best love stories I ever read. What's happened to you?"

"Oh—ah—well, you know," stammered Chester in helpless confusion before the editor's quizzical eyes.

"Congratulations!" laughed the other as Folsom suddenly turned and fled.

A BLOODLESS VICTORY.

The Creature In the Bed Didn't Attempt to Fight Back.

A young Hindoo tells an amusing story of his first visit to London. His hostess, mindful of the great change in climate to which the traveler had been subjected, wished to make him as comfortable as possible. Accordingly, when she prepared his room for the night, she put into his bed a rubber hot water bottle, a contrivance quite unknown in India.

The young man retired, undressed and got into bed. As he did so his feet encountered a smooth, warm object which he supposed to be some kind of animal. In terror he leaped from the bed and groped about for the light. Unaccustomed to his surroundings, he was a long time in finding it, and at every step he trembled lest the unknown creature should attack him.

At length he found the light and looked about vainly for a weapon. He was on the point of calling for help when he thought of trying the closet. There he found several canes. He selected the stoutest of them and resolved to try conclusions with the intruder.

He approached the foot of the bed, where he was somewhat protected by the footboard, and raised his weapon for a speedy blow, while with his left hand he grasped the bedclothes and began cautiously to turn them down. Then, nerving himself for a final effort, he tore the clothes from the bed and struck viciously at the round black object that he had exposed.

One blow was enough to convince him that the "animal" was lifeless and always had been. His terror gave place to amusement, and after he had his laugh out he went back to bed and enjoyed undisturbed repose until morning.—Youth's Companion.

Housewife's Sets.

Several sets of matching caps and aprons are a positive necessity to the young housekeeper who does her own cooking and answers her own doorbell. The cap looks best when made in Dutch style with wings above the ears, as that sort perfectly protects the most elaborate of coiffures and bears not the faintest resemblance to the conventional housemaid headgear. But, of course, the main thing is to adopt the style of cap which best becomes the individual young housewife.

RINGLING CIRCUS IS ANNOUNCED.

World's Greatest Shows and Spectacle "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba" Now On Way.

Official information confirms the announcement that on June 29 Ringling Brothers' circus will give two performances in Jackson.

Many new features have been added this year, the most notable of which is the spectacle "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba." This colossal production is presented with a cast of 1,250 people, a ballet of 300 dancing girls, 735 horses, 32 camels and a trainload of scenery, costumes and properties on the biggest stage in the world.

Following the spectacle, a circus program of unusual brilliancy will be presented, including an array of foreign and American acts new to the circus world. The menagerie contains 1,003 wild animals, 41 elephants, five giraffes and a "baby zoo." The circus is transported on 89 double length cars. Special arrangements have been made by the railroads to accommodate the crowds that will visit the circus from this city and the surrounding country.

MICHIGAN SHORT SHIP CIRCUIT.

Unusual importance attaches to the formal opening of the Michigan Short Ship Circuit this year. It occurs on the new half mile track at the state fair grounds, Detroit, and also is the inaugural meeting on what promises to be the fastest two-lap track out of doors.

As is pretty generally known the Short Ship Circuit is foremost of the half mile track organizations. There will be fifteen meetings, starting at Detroit on June 15, and then moving in turn to Monroe, Jackson, Port Huron, Saginaw, Toledo, Lima, Rockport Findlay, Jackson, Marshall, Saginaw, Toledo, Charlotte and Kalamazoo.

Featured at the first nine meetings are some $1,000 stakes which have attracted a class of horses which probably will be holding their own on the grand circuit later in the season. Five of these stakes are to be decided at the Detroit opening, which is unlined for five afternoons. In addition there will be two or three late closing $500 events daily, so that the program for the inaugural meeting will be one of the greatest ever given on a half mile track.

The new Detroit track, which is inside of and independent of the mile track, was laid out by one of the leading track engineers of the country, and the lines are unique, the turns being longer and the stretches shorter than in the case of the so-called regulation track. This will enable the horses to keep their stride better in making the turns, so the time of the heats will be very fast.

The outlook is for more and better horses than ever have raced on a small track in Michigan and the Detroit Driving Club, under whose management the meeting is given, will conduct racing on the same plane as that at the time honored Blue Ribbon meeting, which opens six weeks later. The Short Ship Circuit opening on June 15 this year, is an early start, and will find the horses in prime condition and not worked to a frazzle in training.

A Life For a Life.

A well known man was recently saved from death by a mouse. One of these troublesome little pests was nibbling in the room where the man slept. A trap was set. In the night the mouse came, the bait was seized, the trapdoor fell with a crash. The man awoke to find the room full of gas which had escaped from a half turned burner.

The best part of this story (which is true) is that the man said he believed that a life demanded another life. Consequently the mouse was released with only a sprained paw. Let us hope that the incident taught him to beware of traps in the future, no matter how good the cheese smells.

A Trained Pig.

Probably the most original "horse" to be found on any farm is in a Maine town, where Joseph and Annie Cottle have trained a pig to be harnessed into a miniature wagon, and this animal is driven about as readily as a trained dog. A harness has been made that fits the animal, and he has bits the same as a horse.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

The Baccalaureate service at the Presbyterian church was held at 8 o'clock p. m. Sunday. Service opened with organ prelude by Mrs. J. Q. Look, followed by invocation by Rev. F. Hewitt.

Anthem, "In That Day Shall This Song be Sung," by a full choir

Scripture reading—Rev. Pim of the Friends church.

Prayer—Rev. Hartzog, of the Baptist church.

Solo, "The Plains of Peace—John Pennington.

Sermon—Rev. Wm. A. Rex of the Presbyterian church.

Rev. Rex took his text from Deut. 1:19, "Kadesh barnea, The door of Opportunity." He told of the Children of Israel on their march through the wilderness. When they came to Kadesh-barnea they sent their scouts into the land of promise. They returned with glowing reports of the land and the people with their strong armies, and also bare fruits of the country. But when the vote was taken two voted for entering the land to ten against it, thus losing their opportunity for bettering their condition, and they wandered for forty years in the wilderness.

Rev. Rex told the class that they had reached their Kadesh-barnea, that their opportunity for entering the promised land was before them and it remained for them to grasp their opportunity. He lauded the public school, but said it was but the stepping stone to a higher education. That the business world and the professions are seeking men and women, in fact demanding them, who have been educated in the higher schools, and that the better opportunities offered today were to those who have received the schooling of the universities and colleges. He specially urged the class to take up college work, to go further in their education that they may enter their Kadesh-barnea.

Rev Rex impressed upon the class not to neglect the teachings of Christ, that while they were seeking for knowledge of this world it were well to gain a spiritual knowledge.

After the sermon Mrs. Billings, Mrs Fred Dickinson and W. S. Dickinson sang "Father Lead Me by Thy Hand" very sweetly

After singing of the Doxology Rev Hewitt pronounced the benediction.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion and class of 27 led by Supt. Reed were seated near the front of the church.

DAVID O'REILLY.

The death of this good man occurred on Sunday the 31st of May in the same home on the Clinton road, 4 miles east of town, in which he was born, nearly 66 years ago. The burial took place from St. Dominic's church, of which he had been a lifelong, and faithful member, on Wednesday morning. The solemnity of the services, and the large gathering of relatives, and friends, was evidence of the very high esteem in which he was held. As Father Fisher said in the funeral sermon, "He well deserved the respect, love, and reverence that all who knew him, entertained for him. In death in life his name stands for that which is good, and virtuous, and honorable, and noble—for every sterling quality, and manly virtue. Well might his virtues,—his justice, generosity, charity, faith, be an example to us."

A solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Father Lee, assisted by Fathers Griffin, and Fisher, as Deacon and Sub-deacon, with William Pinkstone as Acolyte. The choir was composed of Mrs. Geo Miller, Celia Miller Ida Barber, and Wm. Kramer. Among those in attendance from a distance were; Frank and Wm Riley, Mrs. O'Brien and Philip Riley, from Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm Quigley, of Grass Lake, Mrs. Hannah O'Reilly, Lansing, Miss Julia Wade, Adrian, Mrs. John Downs, New York, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Miller, of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. James McCann, and Mrs. Thos McCann, Tecumseh.

Mr. O'Reilly is survived by one brother, William of Reno, Nevada; his widow Anna and the following children: Katie (Mrs. David McHenney), Margaret, (Mrs Miller), William, Alice, (Mrs. Bert Anglemyer), David, and Ora, who is now Sister Mary Alma, a member of the teaching order of St. Dominic, and at present connected with St. Lawrence Parochial School Chicago. Sister Alma was granted permission to visit her old home, and view the remains of her father, on the day before the funeral.

Good Form

Intrusive People.

From a spirit of idle curiosity there are many who, perhaps unconsciously, intrude without scruple where they are not wanted. To show such by a distant manner that they are intruding might be considered a breach of politeness, so too often they are endured with as much patience as possible.

As an example, in public eating rooms a party has secured a table or two as retired as possible, are entirely interested in themselves, and the affair may be intended to be as private as it can be made under such circumstances. Those who enter and pass the party to reach other tables should, in order to be considered entirely correct in deportment, neither call attention in any way, look too intently nor show any interest whatsoever in the presence of what is evidently an entirely private affair.

Yet how often may it be noted that an opposite course obtains. Newcomers deliberately look, most likely criticise audibly, make no effort to avoid being intrusive, but the contrary. This may be called the epitome of bad manners, impertinence, lack of politeness and also showing an excess of curiosity, in itself the height of ill breeding.

FACILITIES FOR PANAMA TRAFFIC.

To pass a vessel through all the locks it has been estimated will take about three hours. The entire journey of the vessel through the canal is estimated as ranging from 10 to 12 hours, according to the size of the ship and the rate of speed at which it will travel.

Many vessels will pass through the locks at night. The lighting, therefore, of the waterway was an important problem. The canal is lighted from end to end by electricity and gas, the latter being employed in towers and beacons in the less accessible places. The most powerful lights are those marking the sea channels at the Atlantc and Pacific entrances, and these are visible at a distance of from 12 to 18 miles.

The most modern and approved terminal facilities are offered to vessels, including powerful tugs ready at each ocean entrance; adequate buildings for the discharge and taking on of freight, and supply warehouses where ships may purchase at reasonable stated prices, coal, oil, fresh water and food. There will be, moreover, complete telegraph and telephone and mailing facilities. No private or commercial wireless installations will be permitted in the zone. However, the wireless stations under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department will accept private and commercial messages "under such regulations as the President of the United States." —From "Going Through the Panama Canal," in the American Review of Reviews for June.

BROWN & CO., Tecumseh.

THE Paige Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which it has to pay interest—it has no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends.

That enables it to put a full dollar of actual value into the car for every dollar of the selling price.

And this excess of real value creates a demand for Paige cars that cuts selling and advertising expense to the minimum.

And this in turn makes it possible to put still more value into the car.

Doesn't that look like sound reasoning?

Doesn't it make you want to investigate the Paige still further?

And just remember this—It is going to pay you to get your name on an order blank as quickly as possible—The Paige is going to be oversold again this year.

FLORAL RECEPTION

Class of 1914 Entertained by Supt. and Mrs. Reed

FRIDAY EVENING LAST.

Supt. and Mrs. Reed very pleasantly entertained the Class of 1914 at their home on Friday evening. The house was decorated with syringas and peonies, making it a veritable bower of beauty.

Floral games were played at six tables with conundrums with names of flowers for answers, guessing contest, floral leaves. drawing flowers with the left hand and floral puzzles. A spelling match followed, each one spelling the name of a flower backward. Later in the evening light refreshments were served, the ice being in small paper cups with pansies stuck in each cup to carry out the flower scheme.

The evening was a most delightful one though there was a touch of sadness in the thought that so soon their ways would divide and the Class of 1914 be scattered and the ties that have bound them so closely during their school years would be severed as each one took their new places in the world at large.

Despite the coolness of the evening and the various changes in regard to date, there was scarce a member absent from the annual picnic of the Wit and Wisdom club held Friday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. When the croud had all arrived Dr. North president called them to order and liking the company to a sky scraper because of many stories called on a number of the members who each told a short story for the edification of the others. The picnic supper was all that one could desire and more than could be eaten. At the close of the feast, a social visit and a stroll through the beautiful grounds passed the time most pleasantly. Then as the evening shadows began to fall, the company dispersed to their several homes, well pleased with the culmination of the years club work and looking forward with bright anticipations to the time when a new year shall begin with every member to answer present when the roll is called.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only: they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 46 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

MEN TEACHERS ARE BECOMING SCARCER

Percentage Steadily Decreasing According to U. S. Report.

Washington, June 8.—The final volume of the annual report of the United States commission of education for the current year has just been issued. One of the authors of the present volume is Professor George Drayton Strayer, of teachers' college, Columbia university, New York city, an educator well and favorably known in the west because of his institute lectures here and in Ann Arbor at the Schoolmasters' club.

From the statistical tables given, it appears that during the year 1913-14 there were nearly 18,000,000 children in elementary schools, public and private, in the United States; in secondary schools, more than 1,000,000; in universities and colleges, 183,344; in schools of medicine, law and theology, 65,783; in normal schools, 82,288. Of these students, 17,658,943 were in public institutions, while 1,667,348 were receiving instruction in institution under private control.

In the public schools of the United States there were 506,040 teachers employed. Of this number 108,200, or 21 4-10 per cent, were men. It is interesting to note that the percentage of men has steadily decreased during the period for which statistics are available. In 1870 there were 38 7-10 per cent men; in 1890, 34 5-10 per cent were men; in 1900, 29 9-10 per cent were men, as against 21 4-10 per cent of men for the year 1913-14.

Washington, June 8.—A compromise amendment to the tolls repeal bill, drawn by Senator Simmons for the administration forces and Senator Norris for Republican senators, will be offered when the bill comes to a vote in the senate.

The new amendment embodies all of the original Simmons amendment, recommended by the senate interoceanic canal committee, as well as the more emphatic reservation in the amendment proposed by Senator Norris several days ago, as a substitute for the committee amendment. The resolution of Senator Sutherland to arbitrate the tolls exemption question with Great Britain may come up before the vote on the bill.

What Did He Mean?

Dr. Stanley Coulter says the shortest and sweetest introduction he ever had to an audience was by a student at Cornell university. Said this young man concisely, "I do not have to speak many words to introduce Dr. Coulter, for he is too well known already."

"I never could make out just what that student meant," said Dr. Coulter. —Indianapolis News.

CELEBRATES 100TH BIRTHDAY.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Sarah VanTuyle Wastell was celebrated Saturday both at the home and church The day was fine and nothing happened to mar the festivities, Mrs. Wastell received her friends during the day and stood the ordeal wonderfully for one of her age.

At 5 p m, Dr. Tuttle took her to the church where she was the honored guest having been a member of the M. E. church 75 years.

At the guest table were seated Mrs. Wastell, her three sons and their wives, E. W. Freese, Charles Gadd Sr. Mrs. Elizabeth Wastell of Detroit, Rev. and Mrs. Johnson.

The burning of 100 candles around the birthday cake was a pretty sight. The banquet was delicious and the ladies deserve a great deal of credit for the capable manner in which they handled the crowd.

After the banquet Rev. Johnson read a number of congratulatory letters and telegrams from former pastors and friends, also making a few remarks. Miss Alta McCombs sang a solo. Rev. Latham spoke in his usual witty manner and W. D. Van Tuyle, in behalf of the family gave "My Mother" which was fine.

Mrs. L. W. Kimball sang a solo in her graceful way. Thus ended one of the grandest and best days ever held in the history of the church both for Mrs. Wastell and her many friends, Mrs. Wastell received many beautiful flowers, cards and telegrams also a silver teaspoon from Gaston & Son of Tecumseh all of which she greatly appreciated

FOUGHT DEATH IN ANTARCTIC

Escape of Dr. Mawson Little Short of Miraculous.

ALONE, FACED STARVATION.

His Two Companions Had Perished In Icy Wastes—Their Leader's Thirty Days' Dogged Battle For Life One of the Finest Acts of Personal Courage Recorded In Polar Exploration.

Returning from two years and three months of exploration in the antarctic, Dr. Douglas Mawson, the young Australian geologist, tells a thrilling story of heroic endurance in a terrific fight with starvation in the barren ice fields. Two of his party of fifty which left Tasmania Dec. 2, 1911, perished. These men were Lieutenant B. E. S. Ninnis of the Royal Fusiliers and Dr. Xavier Mertz, a Swiss scientist. Forty-four of the expedition returned a year ago.

In December, 1912, these three were returning from a sledge journey along the 2,000 mile stretch of coast between Cape Adare and Gaussburg, the survey of which was the expedition's chief purpose. On Dec. 4 Mawson and Mertz crossed the crevasse of a glacier and shouted a warning to Ninnis, who was behind them. No answer coming, they looked back and were astonished to see no living thing upon the expanse of ice and snow.

They caught sight of an injured dog clinging to a ledge. About it were fragments of something, they could not tell what, but nothing to show that Ninnis had not plunged to the very bottom of the abyss.

Funeral Service Beside Crevasse.

For many hours the two called at intervals, but no answer came except the moaning of the dog. After awhile even these interludes in the eerie stillness ceased, and hope that Ninnis was alive or that if he were assistance could be rendered him was given up. The rope available fell far short of reaching the ledge, 150 feet below, on which the dog lay. Finally the burial service was read at the brink of the crevasse, and Mawson and Mertz resumed their journey.

The sledge that remained to them after this disaster bore "man food" for only one and one-half weeks.

Owing to the bad weather and the necessary reduction in rations, the dogs failed rapidly, and by the first of January none of them remained. The explorers were then still 100 miles from the hut; Mertz was breaking under the strain. Unable to proceed further on foot he was placed on the sledge. On Jan. 8 Mertz died.

Left Alone, Mawson Suffered Tortures.

Mawson himself was in such a condition then that little but his will kept him alive. Several times as he attempted to cross crevasses he fell in to the length of the rope that bound him to his sledge. Only by the greatest effort was he able to drag himself out again, and as the days went by his nails dropped off, his hair fell out and great patches of skin sloughed off under the wind, edged with bitter cold.

Reduced, literally, to the last stages of starvation, Mawson staggered on across the waste. Finally he saw in the snow a bit of something that fixed even his wavering glance. He made his way to it, found that it was food that must have been dropped by the searching party sent out for him, and with its spiritual, rather than physical comfort, set out on what proved to be the last stage of his endeavor.

The supply hut was but twenty miles distant, as it proved, but the lashing wind and drifting snow made it impossible for Mawson to go more than two miles. He returned to the spot where he found the trace of the searching party. When it finally picked him up he had been utterly alone in that wilderness for thirty days.

A RUSSIAN MARRIAGE

Involving a Local Custom of Proposal

By F. A. MITCHEL

Alexis Plekanoff, a young Russian of intellectual tastes, gave himself up so completely to study that his health was impaired. His physician advised him to live in the country for awhile, and the young man, not willing to be idle, bought a farm, intending to till the soil.

Alexis' farm had on it a dwelling house and other necessary buildings. He hired servants besides farm hands, for he was well to do and was soon devoting himself to raising produce with as much interest as he had previously shown in books. Nor did he, because he was city bred, keep aloof from his neighbors, but joined in their amusements, received them at his home and visited them familiarly.

Soon after he was settled in his new home the people of the place where he had located assembled for a festival, which he attended. The exercises consisted principally of athletic sports—running, jumping and especially riding. The Russians are fine horsemen, and some of the feats performed at this festival were worthy of an American circus. There was also a dance in a barn.

Alexis was recognized among the country people for something better than themselves and was treated with great deference. One of the men approached him at the dance and said:

"If your excellency would like to dance I will introduce you to a girl whose parents, like yourself, came long ago from the city, though the young lady herself was born in her present home."

"I would be glad to be introduced to any of your girls," replied Alexis, "and do not doubt that any would make a partner not only worthy of me, but would honor me by dancing with me."

So the young man was introduced to Vera Trolensko. She was a girl, of nineteen years, with a perfect figure and a comely face. But what charmed him was a certain demeanor there was about her, a mingling of dignity and modesty. It was plain that she had come of different stock from the other girls of that region. Yet there was nothing haughty about her. She seemed to be friendly and companionable with them, though they appeared to recognize her superiority.

STOOD WITH HER EYES BENT UPON THE FLOOR.

Alexis asked Vera to dance, and she graciously accepted the invitation. She danced with a grace that made Alexis think her ancestors for generations had danced at the court balls at the imperial palace. Though she did not seem out of place here, she would not have been out of place there. Alexis danced with her several times during the evening. He would have danced with the other girls, but, whether or not the managers of the affair did not consider any of the others worthy to be his partners, they did not introduce him.

While Vera Trolensko showed that breeding she could not conceal even if she would, she was a part of the community in which she lived. Her parents were past middle life when she was born. No one knew why they had come to that country, for they never gave any reason for leaving the city. That there was some misfortune attached to their coming was evident from the fact that they were very despondent. They had never mingled with their neighbors, but their little girl, who had no previous life behind her, fell in naturally with those about her.

One day when Alexis went to his house for his noon meal he met with a great surprise. Who should be there but Vera Trolensko! She came forward to meet him with blushes and downcast eyes, the very picture of maidenly modesty. Alexis looked about, expecting to see her father or mother or some one else without whom he considered it improper for her to be there. Alexis' housekeeper, Maria Sasulitch, was looking on, vainly trying to attract his attention. Finally he turned toward her for an explanation of this singular proceeding, and she beckoned him to follow her. Alexis, after asking Vera to excuse him, did so. As soon as he was alone with the housekeeper she said to him:

"There is a custom of this country of which you are not aware, your excellency. Here it is the woman who proposes marriage to the man, not the man to the woman. When a woman wishes to marry a man she goes to his house and remains there till he marries her. If he refuses he insults her family, and if she has male protectors they punish the insult she and they are deemed to have received. In any event, the man who refuses the woman is scorned by the community."

"Vera has paid you the compliment of proposing marriage to you. If you refuse her she cannot be avenged by her father, for he is too old, and she has no brothers. But her father would not resent the insult even if he were young and strong enough to do so. He has never adopted our customs and is doubtless much displeased that his daughter should have adopted this one, so foreign to what he was formerly accustomed. But Vera is very dear to us, and should you refuse her all who know her would turn away from you, treating you as one who had insulted a woman they love and revere. It seems to me, your excellency, that you have a choice between two actions—either to accept the offer made you or go away from here."

It was some time before Alexis made any reply to this explanation. He was suddenly thrown under the influence of conflicting emotions. Following a custom which had been practiced by all her associates, there was certainly nothing immodest in Vera's action. She was a beautiful girl and beloved by all. Nothing would be more pleasing to him than to make her his wife. But, on the other hand, he had come to her country to remain only a few years, when he had expected to return to St. Petersburg. His father had brought him up with the understanding that he (the father) would select a wife for him, and Alexis believed that should he marry a woman who had been brought up among peasants and without his father's consent he would be disinherited.

What should he do? The girl who had proposed to him was waiting for his reception of her proposal. It seemed to him that since she had come there in accordance with the custom of the country he must either accept her proposition or turn her out. Of all considerations bearing on the case this ejection was the hardest for him to think of.

Alexis spent an hour alone turning the matter over in his mind. Then he resolved that he would go to Vera and explain to her that he had been brought up to understand that his father was to select his wife for him and he considered it his duty as a good son to abide by his father's decision. He went to the room where Vera was waiting for him. As soon as he entered she turned from him and stood with her eyes bent upon the floor.

"Vera," he commenced, "Maria has informed me of what I was ignorant, the meaning of your coming here. Your customs of this country are not our customs in the city. I have been brought up to recognize my father's right to select a wife for me, and I consider it my duty as a good son to abide by it, but"—

She bent lower and lower as he drew nearer what she knew was coming till now she was like a plant bent by the wind. Approaching her, putting an arm about her and taking her hand in his, he finished:

"Vera, I love you."

The nuptials were celebrated the same evening, all the people turning out to do the bride honor.

Alexis wrote his father, a prominent statesman, that he had married the daughter of one Trolensko, who had come from Moscow and had lived for twenty years apart from the world of which he had formerly been a part. No reply came for some time; then one morning a sleigh drove up to Alexis' house, and his father alighted. Alexis was reassured when his father took him in his arms and kissed him. He also embraced Vera and said to her, "Come; let us go to your good father, who was my intimate associate in former years when we were both young."

Vera, delighted at the turn the matter had taken, put on her furs and, with her husband, got into the sleigh. Her eyes were moist when the two friends met. But she was to meet a much greater surprise.

"Count," said the visitor, "on hearing of my son's marriage with your daughter I made another and a much more important effort to induce the czar to grant you a pardon and permit you to return to that life in which you were once a shining light."

Drawing a parchment, he handed it to Trolensko.

"What does this mean?" asked Alexis eagerly.

"It means," said his father, "that my old friend Count Nicholas Trolensko became unwittingly involved in a political conspiracy against the present czar's father. Had the charge been proved against him he would have been sent to Siberia. As it was merely a case of suspicion, he was banished to this place. He is now restored to his title and estates."

The Plekanoffs and the Trolenskos after that lived in the winter in St. Petersburg, where the young countess was much admired in the social life of the capital. In summer they returned to the country, where Vera renewed her life with the people whom she loved and who loved her.

PALMER IS DECLARED OUT

But Grand Rapids Postmaster Continues to Occupy Private Office.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 8.—Charles Holden, local representative of the National Surety company, the concern which has underwritten Postmaster W. Millard Palmer's bonds, is acting postmaster, according to Postoffice Inspector James E. Stewart. But W. Millard Palmer sits calmly in the postmaster's private office and still is signing himself "postmaster."

General Stewart, who is in charge of the big flock of inspectors sent here to oust the postmaster, says that Mr. Palmer's incumbency ceased at 5 p. m., Friday, and that Mr. Holden representing his bondsmen, succeeded him. Mr. Palmer has the keys and the postoffice is honoring his orders just the same.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

OF THE CLASS OF 1914, AT THE OPERA HOUSE, LAST EVENING

A Class of Twenty-seven Graduates.

The commencement exercises of the Tecumseh high school were held Thursday evening in the opera house which was well filled for the occasion The decorations were unusually beautiful, the class colors of yellow and blue and the profusion of leaves and flowers making the stage a veritable bower of beauty, a fitting setting for the sweet girl graduates and their manly companions. The class motto, "Into the Midst of Things," was arranged on a trellis across the stage in the colors of the class.

The following program was given in full and each one was at their best so it would be impossible to discriminate:

Invocation—Rev. Hartzog.
Music—Girls' Glee Club.
Salutatory—Ruth Curry.
Class History—Veva Hardcastle.
Piano Solo—Hessie Orr.
Class Novel—Mabel Skinner.
Music—Ladies Quartette, Mrs. Ella Hodges, Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans, Mrs. Richard Meade, Miss Martha Caldwell.
Class Prophesy—Ina Binns.
Giftatory—Mildred Drake.
Music—Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans.
Valedictory—Seymour Orr.
Class Song, written by L. Smith Schneider.
Presentation of Diplomas—Supt Reed,
Benediction—Rev. Hartzog.

Subt. Reed in a brief address carried out the thought of the sermon to the class Sunday evening. He said, education better fits one for life's work, it will not make lighter one's chosen work but aid us to better do it.

To those who cannot take up the higher education he said that they, themselves, would work out their destinies, that what they became in life depended upon their effort as well as what they knew. After a brief talk he gave the class of eighteen young ladies and nine young men their diplomas

Salutatory

By Ruth M. Curry.

It is always a delight to entertain one's friends and so it is with pleasure that the Class of 1914 greets you tonight. We appreciate the interest in us you have shown by coming here and we hope you will feel repaid for your efforts.

I have the honor of voicing the welcome that each of the 27 members of the class extends to you and I feel that my particular charge is one that I gladly undertake

If I were a Grecian girl instead of an American, I would salute you by saying 'Be joyful." The Syrians used the simple greeting of "Peace" The common Roman salutation at meeting was "Salue" meaning "Be in good health" and at parting "Vale" meaning 'Be well." Bowing, as a salute of reverence, appears in its extreme in the Orient where it is the custom to be prostrated to the ground before one superiors.

Giving the right hand of fellowship as spoken of in the Bible, passed naturally into a salutation throughout Christendom. This form of greeting which we call shaking hands became common in the Middle Ages and has now spread over the entire civilized world

If I was an inhabitant of one of the uncivilized countries, I would greet you by weeping as that is the custom among primitive people They seem to think that unless a person is wept over a certain length of time, he is not properly saluted in some of these remote countries.

The salutation which seems very ludicrous consists of pinching. But perhaps this is not so uncommon in the United States, at least among the younger generation.

A very strange custom is that of the people of Karague. They, when meeting their friends, hold out a long stick to them. The friend touches the end of it and they exchange a few words of greeting. Another very curious salutation is found among the New Zealanders. When two people meet who haven't seen each other for some time, they consider it a necessary point of etiquette to go through a ceremony called "The Tangi." They envelope themselves in their mats, covering even their faces except one eye, squat on the ground opposite each other and begin to weep. They seem to have tears at their command and it is said they never fail to go through the whole ceremony as often as etiquette demands it.

It would be impossible for me to salute you in any of these strange and unfamiliar ways and, on account of the size of the audience, it would be impractical to greet you by the simple custom of shaking hands. So, as I am an American girl, and obliged to greet you merely by sincere and hearty words, I will say to you all once again, "Welcome."

History

By Veva Hardcastle

Dear friends:—

One of the greatest periods of progress ever recorded in the History of Tecumseh Public schools occurred while the class on the platform excelling in literary work, athletic sports and artistic genus were in school.

It is a pleasure to have the privilege of relating to you some of the brave deeds of these brave heroes and heroines. While searching through some ancient records, my eye fell upon a diary. Thinking that perhaps you my friends might be interested in some of the incidents, I will relate parts of it:

September 2, 1902, a roomfull of bright little girls and boys in starched dresses and starched suits faced the teacher. Some were slyly sliding way down in their seats, a few were wiggling and twisting as if it were impossible to sit still, while others appeared anxious to tell they could say "A. B. C." The teacher trying to take the enrollment walked up to a little tot in a clean blue suit and said "My little boy what is your name?" The little fellow putting his hand in his pocket finally said, "'Oo-ie 'Neider, I 'ith 'ixth 'ear old."

November 4, 1903. "Which would you rather have, a twenty-five cent piece or ten pennies Ruth Hastings?" asked the teacher. Ruth, "Ten pennies." "Yes, but you would not have near so much money." "I'd have a lot more fun putting them in my bank."

September 3, 1907. We are now in that awkward period between eleven and fourteen, usually toothless, decked out in immense bows as to our heads and as to our feet we showed the greatest development, with a decided propensity to trip and fall on everything in sight.

Harold Halladay has already showed inclinations to develop longitudinally, while Ada Croll latitudinally.

September 4, 1908. Just think we are at the Union School building this morning! a goal at last! Another round of the ladder when sacred portals of the Union are opening to our lumbering tread. "I'll just bet that those Seniors below could not count as fast as I could," was heard from Kenneth Lowry as he stood sizing up the Senior class of 1909

April 5, 1909. It was during this year at the class made such progress. They even took up charity work with Mable Skinner and Fern Nobles as leaders and presented the results of their kindness to their teacher for a new skirt with a provision that the new one should not be green.

April 6, 1909. This morning found each pupil standing up in front before the bar of justice, evidently their charity work was not appreciated. Then each one declared war on Miss Jessie Matilda Ball Allen.

September 5, 1909. This year found our ranks enlarged with a number of recruits from the surrounding country. Each one tried to obey the commands of Miss Wimple to the best of his or her ability. It was during this year the great poets of the class received their inspirations and the accurate mathmaticians started upon their famous careers

September 6, 1910. Again our ranks were reenforced until now there were forty-four pair of bright eyes scanning Miss Sarah Phillips as she stood waiting for the last dong of the school bell to cease ringing. Now we are really Freshmen in the High School and like all Freshmen thought we ruled everyone and owned everything. It was now that there was a great demand of the hatter in town for the largest sized hats. History does not record that Karl Schneider found one large enough.

September 29, 1910. O, the importance of the occasion, our first class election! It was now that we banded ourselves together and chose Seymour Orr as our leader, we also chose our class colors, light blue and yellow.

October 1, 1910. Now came the strife and struggle to outdo those haughty Sophomores! Oh, the glory! The thrill of battle, that we realized after sitting nearly all night, we succeeded in hoisting our flag upon the old school house. It waved there through three whole days and nights. How elated we were! And even the other classes could not help but admit it was a pretty flag.

Somehow we struggled on through the 8th grade.

September 7, 1911. We again took up our books and were known as Sophomores, Sophomores! Our President, having led us through our Freshmen trials successfully, we chose him for another year, but we changed our colors to pink and green.

October 20, 1911. We were honored by furnishing Louis Schneider as a High School Foot ball captain.

November 14, 1911. Thinking that we were quite sly by this time we surprised our teacher Miss Lulu Lowe on her——oh, well, her birthday anyway at the home of Harold Kay.

Feb. 3, 1912. Ivalene Lamkin was heard to say, "If it wasn't for this Ceasar lesson, my mind would be free from worry." Geraldine Orr replied, "Well, here too."

Sept. 3, 1912. This time we assembled in Miss Harris' room. A few were added to our ranks which had thinned quite rapidly in the past two years. Again we changed our colors back to the royal blue and yellow, thinking they would please Hessie Orr better.

November 11, 1912. The rest of time was mostly taken up with our studies and the schemes we were planning to play on the dignified Seniors, for although we were very devoted to the Muses, a little nonsence now and then is relished by the wisest of men.

May 9, 1913. As a token of regard for the Seniors we gave them a reception at the Odd Fellows Hall.

May 23, 1913. The Seniors in return entertained us royally at a breakfast at the home of Geneva Satterthwaite.

June 10, 1913 Our good behavior did not last long for our class day we gave our yells and hurled our class colors out of the school house windows over the nervous Seniors as they were trying to entertain the crowd of people

June 12, 1913 We left the poor children in peace on Commencement night, for we felt a tinge of sadness to have them leave us and all the teachers too.

September 4, 1913 Twenty-seven of us gathered in room 12 and bravely took the name "Seniors". As the Immortal William said, "Consistency thou art a jewel," and we with the same characteristic retained our former president and colors

January 9, 1914. Our class being noted for its kindness to dumb animals, twenty-five of us and three teachers climbed into one sleigh and went to the home of Ina Binns of Holloway. We had a fine time. Especially enjoyed walking up the hills! One of the strangest things Mr. Cork like the nature of his name kept bobbing up and down always seeming to be on top of the heap.

February 3, 1914. Fred Hendershot enrole of modern Diogenes brought a lantern and placed it up in front at 2:30, for we sure needed more light on mathematics.

May 8, 1914. We were entertained at the Methodist church parlors among shaded lights, a profusion of green and blossoms, festoons of class colors and an unprecedent flow of wit and good humor from the Juniors.

May 12, 1914. Fay Satterthwaite and Estella Pocklington were seen looking rather significantly at each other. Soon they had disappeared from the school house. We thot their curiosty to see the floods was perhaps great. Hope Miss Halladay did not see them.

May 15, 1914. We modestly refrain from tooting our own horn but we gave the Juniors a lawn party at the home of Seymour Orr.

May 18, 1914 We have the honor of holding the silver cup until next year.

May 28, 1914 The Seniors took their joy ride and proclaimed! "Rah! Rah! Skip! Skip!

May 31, 1914. Mr. Reed having failed to assined enough to keep one of the girls busy she passed her time away thinking of her class. These are the results.

The approvimate of the 27 is 3,535. The average weight being 130 lbs. 15 oz. We have all studied Mathematics, English and History in common. Nine thro brown eyes, nine thro blue, five thro grey, two thro hazel and two thro green eyes.

The most popular man of the class—Seymour Orr,
The man who did the most for Tecumseh—Karl Schneider,
The brightest girl—Ruth Curry,
The biggest bluff—Louis Schneider,
The class fusser—Lulu Palmer,
The most dignified girl—Sarah Linton,
The man hater—Martha Keyser.
The largest man—Harold Halladay,
The most industrious—Fred Hendershott,
The most "win-some"—Winnifred Hall,
The most unlucky one—Elmer Green,
The Social Lioness—Ruth McKenney,
The sweetest girl—Nina Lowry.

June 5, 1914. We were royally entertained at the home of Supt. W. L. Reed and wife and oh! how we had to puzzle our minds for the names of flowers.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there by destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One hundred Dollers for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testamonials. Address: F. J. WANTS FARMERS TRAINED

Sullivan of Illinois Would Have State Hire Experts.

OLNEY, ILL. — Roger C. Sullivan, in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, put out a new idea. It was a theory for helping the farmers of the statei n a way that has not been suggested heretofore. "What I would like to see," he said to an audience at Bridgeport, in Lawrence county, "is the establishment of expert supervision of farming throughout the country, and particularly in Illinois.

"I would have appointed and paid by the state a supervisor of agriculture for each county. He would have to be a graduate farmer, one who has learned the science of farming. It would be his duty to advise the farmers on the treatment of soil, on the kind and variety of crops that pay best, and on the whole business of scientific farming. The state could not make a better investment of its money than to pay it out for such expert advice."

INDICTED AS PLUMBING TRUST

Leaders in Masters' Association Accused by U. S.

DES MOINES, IA. — Indictments were returned by the federal grand jury against thirty-six officials and members of the National Association of Master Plumbers and officials of state organizations in Illinois, Nebraska and Iowa. The indictments charge conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti trust law.

It is specifically alleged that the National Association of Master Plumbers has been operating in violation of law ever since its organization in 1884 and that it has continually conspired to interfere with the business of plumbers and plumbing supply houses

SPOILS IN REDFIELD PLAN

National Civil Service Reform League Opposes Trade Fostering Scheme.

NEW YORK. — Secretary Redfield's plan, embodied in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill to appoint, without civil service examination, fourteen commercial attaches to foster foreign trade has aroused the bitter opposition of the National Civil Service Reform league.

Richard Henry Dana, president of the league, said that all friends of civil service are opposed to this plan.

DETROIT. — Miss Rose Wolf of 815 South Halsted street, Chicago, claiming to be twenty-three years old, and whose mother says she is only seventeen, left Chicago for Detroit with the firm intention of marrying Ernest Placey, a motorman in this city. Miss Wolf was met at the Union depot by detectives and spent the night at the detention home.

"I'll marry Ernest yet. You can never force me to marry that Chicago tailor," said the girl to her mother. The girl left a note for Placey telling him that she still loved him and would marry him.

We are going to leave you all to-morrow night. Classmates, Teachers and old T. H. S. It is with a tinge of sadness that we do it, but we think it best to follow our motto: "Into the Midst of Things."

Prophecy

By INA MAY BINNS

Listen, while in simple language,
With a feeble, faltering tongue,
I the book of fates would open;
Sing as prophets oft have sung.

I would ope' the mystic volume
Filled with quaint prophetic lore:
And would tell to you, my classmates,
What the future has in store.

In uttering words of prophetic import concerning the future of my classmates, I see first the glorious career of our president, Seymour Orr now president of our great nation, governing the 100,000,000 peoples of the United States. He is the same quiet reserved fellow as of old, holding the rod of the empire firmly, ruling with strict authority. It would be needless to say Nina is with him.

At the capital building we see Fred Hendershot now Secretary of State still looking as wise and non-committal as ever. From gay, busy Washington we go to bleak Montana. There we find Ruth Curry now mistress of a prosperous ranch where Comfort is seen on all sides. On the adjoining ranch we see another member of our class, Hessie Orr. We must say in passing the comforting sight just discribed, it is very agreeable to see this Corking one

Across the continent in New York City is Harold Kay, making a howling success in Grand Opera—hence the howling.

"In the Blue Ridge Mts. of Virginia" I see a large girls seminary where inmates are cherished and guarded by three of our most industrious students Veva Hardcastle, Sarah Linton, and Martha Keysor "In single blessedness they lived and in the same did die."

Another 1914 tenian offers the chief drawing card to the performance of Ringling Brothers Circus, Louis Schneider, now known as Barney Darling Schneider, does some traplese stunts in his six-cylinder Buick?, hitting only the high points. Mildred Drake the best all around student in the class is making school teaching her life work. How she does impress the young ideas.

We see Lulu Parmer as proprietress of Schneiders Best Catsup manufacturing establishment. Estella Pocklington is employed as her private secretary. Her chief duty is answering communications of masculine origin.

For a reason which we dare not mention we next see Karl Schneiders future. He travels with Lewis as the child wonder of the World 16 years old, weighing 445 pounds. After he is released from his contract, manager McGraw, of the New York, Giants has a position for him.

Elmer Green will go through life making a great income—at two o'clock in the morning. Ada Croll is an ardent sufferagette. The fact that the women vote in Boston is due to her "big" influence. Winnifred Hall is charitably inclined. Now she is collecting funds for the erection of the new "Old Bachelors Home" soon to be built in Tecumseh. Fay Satterthwaite is making great success as a poet. He gets his inspiration from lonely walks and in out of way places, haunting the vicinity of the cemetery.

Harold Halladay will also be a great poet for isn't he a regular Longfellow? Our two Ruths, Ruth McKinney and Ruth Hastings are now touring the country doing a refined vaudeville stunt in the role of the feminine "Mut and Jeff" The popular young lady, Geraldine Orr, is famous for having invented three new dances, namely: Toe tangle twist, sit down shuffle and flying fish flop.

All the world is exclaiming over the best sellers, Mabel Skinner is producing each year, but Mabel seems never to care; when she is not in a literary frame of mind you will find her presiding over a fashionable French hair-dressing department, where she is known as Madame Madamoselle Pete Skina. Kenneth Lowry has just been appointed by President Orr as embassador to Alaska, where, as you know, lots of hot air is needed.

Ivalene Lamkin has chosen a striking profession. She is a well known pianist and will accompany Schuman Heink on her 14 last farewell tour, and last but by no means least is Fern Nobles who is proprietress of an asylum for orphan, homeless doggies and forlorn pussies. To the proptiestress her future was a sealed book. She consulted another lady of prophetic powers, Miss Halladay, concerning her own career. This dignitary predicted many years full of glorious and happy occasions.

Invitations from Seymour to the White House; guest of honor at receptions and dinners given by the first lady of the land; many comforting messages from Montana; passes to Ringling Brothers Circus from Louis; Christmas gifts in the shape of blind kitties and three legged tailless doggies from Fern; tables always bearing Schneiders Best Catsup; poems dedicated to her by Longfellow Halladay, and Fay Satterthwaite; immoralized as being the heroine in Mabel's masterpiece, the ideal of truthfulness held up to other young people by the Misses Hardcastle, Linton and Keysor.

And now, friends here, it is my wish that your future may be as full of joy and happiness as those just predicted for my class-mates.

Valedictory

By Seymour Orr.

Classmates and friends:

It has long been the custom to conclude commencement exercises with a valedictory. We are not breaking away from this ancient custom. We have introduced no innovation tonight.

Its Latin composition tells us that valedictory means to say farewell and therefore I do not believe that a valedictory should be an essay, oration nor yet a discourse upon any current topic.

The old commencement program with its stereotyped discourses has long been the subject of many a joke and cartoon. Who is not familiar with the drawings in the various papers and magazines, of the young graduate, disiating learnedly upon subjects that men of genius and experience are unable to solve

I believe that the day of the old cut and dried commencement has passed, that the regular routine of exercises will go. Precedent counts for little. We are encouraged in our class rooms to think for ourselves, teachers wish us to develop originality in expressing our ideas.

Hence it is my belief that the valedictory should be neither essay, oration or solemn dirge, no curious mixture of sighs and tears and insincere regrets, but hopeful, optimistic and sincere.

I shall not say that we are sorry to leave school. Every member of this class regrets that the years of common interest in school duties and pleasures are over. But despite a natural regret there is a genuine feeling of relief and pleasure to know that our examinations are over and we have finished, at least our high school education. Carlyle says that "One of life's chief joys is achieving." Our diplomas are the formal acknowledgement of the achievements of four high school years. Graduation means the realization of the ambition of every high school student. So to-night we can be glad for both the realization and the achievement.

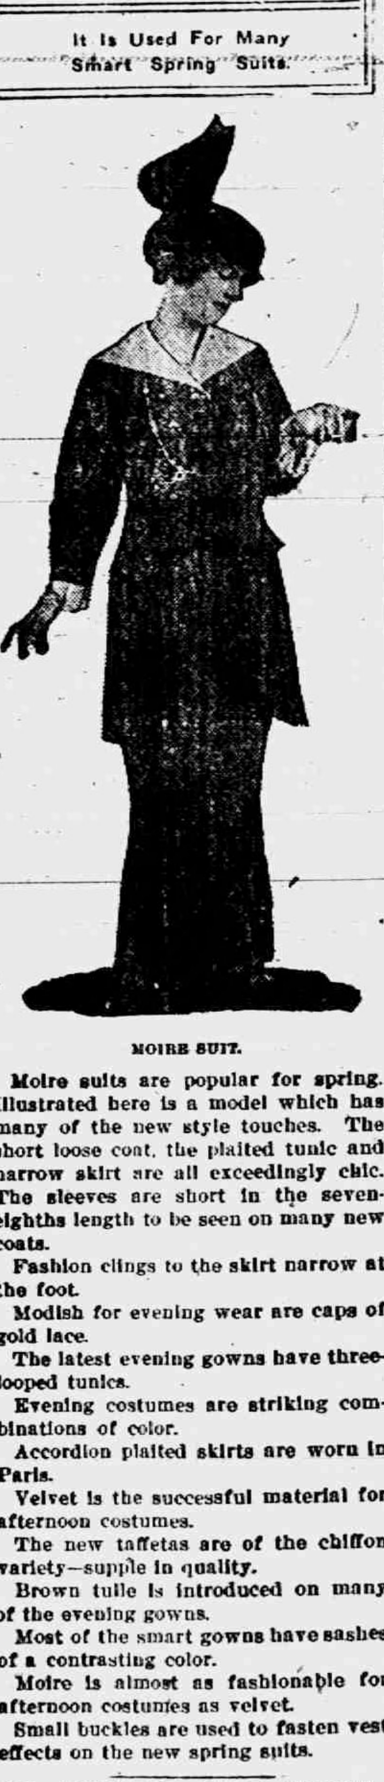
To our patient and deserving teachers we offer our sympathy and gratitude and our sincere thanks to Mr. Reed

It is my hope that this may be only the commencement of a higher education and that we may all have the advantage of a university training.

I know that we are a capable class and that we shall contribute our share of the world's famous men and women, and if we cannot all be famous in the eyes of the world, we may at least be men famous for honor and women famous for virtue.

CONCERNING MOIRE.

It Is Used For Many Smart Spring Suits.



MOIRE SUIT.

Moire suits are popular for spring. Illustrated here is a model which has many of the new style touches. The short loose coat, the plaited tunic and narrow skirt are all exceedingly chic. The sleeves are short in the seven-eighths length to be seen on many new coats.

Fashion clings to the skirt narrow at the foot.

Modish for evening wear are caps of gold lace.

The latest evening gowns have three-looped tunics.

Evening costumes are striking combinations of color.

Accordion plaited skirts are worn in Paris.

Velvet is the successful material for afternoon costumes.

The new taffetas are of the chiffon variety—supple in quality.

Brown tulle is introduced on many of the evening gowns.

Most of the smart gowns have sashes of a contrasting color.

Moire is almost as fashionable for afternoon costumes as velvet.

Small buckles are used to fasten vest effects on the new spring suits.

AN AGITATED EAST INDIAN.

He Does Not Want the Englishwomen in His Country Spoiled.

The following quaint letter from Ramchaudu Kashinath Dattarya to the Times of India (Bombay) speaks out loud for itself:

"My purpos for writin on you this is to enform your many English Brothers not to give honor and devotion to your ladys becaus they will in the end becum proud and then they will want vote. 2 or 3 thing happen at Victory Garden tomorrow (yesterday) and I all of a sudden made up my brain to write you immediate. There was many English womans and when mans are sitting on the bench, and womans come, man stand, and give their sit to woman. This happen 2 or 3 times tomorrow (yesterday) and I question you why? I again tell you why? Mans and womans are similar in this world and then why mens honors womans? If they honors old old woman, one thing, but they honors young lady.

"My purpos to write this to enform the English Sahib Loks (Englishmen) that when they do this they spoil their feminine lady and then this lady get proud and walk like pcock and then ask vote, and then spoil Ken Garden and throw bomb on Loid Gorg, put bursting powder in envelope and post, and create other mischief. Therefore I say to my Englis, please don't spoil Englis womans in India because by bonoring them you people put in their brains the sids (seeds) of Sufragtism and then they will get wild like Misses Pancurs. Please please print this letter near the Ruter's Telegram with big big words."

Battle Between Trees.

I remember a cedar and maple growing as close together as if they sprang from the same root. Some thirty-five or six years ago they were about twenty feet in height and the maple was probably about the same number of years old; the cedar twice as much. The maple is now twice that height, and its desperate efforts to straighten killed the cedar (round which it takes a complete turn) and flattened itself grotesquely.—From "A Farmer's Note Book," by C. E. D. Phelps.

Oriental Favors.

A few of the really useful favors which may be provided for a small party are well worth considering.

For the girls there are the daintiest possible cardcases of pasteboard covered with pale toned Japanese crape and decorated with a hand painted flower design that cost very little, whether made at home or made to order.

Then there are the workbags in Bulgarian colors that can be made of the blue and red wide ribbons which have recently gone out of fashion for sashes and girdles, but which are the prettiest materials imaginable for "fancy" things.

Any girl will gladly welcome a favor in the shape of a narrow stemmed, tall Chinese vase in blue and white or blue, red, green and black, for it makes an ideal receptacle for hatpins when not needed for the single fresh flower which should be on every daintily equipped dressing table.

It is also a good idea to give single teacups and saucers in oriental ware, because nearly every girl is now collecting a harlequin set.

A Doll Party.

A little girl who dearly loved her doll conceived the happy idea of giving dolly a birthday party. No sooner thought of than the little girl and her mother put the thought into execution, with the result that seven girlies received invitations to bring their favorite dolls to the birthday party.

The hours were from 3 to 5, and it was indeed a pretty sight when the dolls and their mothers assembled around the daintily decorated table. Doll dishes were used, and the small table was set entirely with miniature articles, and the gifts brought the birthday doll were most fascinating, for everything that grown people have is now made for dolls.

There were wee cakes with tiny pink tapers, which were lit, and the little mothers were just as grownup as possible and looked after their respective children with true motherly solicitude. At a large table the real children had their repast, and some of them ate the dolls' portions also.

Let Evil End With You.

Let evil end with you. Do not pass on the scandal, the doubt, the injustice, the abuse you have received. Moral garbage, thus consumed, shall lighten your neighborhood, instead of cumbering and defiling it.—From "A Farmer's Notebook," by C. E. D. Phelps.

THE Paige Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which it has to pay interest—it has no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends.

That enables it to put a full dollar of actual value into the car for every dollar of the selling price.

And this excess of real value creates a demand for Paige cars that cuts selling and advertising expense to the minimum.

And this in turn makes it possible to put still more value into the car.

Doesn't that look like sound reasoning?

Doesn't it make you want to investigate the Paige still further?

And just remember this—It is going to pay you to get your name on an order blank as quickly as possible—The Paige is going to be oversold again this year.

A VISIT TO THE LABOUNTY'S.

In our newspapers and magazines we are seeing pictures of the housewife dressed in her good clothes, sitting in an easy chair reading, while near her is the washing machine busily engaged in turning out the weekly wash. It is not only the washing that is made easy these days, but about most every line of labor, man's invention is cutting down the cost of production and making labor easier.

A short time ago we witnessed a tractor dragging five plows behind it, and turning up the soil much better than it could be done by the old way and more than five times as fast.

Wednesday afternoon it was our good fortune to visit the farm of Wm. LaBounty to see their new milking machine in operation, Mr. LaBounty at time this is milking thirty-one cows. Before he installed the milking machine it took five men from two and a half to three hours to do the milking, Now the same milking can be done in one hours time with only two men.

Mr. LaBounty's barns are as sanitary as it is possible to make them, One milking machine is attached to two cows. The air pressure comes through pipes which extend across the barn in front of the stanchions, and rubber hose attached, connecting the air pipe with the milker. The milk flows in a steady stream into a covered aluminum pail divided so that each cows milk is kept seperate, thus making the process of milking absolutely sanitary as no dust or dirt can possibly get into the pail. A gasoline engine furnishes power for the pump which keeps the air tank filled with the fifteen pound pressure, the amount necessary for the milking.

From the barns we were taken to the milk house and saw the milk being turned into the cooler from which it runs into cans and then carried to the bottling machine where five bottles are filled at one time. Everything is being taken care of by Mr. LaBounty in the most sanitary way. The dirty bottles as they come in are put through the washing machine, are sterilized and made ready for the next morning's milk. We see no reason why Mr. LaBounty could not furnish certified milk. Tecumseh is surely favored by having good sanitary milk brought to the doors of the people twice a day and we congratulate Mr LaBounty on the success that he is making in this business.

The milking system used is the D. K. L. and is manufactured by the D. H. Burrell & Co. of Little Falls, N. Y. The cost of installing this system is about $400 and was installed by the firm of C. A. Slayton & Son. We are wondering when the farmer will sit in his home, press the button and the work will go on.

Mrs. McConnell of Clinton was a Tecumseh visitor today.

Wade Frost of Carson City came Thursday for the Alumni and commencement.

Mrs. Joseph Emery is up from Britton where she is visiting relatives for a few days visit at the home of Mrs. Ann McClure and others.

CHANGED HIS SHAPE.

Effect of Open Air Life Upon the Man of Business of Today.

"The American man, the American business man of forty or forty-five, has got a new shape," said a tailor. "He's got a lean, straight shape—full chest, narrow hips. But if you could have seen him a generation ago!

"The business man of forty expected to be fat and soft a generation ago. He rather admired, in fact, a fat, soft shape. The richest business men were fat and soft, and that made a fashion of it, just as Queen Alexandra's lameness made a limp fashionable in Victorian times.

"What stomachs our fathers had at forty or forty-five—feather bed stomachs, which they balanced by bending backward! A big stomach was a sign of success, a sign of gentility. If you were lean—why, you must be a laborer. Perhaps you didn't get enough to eat.

"What is the cause of the slender, agile figures of today? Open air and exercise, that's the cause. Golf is the cause. Motoring is the cause.

"My friend," the tailor impressively ended, "my books show that the middle aged business man of today is four inches bigger around the chest than the middle aged business man of 1800 and eighteen inches smaller around the stomach."—New York Tribune.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only: they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 8 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

It is hard to laugh at misfortune after you have run into a rocking chair in the dark.

Get Rid of the Torment of Rheumatism:

Remember how spry and active you were before you had rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles? Want to feel that way again? You can—just take Foley Kidney Pills. For they quickly clear the blood of poisons that cause your pain, misery and tormenting rheumatism. adv

BAD TEETH MAKE BAD BOYS

Charles D. Hilles Thinks Dentistry Can Cure Much Degeneracy.

NEW YORK. — Charlse D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee and president of the New York Juvenile association, says he believes that much of the so-called badness in boys is primarily due to decayed teeth and their consequent inability to properly masticate their food.

He bases his conclusions on observance of boys sent as delinquents to the Children's Village at Dobbs Ferry, where an average of 550 youngsters are getting a chance to become decent and self-respecting citizens. He declares that ninety-one per cent of the boys received suffer from bad teeth and that after two years of care with a dentist, together with practice in the art of using teeth brush and paste, the boys are turned out 90 per cent good instead of 90 per cent bad.

TOLLS BILL TO BE AMENDED

Compromise Has Been Agreed to by Norris and Simmons.

WASHINGTON. — A compromise amendment to the tolls repeal bill, drawn by Senator Simmons for the administration forces and Senator Norris for Republican senators, will be offered when the bill comes to a vote in the senate.

The new amendment embodies all of the original Simmons amendment, recommended by the senate interoceanic canal committee, as well as the more emphatic reservation in the amendment proposed by Senator Norris several days ago as a substitute for the committee amendment. The resolution of Senator Sutherland to arbitrate the tolls exemption question with Great Britain may come up before the vote on the bill.

WOMEN TORTURED

Many Are Victims of Salvarsan Experiments, It Is Alleged.

EDITOR MAKES ACCUSATIONS

Trial of Berlin Man in Progress in Which He Says City and Doctors Are Inoculating Underworld Habitues—Challenges Them to Exhume Fifty Bodies—Sanity in Question.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAIN.—The trial has begun here of Wasaman, editor of a local newspaper, on a charge of libeling the city council and the physicians of the city hospital by charging that the latter experimented with Salvarsan on women of the underworld.

Herr Wasaman took the witness stand and reiterated his charges. He testified that the physicians of the city hospital forcibly inoculated women of the underworld with Salvarsan and used them as experiments the same as if they were rabbits. Wasaman declared that it costs $1 to prepare a pound of Salvarsan while the manufacturers charge $2,000 for the same quantity.

Asks Bodies Be Exhumed.

Addressing the presiding judge, Herr Wasaman said: "You sentenced to death Hopf, the man who poisoned his wives with arsenic. If you exhume the bodies of the women of the demimonde, who died from experiments made on them with Salvarsan, you will find that the physicians injected twenty times more arsenic than Hopf gave his wives."

He added that fifteen women of the demi-monde had died from the use of Salvarsan by physicians at the City hospital.

The court refused the request of Herr Wasaman's counsel that expert authorities on Salvarsan be summoned from Vienna to testify in the case and ordered that Wasaman be kept under observation during the remainder of the trial in order to detemine whether or not he was mentally responsible for his charges.

MISS HAZEL TICE.

Sixteen years ago last October in the village of Tecumseh there came to gladden the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Tice the little girl Hazel. As life is not measured by the number of days lived, but by heartbeats, by the amount of love given and taken. Though we call the 16 years a short time, they were not for they made that home a treasure house of love, a love all the more tender and self-sacrificing as time showed the little girl not growing stronger in body with the years.

The stronger, more joyous part of her young girlhood was spent in her school days in Macon, in which place she was also a member of the Epworth League and the young girls' Mission Band; and it was to these associations she clung when away from them.

Most often parents are permitted to pass first out into the Beyond to prepare "the place beautiful" for loved ones, but in this case our girlie has been permitted the privilege of going with her Saviour, to get ready "the Home Over There" for the older ones the dear ones.

Thursday night, June 4, 1914, Hazel went on, away from the tender loving arms here into the even more tender ones of her Christ; and some day He and she will be waiting to give to those dear ones whose work is not yet done here, the glad welcome to the new home over there.

EFFORT AT RESCUE COSTS BOY HIS LIFE

Tragic Scene Marks Valliant Attempt by Huron Youth.

FLAT ROCK, MICH. — Valor exacted its not too infrequent toll in the Huron river when a sturdy young farmer went to the rescue of his companion who could not swim, bringing sorrow to two families in Huron township instead of one.

The dead are Harry Scoflet and George Sewington, both fifteen years old.

Sewington, who could not swim, paddled out beyond his depth and sank in fifteen feet of water. Scoflet heard his smothered cries for help and reached him as he went down the second time. Fighting madly the drowning boy grabbed Scoflet about the neck, as the latter struggled desperately to control him. It was only for a moment. Terrified companions saw the tragic grapple and churning water as the pair disappeared from view.

A half hour later their bodies in death embrace were recovered in ten feet of water. The Huron has claimed three lives so far this year.

Millard Palmer sits calmly in the postmaster's private office and still is signing himself "postmaster."

General Stewart, who is in charge of the big flock of inspectors sent here to oust the postmaster, says that Mr. Palmer's incumbency ceased at 5 p. m., Friday, and that Mr. Holden representing his bondsmen, succeeded him. Mr. Palmer has the keys and the postoffice is honoring his orders just the same.

DUTCH CAPTURE HOLLAND?

Michigan Town Votes to Put Saloons Back in City; Vote Large.

HOLLAND, MICH. — Holland voted to re-establish saloons in the city, after a saloonless period of six years. The campaign for the special election was one of the hottest ever conducted in the city, and the large vote which was polled is evidence that both the wets and drys worked the city thoroughly. The vote was 1,137 for and 914 against the return of the saloon.

During the last six years Holland has not been entirely dry, the wholesale liquor dealers having enjoyed a thriving business.

He was remanded to the county jail.

BLOCKADE IS OFF

Dictator's Action Averts Upset of Mediation Plans.

WILL ALLOW ARMS TO LAND

Grave Crisis Threatened Over Cargo of Supplies Carried by Antila to Tampico Subsides—Watchful Waiting Policy Gets New Lease of Life in Mexican Matters.

WASHINGTON. — Information that Huerta will not attempt to prevent arms and ammunition from reaching Carranba by way of Tampico gives another lease of life to the watchful waiting policy and brightens a trifle the prospect of its success.

That is the way Washington officialdow views the news of the day—that Huerta had decided to abandon his blockade of Tampico. The A. B. C. mediators will go ahead. Huerta will quit if the interests of his party are safeguarded. Carranza and Villa will get guns enough and ammunition enough to force an entry into Mexico City, where, in the meantime they send representatives to Niagara Falls they, although victorious and with the situation in their own hands, may agree to a program for complete pacification in which their own influence, of course, shall be paramount.

Huerta Weakens; Blockade Off.

MEXICO CITY. — The Mexican government decided to suspend the order for the blockade of Tampico.

This step was taken on the government learning that the mediators at Niagara Falls were taking some action in regard to the movements of the steamer Antilla on the way from an American port with arms for the Constitutionalists and also to prevent a setback in the peace negotiations.

New Plan to Mediators.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. — The three mediators have in their possession a new and complete plan for the settlement of the Mexican situation which has been submitted to them by the delegates of the United States. This plan they have been carefully perusing, and it will probably occupy most of their time today. This new plan is a comprehensive review of all the vital points in the Mexican problem.

Although nothing definite has been given out regarding this new note, it is learned that the plan contains a compromise offer through which it is expected to bring General Carranza into the conference.

Justice Lamar and Frederick W. Lehmann, the American delegates, arrived at the Clifton House at 11 o'clock and remained only half an hour with the mediators. After the conference Justice Lamar said:

"The mediators have heretofore submitted to us a complete plan and we have now submitted to them our plan.

"Our counter proposition contains not only the suggestions which we make and upon which there has been neither agreement nor disagreement to the plan, but also the points upon which they had already agreed. Some of the points suggested have already been discussed."

The chief feature of the new plan submitted by the United States is an understanding through which General Carranza will take part in the conference.

The militant suffragettes are becoming more of a menace than ever before. After a consultation at Scotland Yard the police authorities, who took a serious view of the threat, sent to Eton two detectives specially charged with the duty of watching over the safety of the prince.

PROSPECT FOR FRUIT IS UNUSUALLY GOOD

Everything Except Peaches Is Prolific in Michigan.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — The prospect that the peach crop is going to be the next thing to a complete failure in this section this season doesn't make the fruit growers feel so very "blue" after all, because they are now practically sure of having one of the best crops of strawberries they have had in several years, and the prospects for nearly all other kinds of fruit are unusually good.

This applies strongly to apples, for in the majority of orchards the trees are hanging full of well set fruit, and if anything like normal conditions prevail through the summer, say the fruit growers, the apple harvest will be an especially profitable one.

Small fruits of different varities also give promise of a bumper yield. Particular attention to systematic spraying has had much to do with the bright prospects for a profitable fruit harvest in Eaton and adjoining counties this season.

DOES FIRST AND LAST DIVE

Young German Follows Example of Companions and Drowns.

BRIGHTON, MICH. — Bernard Young, eighteen years old, was drowned off the docks at Worden lake while swimming with two companions.

After the water had cleared his body could be plainly seen in an upright position on the bottom of the lake twenty-five feet below the surface. A German in this country but a few months, Young was unable to swim but thought to follow his companions in diving off the docks. His first attempt was his last. After the plunge he did not come up. His mates were so thoroughly frightened that they ran away for aid, helpless to attempt a rescue.

TROUBLE COMING IN BANK AFFAIR

Munday Withdrew Money Just Before Suspension.

RECEIVERSHIP IS PROBABLE

Within First Ten Days of June More Than One-fourth of Deposits in Lorimer Bank Were Withdrawn—Two Other Banks Suspend—One of Closed Banks May Reopen.

Chicago, June 15.—Receivership proceedings against the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank and prosecution of its officials for alleged criminal acts seem to be inevitable.

The state courts were asked today to take charge of the $1,000,000 Lorimer-Munday bank.

Inquiries involving criminal violation of the banking laws probably will be instituted, by both State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne and District Attorney James H. Wilkerson.

New Disclosures Made.

It was brought to light by D. V. Harkin, chief bank examiner, that Charles B. Munday, vice president of the bank and its real head, himself withdrew money from it just before its suspension.

The examiner found that within the first ten days of June more than one-fourth of the money on deposit in the Lorimer bank had been withdrawn. The exact amount taken out was $750,200.74. The withdrawal of this sum left the bank with only a little more than $3,000,000 in deposits, and with only $50,000 in actual cash at the time the bank examiner took charge.

The heavy withdrawals of deposits contributed largely to precipitate the crisis which forced the bank examiner to intervene.

Other Banks Close.

As has been expected, the State Bank of Calumet, 10758 South Michigan avenue, one of the Lorimer-Munday string, went into the custody of a deputy of Bank Examiner Harkin, and took its place with the Broad way State, Illinois State, and Ashland-Twelfth State in the list of "subsidiary" banks which are suspended pending completion of the examination of the La Salle.

An hour later the Southwest Savings bank, a private concern at 4010 West Twenty-sixth street, was closed through an involuntary bankruptcy petition filed in the federal court. Louis J. Krejel, the owner, had $4,000 in cash at the Lorimer-Munday institution, and when he couldn't get it he had to shut up shop. Its deposits ran around $35,000.

One Bank May Reopen.

Reorganization of the Broadway State Bank, one of the five Lorimer-Munday institutions closed by the state bank examiner, may be brought about on a basis that will bring it into the clearing house and give it the backing of one of the great banking houses of Chicago.

Officials of the bank declare that 100 cents on the dollar will be paid, and that if the examination of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank by the state experts should demonstrate that the Broadway State Bank has been struck harder than it now appears, they will personally assume the loss in order that all obligations may be met.

Run on Bank Checked.

St. Louis, June 15.—H. A. Hoyer, vice president of the Bank of Marine at Marine, Ill., was in St. Louis and secured funds to tide over the withdrawal of deposits from his institution as a result of the closing in Chicago of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank.

The Bank of Marine is one of the four banks in Madison county of which C. B. Munday, vice president of the Chicago concern, is the head.

A run started on the Bethalto bank was checked by the resignation of C. B. Munday as president.

"As sure as God is my judge we will pay our depositors dollar for dollar."

C. B. Munday, vice president of the La Salle Street Trust & Savings Bank sat disheveled and unshaven on the stone balustrade of his home at 4917 Drexel boulevard and made this statement. It was the first word that has come from the lips of the man who really managed the bank whose doors were closed.

Every depositor in the La Salle Street Bank and the other three will receive dollar for dollar," he declared emphatically, striking the stone railing with his fist. "The three outlying banks are not affected whatsoever. They have ample funds to pay off all their depositors. They were closed merely to protect them. They are certain to be opened within a few days.

Blames Attacks on Bank.

"The La Salle Street Bank probably will be liquidated within a week. As sure as God is my judge," and once more he hit the railing a blow with his fist, "we will pay all of our depositors dollar for dollar. If it becomes necessary I will place every bit of my property at the disposal of the liquidators.

"I am sorry and deeply disappointed at the closing of the bank, but there is no bank in this country that could stood up against the attacks that have been leveled at this bank and the individuals connected with it in the last year."

"Do you mean the Brady case?"

"I'd rather not say as to that, but you can use your own judgment. Thursday morning we were prepared to realize $1,000,000 on gilt-edge securities, but what good would that have done? We would have had to face the same condition all over again on Monday. So we held a conference with the bank examiner and mutually decided to close until we could ascertain our condition."

Chipper.

"Will you saw some wood for dinner?" "No'm. I don't eat wood."—Houston Post.

CARRANZA MEN FAIL TO APPEAR

Rebel Representatives Reported at Niagara Falls.

TO GET IN ON 'CONVERSATIONS'

Huerta Representatives Say United States Will Have to Swing to Other Names Than Those Now Favored—Many Prominent Constitutionalists Are Mentioned for President.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 15.—Those besides mediators and delegates here attending the conference have had a busy time searching the towns on both sides of the river for the Carranza delegates. It has been persistently reported that two representatives of the rebel chief are here, but careful search of all the hotels, both on the Canadian and American side, has failed to reveal their presence.

Meanwhile the mediators have not changed their attitude regarding the official participation of the rebel chief in the conferences. If the delegates arrive, however, they will probably be admitted to informal "conversations" with the three South American diplomats.

Persons who are close to the three Huerta representatives declare that the United States government will have to swing its support to other men than the Americans now favor for the provisional presidency if these negotiations are to be successful. The Mexican delegates themselves are said to be sorely disappointed over the attitude of the Wilson administration in the matter.

Many Rebel Names Mentioned.

No precise information can be obtained here regarding the names mentioned but persons who are close to the delegates say that the names of Luis Cabrera and Iglesias Calderon have both been mentioned prominently by the Americans. It is not believed, however, that the intention was to give to either of these two men the provisional presidency, but it is known that the plan of the Washington government is to have not only the provisional president, but the members of his cabinet selected at this conference.

Jose Casconielos is another name heard in discussions here but few of the well informed believe that he is being seriously considered.

Rafael Zubaran Capmany, who is now in Washington representing Gen. Carranza, has been heard of for the first time in connection with the projected slate for Mexico. Zubaran has been Carranza's chief aide since the leader left the state of Coahuila, of which he was governor under Madero, to begin his revolution.

Another candidate believed to have been mentioned by the Americans is Felipe Angeles, the rebel general, who was chiefly responsible for the capture of Torreon.

It is impossible to say whether Gen. Angeles has been mentioned for the presidency or for a minor post, but it is known that Mexican delegates would under no circumstances endorse his appointment.

"DOC" SHAW IS SORE AT PRESIDENT WILSON

Suffrage Leader Criticises His Attitude on Women's Votes.

Philadelphia, June 15.—President Wilson's attitude on woman suffrage was severely criticised by Dr. Anna H. Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage association, on her return to her home at Meriton after a two months' visit to Europe.

"If the president had put his party behind suffrage, his claims to democratic principles of government and the 'New Nationalism' would ring true," said Dr. Shaw. "But when he fails we are obliged to question it. Of course," she continued, "he said it was not a party measure. He will do that when he wants to lay the blame upon the party, but if he really wan'd a measure he would find he had a conscience."

Dr. Shaw made it perfectly plain that in her opinion the attitude of President Wilson and the democratic party will in no wise retard equal suffrage.

ORGANIZATION OF CAR THIEVES DISCOVERED

Woman's Remark of Year Ago Gives Detectives Clew.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 15.—"Stolen car of whisky has brought on all this trouble," said Mrs. Clarence Cummings a year ago when she tried to kill herself, after trouble with her husband, and was prevented.

Cummings was a car inspector for the Pere Marquette railroad, and railroad detectives, hearing of her remark, began an investigation. The result is the uncovering of an organized band of box car thieves.

Five men are under arrest, three of whom are alleged to be ring leaders. The five are: Lute Miller, John St. Charles, Clarence Cummings and Richard Zuidyke, day car inspectors, and Charles Edinger, yard conductor, all employedby the P. M.

Merchandise to the value of $1,500, taken from P. M. freight cars, has been recovered, and officials of the road declare that ten times this amount has been stolen from the company in and about this city in the last eight years.

Two of the men arrested are said to have made confessions, and at least 20 more arrests are expected.

TOTS SAVE MOTHER'S LIFE

They Call Police Who Rescue Her From Asphyxiation.

Detroit, June 15.—Two children, one 4 years of age, the other 6, saved their mother from death by asphyxiation by their timely arrival from play. The mother, Mrs. Catherine Williams, aged 26, is slowly recovering from gas poisoning, but no hope is entertained for her 4-day-old infant.

The children went out to play early in the afternoon, leaving the mother and baby alone in bed. When they returned their mother told them in a faint voice to open a window and then call the police. Officers arrived, and found the source of the escaping gas.

LADDER, GIRL, 'FACE ABOUT'

Copper Makes Men Turn Heads While Stenographer Trips Down "Aerial."

New York, June 13.—Half a dozen fire engines, a squad of reserves, and a few hundred interested spectators gathered in front of the building at 498 Broome street to rescue a stenographer who was locked in.

Even with all the rescuers it is doubtful if they would have achieved their purpose had it not been for the gallantry of Patrolman Harry Welch. At least the stenographer, who is Miss Mollie Mat, would have waited until dark before climbing down the ladder. Patrolman Welch made the men in the crowd turn their heads away while Miss Mat skipped down the ladder.

General Order No. 15

Thereby Hangs a Tale

By EDWARD DIXON

During the war between the states a division of the Union army under General Chubb was placed at the junction of two railroads in Tennessee to protect the roads and keep open the line of communications of the main army farther south. It was the spring season in that region—March. The sun shone warm, the buds were opening, the birds building their nests—indeed, nature was awakening.

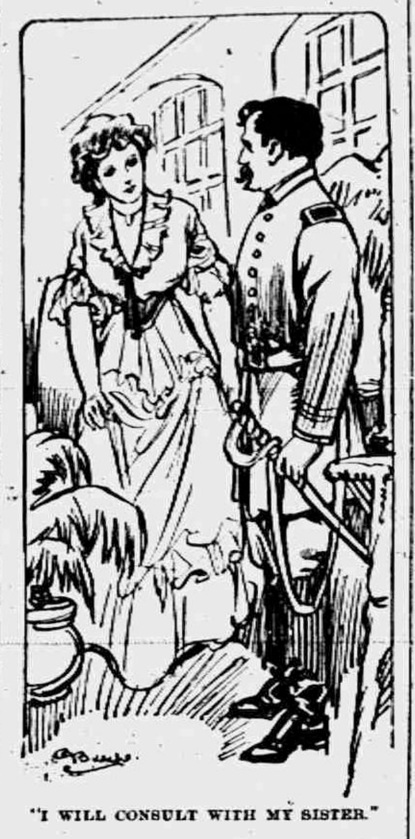
Two officers—Lieutenant Colonel John Barrows and Major Alec Stewart—were riding on a road just beyond the limits of the encampment.

"I wish our wives were here," remarked Major Stewart.

"The general won't allow a woman in camp on any pretext. He's issued an order to that effect."

"I know that. What can you expect of an old bach?"

Now, these officers were both young men and had recently been married.



"I WILL CONSULT WITH MY SISTER."

The general commanding was forty years old, a regular army officer and a rigid disciplinarian. He believed that the presence of women with an army only encumbered it and detracted from its efficiency.

"I have a mind to bring my wife down," said Barrows, "if I can find some farmer's wife outside the camp limits who will take her in. No one outside the family she lives with need know she's my wife."

"If the old man finds it out he'll prefer charges against you for disobedience of orders, and it will go hard with you."

Barrows made no reply to this, but the desire to see his wife was very strong in him, and the next time he rode out of camp it was with a view to finding a lodgment for her. Not far from the chain of guards there lived Mrs. Claybourne, a widow with several children. Barrows called on her, told her of his desire to see his wife and asked the widow if she would not give her lodgment for a brief season. The request was granted, and Barrows wrote for his wife to come south.

One day a couple of weeks later General Chubb while riding by the Claybourne house saw Mrs. Barrows sitting on the veranda doing fancy work. The lady was a very pretty woman, and the general was much pleased with her appearance. On returning to camp he called one of his aids to him and said:

"There is a house about a mile from camp on the turnpike leading westward, a white house with green blinds. Learn who lives there and report the information to me."

The general gave the order in a tone to indicate that he suspected there were arms concealed in the house or it was a rendezvous for spies or was in some way prejudicial to the Union cause. The aid made the inquiries and reported that the place was owned and occupied by Mrs. Claybourne; that she was a sympathizer with the Confederate cause, but so far as could be learned not disposed to interfere in the struggle. The general received the report without comment, and the aid retired.

The next afternoon General Chubb, attended by a single orderly, rode out to the Claybourne place. Mrs. Barrows, who, having no duties, spent much of her time on the veranda doing fancy work, was in her usual seat when the general rode up. He had been pointed out to her by her husband, who had cautioned her if she should meet him not to reveal her identity. When she saw him stop at the gate, turn his horse over to his orderly and come up the walk she was much frightened. Nevertheless she pulled herself together to meet the issue.

"Mrs. Claybourne?" said the general, raising his hat.

The lady rose and bowed, but made no other reply. The fact that she was supposed to be the occupant of the premises somewhat reassured her.

"I have been informed, Mrs. Claybourne, that you are a widow living here alone, and it has occurred to me that you should have protection. My men, as a rule, are orderly, but in every army there are desperate characters who are liable to break away and pillage. If you like I will give you a guard."

"I appreciate your thoughtfulness and kindness, general," she said, adopting the southern dialect so far as she could. "I will consult with my sister before giving you a definite reply. Will you please excuse me for a moment? Meanwhile take a seat, suh."

The real Mrs. Claybourne, who was well aware of the chances her lodger—and by this time her friend—was taking and from an upper window had seen the general stop before the house, awaited Mrs. Barrows with a natural agitation. The latter in a few brief sentences informed her of what had taken place, and a hurried consultation was held, in which it was decided to decline the proffered guard with thanks. Then Mrs. Barrows went back to General Chubb, while Mrs. Claybourne kept out of range of vision.

"My sister says that she has no fear, general," said Mrs. Barrows. "She would prefer not to have a guard, but she is sensible of your kindness, as I am, and asks me to convey her thanks."

Since the general had simply made the offer as a pretext for a visit to the supposed Mrs. Claybourne he was satisfied. He had seated himself and showed no inclination to hurry away. He professed great sympathy with the southern people in what they were called upon to endure on account of the war, especially in the scarcity of provisions on account of the blockade.

"I suppose," he continued, "that you have no tea or coffee. I shall be happy to supply you with the latter from my own private stock."

"You are very kind, general. We have nothing but chicory at present."

The general spent an hour with the supposed widow and when he departed was as much pleased with the lady's charm of manner as he had been struck with her beauty.

It was not long before General Chubb rode out again to the Claybourne place. This time he was received by the widow herself, who regretted that on account of an indisposition her sister begged to be excused. Mrs. Barrows had arranged for this and begged Mrs. Claybourne, who was an attractive woman, to make an effort to win the man who had evidently been smitten with herself. The widow was a few years older than her guest, but had not lost her good looks. She laid herself out to relieve her friend by making herself as attractive as possible. She would not let the general go till she had brought out some old wine she had hidden away from the Yankees, which she served with cake she had made herself. After having partaken of several glasses of the wine the general was in no hurry to go.

Mrs. Barrows' indisposition lasted as long as General Chubb's division remained in the vicinity, and that was three months. The general sent her delicacies when he could obtain them, but his devotion was being all the while undermined by the real widow. Colonel Barrows was in the secret and would have enjoyed the situation had he not been in constant dread lest the truth be discovered. However, it was not long before his wife informed him that the general was making love to "her sister," who she believed was as well pleased with him as he was with her.

June came and with it the hot weather. Barrows, who was much troubled about the deception being practiced on his commander, sent his wife north. She had not been gone a week when Chubb's division was relieved and he was ordered south with his command. The day before he moved the widow secured a proposal and made a favorable reply.

Then Colonel Barrows let the cat out of the bag, and it soon became known among the principal commanders how the general had begun by paying attention to Barrows' wife and had been switched off to a widow. All enjoyed the joke heartily, but not a man betrayed the fact that the colonel had deliberately disobeyed general order No. 15, thereby rendering himself liable to be cashiered.

Chubb's division joined the main army and marched to the sea with Sherman. Colonel Barrows proved a fine officer and was promoted till he had two stars on his shoulder to Chubb's one. One day when the army was at Atlanta the two men, commanding different corps, met.

"General," said Barrows, "I believe I have never congratulated you on your engagement."

Chubb looked embarrassed. He had not told of his engagement.

"Don't deny it. Besides, you have to thank me for your wife."

"How is that?" asked Chubb, wondering.

"Do you remember your general order against women in camp? Well, I brought my wife down when we were guarding the railroad and put her in the house of your fiancee. You called on her, and she permitted you to suppose she was Mrs. Claybourne. After that you were making love to the widow herself. The difference between you and me was that you visited your sweetheart during the day, while I visited mine between taps and reveille."

"You mutinous rascal!" cried Chubb. "If I had known that I would have put you in irons."

The Spendthrift.

The applause that accompanies the spendthrift never has a cash value.—Judge.

THE A. B. C. MEDIATORS.

Da Gama, Naon and Mujica Have Had Wide Diplomatic Experience.

John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, furnishes sketches of the three South American diplomatists who have undertaken to adjust Mexico's troubles at conferences in Canada beginning May 18.

Dr. Domicio da Gama, ambassador of Brazil, succeeded Joaquim Nabuco, who accomplished much to increase the friendship between his country and the United States, to which he was accredited. Da Gama began his professional life as a journalist. In 1893 he was appointed secretary to Brazil's special commission in Washington, where President Cleveland was arbiter in a question between Brazil and Argentina. From 1896 to 1900 he was connected with special missions in Europe. In 1901 he was made charge d'affaires at Brussels. In 1907 he was Brazilian minister to Peru and in 1908 was transferred to Argentina.

Dr. Romulo S. Naon, minister of Argentina, was first recognized in public life when he won a medal at the University of Buenos Aires for a thesis on a matter of great interest to his country. In 1902 he was elected to the lower house of the federal congress and also in 1906, distinguishing himself throughout as a debater. President Alcorta appointed Dr. Naon secretary of justice and public instruction. He was appointed minister of Argentina in Washington in 1911.

Eduardo Suarez Mujica is a native of Santiago, Chile, and studied law at the National university. Soon after obtaining his degree he received a post in the office of the minister of foreign affairs, and soon afterward was made assistant secretary of state. While thus in close touch with diplomatic life he had numerous intricate international problems to handle. He was called to become the intendente of the province of Altacama, which he later represented in the national congress. In 1908 the late President Montt gave him the portfolios of justice and public instruction. Senor Mujica entered the diplomatic service of Chile in 1909, when he was appointed minister to Mexico and Cuba.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

A considerable of trouble has been caused of late on account the failure of drivers of automobiles to properly heed our laws and regulations; and in an effort to have them avoid any future trouble, I wish to give notice that all autos driving on the streets after dusk must be properly lighted, and when left standing on the side of the road must have tail light and outside front lights lighted. In the business section of the Village all drivers of automobiles must turn square corners, and, when parking automobiles on Chicago St. in the business section must drive their automobile between the hitching posts so as to make room for the tieing of horses to the posts on either side.

I am informed that our citizens are not heeding the ordinance relative to the riding of bicycles on our walks, and I wish to give them notice that I intend to enforce this ordinance to the letter; also the ordinance relating to speeding of automobiles and motorcycles.

For the Children

Many young people who live in the country, especially those who reside on farms, would think it no novelty to witness the shearing of sheep. In big cities, however, it is a most unusual sight, and when the shepherds of Central park, New York, get ready with their shears the little ones crowd around to witness the operation. For many years the park department of the city has maintained flocks of sheep in the larger parks, not alone because they lend beauty to the landscape, but because their presence on the lawns tends to improve the grass. The constant grazing keeps the herbage at just the right height to give it a velvety appearance, and the sod is at the same time benefited. In Central park there is a large flock, and when the lambs come the little New Yorkers never seem to grow weary of watching their gambols. Older folks take great interest in the beautiful little animals. The camera man happened along the other day and took a shot.

House Guests.

A hostess should always state in her invitation just how long she wishes a house guest to remain with her. This will be appreciated by the guest, for she will then know what clothing to provide for her visit.

A hostess should plan proper amusements for her guests, taking into consideration their likes and dislikes.

Good Form Hints.

Never grow careless about borrowing and returning things lent you.

Be enthusiastic over things, but don't overdo it or people may think you are insincere and gushing.

Don't keep your friends too long chatting in the street. They may be in a hurry.

BOWEN—CASKEY

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

While Leon Fagan and Harry Wells with their lady friends Miss Lulu Cleveland and her guest Miss Bartholemew of Colon were returning from Wampler's Lake Friday night, they met with quite a serious accident when their car struck some fresh gravel that had been put in the road. The car overturned doing quite a little damage to it.

The occupants were more or less bruised and shaken up, but fortunately no bones were broken. While a serious accident in many respects yet it was a lucky one, that no more damage was done.

CHILDREN'S DAY

M E Church June 14

A rare day in June, was Sunday June 14, and a large congregation was present at the M E. Church for the Children's Day Service. The church was beautifully decorated, under the direction of the Misses Aileen Kendrick and Lillian Kennedy.

The program which was exceptionally good, was under the direction of Mesdames E. C. Brown and H. R. Conklin. A very interesting feature of the program was the graduation of a class from the primary department diplomas were presented to the class by their paster Rev. G. B. Whitney who made a fine speech to them. Supt. Dr. E. C. Brown then presented each one with a New Testament and urged them to study the book. The members of the class were Bernice Austin, Helen Ward, Margaret Turner, Bertha Gilman, Dayton Lyons and Bernard Skinner.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Slight Burns.

Put the part instantly in cold water or cover it with moistened baking powder and then with a wet cloth. When the skin is destroyed the point to be attained is to exclude the air. Do this by covering the burn with sweet oil, vaseline, linseed oil, carron oil, lard or with flour spread thickly on a linen cloth or on cotton batting.

An excellent covering for burnt surfaces is made by mixing common whiting (used in kitchens for polishing purposes) with sweet oil or cottonseed oil or even water to a thick paste. With this the burn is carefully covered by means of a feather, taking care not to break the blister; then the whole part is covered with cotton cloth and kept clean and moist.

The Herald $1.00

THE Paige Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which it has to pay interest—it has no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends.

That enables it to put a full dollar of actual value into the car for every dollar of the selling price.

And this excess of real value creates a demand for Paige cars that cuts selling and advertising expense to the minimum.

And this in turn makes it possible to put still more value into the car.

Doesn't that look like sound reasoning?

Doesn't it make you want to investigate the Paige still further?

And just remember this—It is going to pay you to get your name on an order blank as quickly as possible—The Paige is going to be oversold again this year.

T. H. S. ALUMNI DAY

Over Three-Hundred From Far and Near Met At Witherell Hall.

FRIDAY JUNE 12, 1914.

Did anyone have a doubt as to the success of the Alumni meeting? If so they must have been convinced of its success if they were at Witherell hall on Friday. Grey haired men and women mingled with the younger classes and as they met some of the old friends of the long ago, a host of memories were at once awakened and "do you remember?" "have you forgotten?" and "say that reminds me," were remarks that were constantly being made. They came from far and near and clasped glad hands as they met their old classmates.

Tecumseh has sent out many brilliant sons and daughters who have made their mark in the world; doctors lawyers, preachers, journalists, professors, school teachers, missionaries, nurses, in fact every line of business and profession has been represented by the graduates of Tecumseh High. Among those who have gone abroad to pursue their chosen work is Russell E. Adkins a medical missionary to Kyt Yong, China, who was present (being home on furlough) and who was pressed into service and made a very interesting speech telling of his wonderful work.

The musical program was most delightfully given and received rounds of applause until the hall fairly echoed and the encores were given in a most happy manner making the dinner hour replete with sweet sounds. At the close of this part of the program General F. B. Wood, class of '77, as toast master in a very happy manner began to serve the company introducing Supt. Reed who gave a most hearty welcome in behalf of Tecumseh High School to those who claimed her as their Alma Mater.

Chas. D. Hurry '96, gave "A peep behind the scenes" and in a most racy manner described the many things that had helped him in his work that were unknown to the outside world.

One of the happiest reunions was that of the boys' quartette, whose bright faces charmed the company aside from their singing, which was given a hearty encore.

In speaking of "Old grads and New" Dr. L. G. North made many happy hits and kept his audience in a merry humor during his entire speech.

A solo by Fred Dickinson, "A Perfect Day," was a fitting close to this part of the program.

A business meeting followed when a constitution and by-laws were read and adopted and officers elected as follows:

President—Mrs. A. W. Mills
1st Vice Pres.—Dr. L. G. North
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. S. Moore
Rec. Sec.—Percy Bowen
Cor. Sec.—Myrna Service
Treas.—Frank Snell.

Advisory committe: Mrs. S. W. Anderson, Mrs. J. J. Freeman. Mrs. R T, Meade and Miss Alice Wimple.

The crowd then dispersed, some to the homes of their friends and others to the base ball park to witness the game between the T H. S. and a picked team from the Alumni. This game resulted in a score of 22 to 16 in favor of the Alumni.

All praise is due to Supt. Reed who suggested the effort to reorganize the association and to the untiring efforts of Miss Jane Harris and Miss Alice Satterthwaite which made this meeting such a wonderful success.

NOTES—

M. Ruth Daniels of Onsted of the class of '07 will soon take up her chosen life work. Last week instead of meeting her old schoolmates and friends at the Alumni she had to go to Boston for the missionary meeting being held there and in the early fall she leaves for India for a seven years sojourn as missionary in that field.

Mrs. A W. Mills is banner member of the Alumni as she graduated in the class of '67 and her six children have graduated from the same school: Mary '97, Mabel '01, Adelbert '02, Raymond '06, Zella 09 and Wilfred '12.

CLASS REUNION

The class of '90 with their friends numbering about 20 held a reunion at the T, H. S. Monday afternoon honoring Dr. Russell Adkins one of their number. A picnic supper and a social good time with impromptu speeches made the afternoon a very pleasant one.

News was received Monday morning by Miss Mary Dingman of the death of her sister Mrs. Chas. F. Fitzsimmons who passed away Sunday morning at Van Horn Texas. Mrs. Fitzsimmons was a former resident of Tecumseh and has many friends who will mourn her loss.

WILSON TO LEAD ALL SHIPS

At Head of World Armada He Will Pass Through Canal.

Washington, June 15.—President Wilson next March personally will lead the great international fleet of warships from Hampton Roads to Colon, to participate in the formal opening of the Panama canal by passing through it on the bridge of the world-famous old battleship Oregon as leader of the long line of fighting craft of all nations, and then, after proceeding northward, enter the Golden Gate, at the head of this immense armada and attend the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

YOU CAN'T EAT APPETITE POOR

Multitudes of people lose their appetite. Simply don't care for anything to eat. The dinner bell has no interest to them. They loathe their breakfast. They may nibble a little of this and a little of that, but they do not care for it.

Lunch has lost all of its charms, although they try to eat something.

Dinner about the same.

There is something positively wrong, of course, but no disease that can be named. Just out of sorts. That is all.

It is in this kind of a condition that Peruna acts very beneficially.

After using Peruna, interest in food is revived. Beginning with a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal will generally quickly improve the appetite and help the digestion.

Thousands of people can testify to this. Liberated from a slavery that is almost unbearable. The slavery of having no interest in life. All used up. Yet one does not know exactly why. Take Peruna before each meal. Skies will get blue again. Fields will look green once more and life will be pleasant. You will feel that you are good for something and the world is a good place to live in. Peruna will do it. Not as an artificial stimulant. Simply a tonic that stimulates appetite in a natural way.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 6 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

Trades Good Horse for Poor One and Poor One for Watch.

Clio, Mich., June 15.—Work on the Lynn Blaine farm near here will be delayed until Mr. Blaine can secure a team. He left the farm in charge of his son, Lynn Blaine, Jr., 19 years old, while he went to Flint. When he returned his best horse was gone, and his son was amusing himself with a cheap brass watch. He told his father that a man who gave his name as Dois Lesler, of Flint, called and said that he wanted to trade horses. The exchange was made, but after the trader had gone the boy again looked over his new horse and was disappointed. So when the trader returned an hour later and offered to trade a watch for the horse he formerly owned, the boy was delighted.

The police at Flint are searching for Lesler and told his wife that if the horse was not returned to Blaine by today a warrant would be issued.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Catarrh.

Dozens of remedies are said to be cures for catarrh, and many do excellent work in that disease, but every household contains the best known remedy, and it is actually so simple that most persons disregard its merits.

Dissolve a pinch of ordinary table salt in one-fourth of a pint of warm water and pour a little in the palm of the hand and place the nostrils in it and snuff it up the nose, taking care that some touches the tissues of the tubes reaching to the mouth. Repeat several times and then wait for ten or twelve hours and repeat the treatment. Keep this up for a week or two and catarrh will disappear.

Strong salt water will cause pain in the head, but weak warm salt water is perfectly harmless and will cleanse the tissues more effectually than any other remedy. This treatment is a great breath purifier and will clear up the throat. A little stronger salt water used as a gargle will relieve sore throat and aid in preventing diphtheria.

Both Cautious.

PANAMA CANAL TAKES ON WARLIKE APPEARANCE

Reported Mexican Threat Cause of Preparations to Meet Hostile Army.

Sixteen miles of trenches for riflemen, with as many miles more of approach and maneuvering trails, suitable for cavalry and mountain, even field, artillery, have been completed along the Panama canal.

The trenches are capable of accommodating, if necessary, 25,000 men. They have been so plotted that in many places they will make possible not only frontal but flank fire upon any attacking party.

Soldiers of the Tenth infantry are on duty at the locks and at every other part of the canal where a crank and dynamite might do damage or where a hostile army might strike.

Work on the fortifications at either entrance to the canal has so far progressed that there are several pieces of high power ordnance in readiness to do effective work at any moment.

Officers of the submarine fleet on duty at Panama have "plotted ranges" over the entire field of this ordnance.

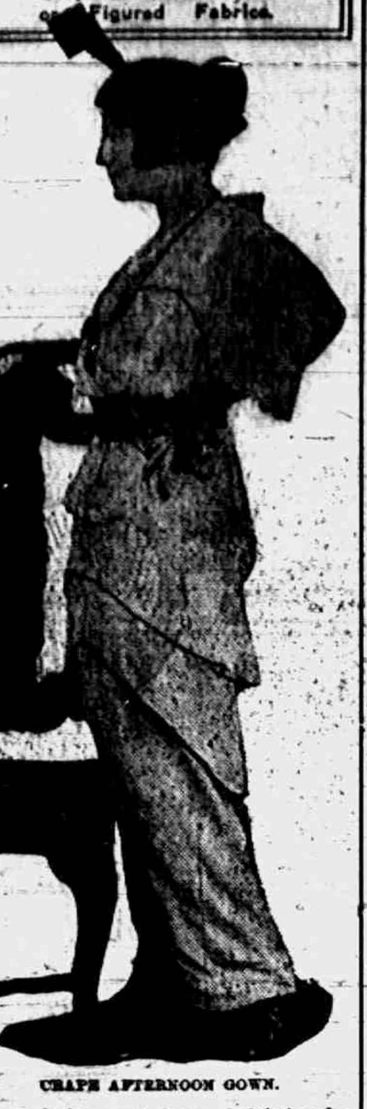
Members of the zone police have been put on "plain clothes" duty, and attend every party of tourists, ready at once to note any suspicious action by any one who might try to see too much.

Work on the trenches has been under way for some time. The other activities followed the circulation of hand bills in Panama City announcing that the Mexicans would "never allow the Panama canal to be finished."

Visitors have lately been surprised by the appearance at every station along the way of soldiers on their trains. Guarding bridges and culverts, the blowing up of which might interrupt traffic across the isthmus, as well as guarding the approaches to the locks of the canal themselves, these soldiers have missed their accustomed ice water. Every train that stops in their neighborhood, therefore, is boarded by the thirsty men, to the amazement of the passengers, and while good natured conductors look the other way, the soldiers drink deep.

FAVORED MATERIALS.

Crape In Either Plain or Figured Fabrics.



CRAPE AFTERNOON GOWN.

One of the most favored fabrics for summer gowns is crape. It comes in sheer and heavy weaves and may be had in plain or figured effects. The figured crapes are shown in both printed and machine embroidered fabrics. The gown illustrated here is of plain white combined with figured crape. The waist peplum and pannier are developed in the figured crape. The double tunic is bound with pink satin matching the color of the little pink flowers on the figured crape. The wide satin girdle is also of pink ribbon.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS.

Linens and Crapes Popular Materials For These.

Linens of all kinds are liked for children's wear, and although the fine varieties soil and muss with distressing readiness, the durability and laundering possibilities of good linen offset this disadvantage. The coarser kinds of the material are most serviceable for the play frock, but heavy linen, fine and smooth of surface, is used for many of the smarter little frocks of the simplest tailored kind.

Flowered crapes are utilized for the frocks of the small girl as well as for the older sister, though for children's frocks those crapes having the smaller flower designs are selected rather than the large designs, which are so conspicuous this season. Illustrated above is a roman striped crape dress with white dotted crape. Tones of red in stripe and ribbon trim it. The low belt and tunic effect make the dress very smart.

Keeping Egg Yolks.

When only the whites of eggs are to be used, the yolks may be kept fresh for several days by leaving them in the shell after the whites have run out through a small hole. Wet some paper with a little of the white and paste it over the hole. This will exclude the air. The yolks may be boiled in this shell, as their weight keeps the shell upright in the water with the hole above the water, or they may be used for cakes or for salads several days later.

Suffrage Wins in High Court.

Springfield, Ill., June 15.—By a vote of 4 to 3 the Illinois supreme court upheld the constitutionality of the woman's suffrage act. The three dissenting justices are Democrats. The opinion of the majority is based on a previous finding upholding the right of women to vote in school elections.

Miss Brandt Gets $375,000.

New York, June 15.—By agreeing out of court to settle $375,000 on his sister, Miss Florence L. Brandt, William Ziegler, the adopted son of the late William Ziegler, the baking powder manufacturer, has ended the litigation brought against the Ziegler estate by Miss Brandt.

Variety In Strawberry Time.

To the woman whose duties as housewife include the task of devising desserts for the year the coming of the strawberry season is a relief. The family is then treated to fresh strawberries for lunch, strawberries and cream for dinner, strawberries for lunch tomorrow and strawberries and cake tomorrow dinner. Of course every one likes strawberries, and fresh fruits are unquestionably healthful, so why not have strawberries for breakfast when they are in season instead of other fruits?

The really wise housewife makes strawberry desserts last through the strawberry season by varying her way of presenting them, and it would be difficult to find a fruit that may be served in a greater variety of delicious ways.

Strawberry Shortcake.

Take four cupfuls of sifted flour, three heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of lard and enough sweet milk to make a soft dough. Take the hulls from two quarts of strawberries and sprinkle them with granulated sugar, enough to make a quantity of sirup, and let them stand for half an hour. Sift the salt, flour and baking powder together, rub in the shortening and then with a fork stir in lightly and quickly the milk, making a dough that is too soft to be rolled. Turn this into two greased tins and bake a light brown in a quick oven, testing with a straw to see when done. Butter the layers and spread the first with strawberries, pouring over a part of the juice. Place on top of this the next layer, the rest of the berries and juice, set in the oven a few moments and serve hot with a pitcher of sweet cream.

Strawberry Omelet.

When you find a nice box of ripe strawberries fine in flavor buy them and also half a dozen of the freshest eggs. Pick over the berries, saving out about half of the finest solid ones. Cut these in half, put into bowl and add two large tablespoonfuls of sugar, mixed with a little grated orange peel and a dash of lemon juice or grapefruit. Set in refrigerator. Make an omelet of the six eggs and when ready to fold over fill with the sliced berries drained from all juice. Turn the omelet out on the dish, dust with powdered sugar and serve at once.

Jellied Rice With Strawberries.

Wash one cupful of rice through several waters, put on to boil with four quarts boiling water and boil fifteen minutes; drain. Have two cupfuls of milk in top of double boiler, add the rice and boil thirty minutes; add one teaspoonful gelatin, which has been dissolved in one tablespoonful boiling water; add three-quarter cupful sugar; stir until dissolved. Pour into mold or bowl, which has been rinsed with cold water, set aside in cold place until ready to serve. Turn the rice out on large plate or bowl, and pour crushed strawberries around or over.

Strawberry Whip.

Pick over, wash, hull and drain berries. There should be one and one-fourth cupfuls. Put in a bowl with one cupful of powdered sugar and the white of one egg. Beat, using a wire whisk, until the mixture is stiff enough to hold its shape. About one-half hour will be required for the beating. Pile lightly on a dish and accompany with cold boiled custard, vanilla flavored.

Iced Strawberry Pudding.

Boil two heaping cupfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of water together for thirty minutes, watching that it does not get too thick. Beat the yolks of six eggs very light and add to the boiling sirup. Stir a moment over the fire, then turn into a large bowl and beat until cold and thick. Then add one pint of strawberry juice and freeze.

Strawberry Cake.

Make a sponge cake according to any good recipe, bake in a border mold and let stand till night. Ten minutes before serving arrange the cake on a platter and fill the center with alternate layers of whole berries and sweetened whipped cream, putting a rim of the cream around the outer edge of the cake and bordering it with berries.

Strawberry Fritters.

Take one cupful mashed and strained strawberries, three beaten eggs, one tablespoonful sugar, one cupful flour, one teaspoonful baking powder. Add more flour if needed to make batter stiff enough. Drop by spoonfuls into very hot fat and fry like doughnuts. Serve with mashed strawberries.

Strawberry Pie.

Line a deep pie plate with pie crust and prick in several places. Bake to a delicate brown. Fill the shell with crushed, sweetened berries and spread with whipped cream. Or place one quart of sweetened berries in a deep baking dish, cover with a sheet of rich pie crust and bake.

Strawberry Jelly.

Make a lemon jelly and fill your mold with nicely picked strawberries. Pour your lemon jelly over them till the mold is full. Set on ice to harden. Serve with sugar and cream.

High Teas.

High tea may be defined as a small, formal, early supper, after which the guests are expected to stay for the evening. It differs from a dinner party chiefly in the absence of the roast and vegetables. The principal dish is usually an entree, say chicken patties. Otherwise it may be as formal as a dinner and served in courses, beginning with bouillon and ending with the demitasse, or it may be the old fashioned tea, hot biscuits and honey, cold sliced chicken, preserves and cake.

7 PERISH IN FIRE

Laborers Trapped by Flames While Eating Meal.

BUILDING IS SOAKED IN OIL

Many Jump From Windows of Lodging House in Milford, Mass., Blaze and Are Injured on Stones Below—Heat So Intense in Burning Building Firemen Cannot Enter.

MILFORD, MASS. — Seven men were burned to death and twenty injured seriously when eighty persons were trapped in a burning Armenian lodging house here early in the day.

The bodies were taken from the upper floors of the four-and-a-half story brick and wooden building. In addition to the twenty men taken to the hospital suffering from burns or from injuries received in jumping from windows, thirty sustained minor hurts. The interior of the building was burned out.

Many Jump From Windows.

The fire, the cause of which has not been determined, started in the dining hall on the ground floor of the structure, which was at the corner of West and Cherry streets. When the firemen arrived flames were shooting through all four floors. Escape by the two narrow stairways was cut off and the only means of getting out of the building was by jumping from the windows. There was a scene of wild excitement as the crazed men attempted to save their lives.

Buildign Is Soaked in Oil.

The building, erected more than fifty years ago, formerly was used as a shoe factory, and its timbers were impregnated with oils. The heat was so intense that the firemen were unable to enter, and the only way they could aid the occupants was by spreading nets and blankets to catch them as they leaped from the windows.

The victims were laborers and molders employed at a manufacturing plant in Hopedale. None of them had families.

DEATH TAKES GRAND DUKE

Adolph Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Aged 66, Passes Away.

BERLIN. — Grand Duke Adolph Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz is dead. The grand duke was born in 1848, the son of Grand Duke Frederick William, whom he succeeded as reigning grand duke on the latter's death, in 1904, and Princess Augusta, the daughter of the late Duke Adolphus of Cambridge.

In 1907 the grand duke announced that he would grant a constitution to the duchy, but this met with much opposition from the nobles and was abandoned. A form of constitutional government, it is understood, is now about to be introduced

NEW YORK. — Half a dozen fire engines, a squad of reserves, and a few hundred interested spectators gathered in front of the building at 498 Broome street to rescue a stenographer who was locked in.

Even with all the rescuers it is doubtful if they would have achieved their purpose had it not been for the gallantry of Patrolman Harry Welch. At least the stenographer, who is Miss Mollie Mat, would have waited until dark before climbinb down the ladder. Patrolman Welch made the men in the crowd turn their heads away while Miss Mat skipped down the ladder.

BOMB AT CORONATION CHAIR

Militants Attempt Destruction of the Famous Scottish Stone.

LONDON. — An attempt to blow up the coronation chair, which has been in Westminster abbey since 1296, has been made. The outrage is attributed by the authorities to suffragettes. The chair, generally called St Edward's chair, out of respect to Edward the Confessor, near whose shrine it stands, was made by order of King Edward I., to hold the coronation stone or "stone of destiny," on which the ancient Scottish kings used to sit when they were crowned. It was captured by Edward I. from the Scots.

The damage to the chair was slight.

ORGANIZATION OF CAR THIEVES DISCOVERED

Woman's Remark of Year Ago Gives Detectives Clew.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — "A stolen car of whisky has brought on all this trouble," said Mrs. Clarence Cummings a year ago when she tried to kill herself, after trouble with her husband, and was prevented.

Cummings was a car inspector [illegible] the Pere Marquette railroad, and railroad detectives, hearing of her remark, began an investigation. The result is the uncovering of an organized band of box car thieves.

Five men are under arrest, three of whom are alleged to be ring leaders The five are: Lute Miller, John St. Charles, Clarence Cummings and Richard Zuidyke, day car inspectors, and Charles Edinger, yard conductor, all employedby the P. M.

Merchandise to the value of $1,500, taken from P. M. freight cars, has been recovered, and officials of the road declare that ten times this amount has been stolen from the company in and about this city in the last eight years

Two of the men arrested are said to have made confessions, and at least 20 more arrests are expected.

Jones lived in Ypsilanti. He was arrested in Dexter May 21 and was to be committed to the Pontiac state hospital.

Jones did not want to go. This morning, after kneeling before his bunk and praying, he fastened one end of his blanket about his neck and strangled himself to death. A widow in destitute circumstances survives.

MANY ARE HURT AS AUTOS TURN TURTLE

Eleven Persons Figure in Two Different Car Spills.

MARSALL, MICH. — Five persons were injured, one perhaps seriously, when an automobile party was hurled down an 18-foot embankment near Beadle lake, 13 miles from here. The party comprised Mr. and Mrs. James Conklin, their daughter, a son, and the son's wife, all of Coldwater. Mr. Conklin suffered an injured spine. Mrs. Conklin a fractured collar bone, and the others minor hurts as their machine struck a stone and bounced off the road into the ditch, turning over twice and pinning all beneath it.

Bay City, Mich., June 16.—To some mysterious turn of fate six persons who figured in an auto accident at noon owe their lives. They are Mr. and Mrs. Asher Cummings, and two daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Potter, all of Caro. The party was driving across the track of the Saginaw-Bay street railway near the Bay Shore hotel, at Wenonah beach, when they were struck by the car, and dragged 30 feet, the car turning turtle, and pinning all beneath it. They managed to extricate themselves, and the only one injured was Mrs. Potter, whose ankle was broken.

Muskegon, Mich., June 16.—While turning a corner at a fair rate of speed, Herbert Wagamaker, a Grand Rapids motorcyclist, was struck by an automobile, driven by William Steiner and badly injured. The auto carried the motorcycle and rider against a telephone pole, a distance of 30 feet.

"GUDEMAN" IN ACTUAL LIFE

Trades Good Horse for Poor One and Poor One for Watch.

CLIO, MICH.—The work on the Lynn Blaine farm near here will be delayed until Mr. Blaine can secure a team. He left the farm in charge of his son, Lynn Blaine, Jr., 19 years old, while he went to Flint. When he returned his best horse was gone, and his son was amusing himself with a cheap brass watch. He told his father that a man who gave his name as Dois Lesler, of Flint, called and said that he wanted to trade horses. The exchange was made, but after the trader had gone the boy again looked over his new horse and was disappointed. So when the trader returned an hour later and offered to trade a watch for the horse he formerly owned, the boy was delighted.

The police at Flint are searching for Lesler and told his wife that if the horse was not returned to Blaine by today a warrant would be issued.

TRUSTS IN PLOT

President Says Big Business Creates Depression.

HE WILL KEEP UP THE FIGHT

He Declares the Influence of Administration Will Be Used to Keep Congress in Session Until Trust Legislation is Enacted—Will Expose Plotters.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Wilson laid upon big business the responsibility for creating depression which he had described as "psychological." He virtually charged that an organized campaign has been waged to shake public confidence in the business outlook and means to force the adjournment of congress without the completing of the anti-trust program.

In setting forth his views the president asserted with great emphasis that all the influence he possesses will be exerted to keep congress until the "business" legislation is enacted.

Will Reveal Plotters.

The expressions from the president came at his regular semi-weekly talk with the newspaper correspondents. He announced that the White House would, during the year, make public copies of letters that would expose the face of those who are accountable for the depression now existing. The documents which were given out consist of a circular letter from President Ashnelt of the Pictorial Review company, which had been sent broadcast throughout the country containing the argument that prosperity had been destroyed by the mischievousness of politicians. Attached to this letter was a form in which recipients were urged to write to members of congress with whom they were acquainted, the president and other officials of the administration and members of the interstate commerce commission. This form of letter contained a strong appeal for the adjournment of congress with the postponement of the anti-trust program and for a favorable decision of the five per cent rate cases.

MOUNTAINEER SHOOTS EIGI

Later Is Slain Himself by Posse—Only Two Will Recover.

WHITESBURG, KY. — Five of eight persons shot at Neon, near here, by William Day, a mountaineer, are not expected to recover, according to reports received in Whitesburg. Victor Stampher, one of Day's victims, died instantly. Day himself was killed by a posse.

Day resisted arrest on a minor charge, broke from the officers, and, running to his home, obtained a shotgun and a supply of shells. He then returned to the main street and opened fire upon a crowd of men and boys. The five victims who are not expected to live are Magistrate J. M. Wright M. Davis, hotel proprietor; Roy and Jennes Taylor, and Burnett Collins, a small boy.

BODY OF STEVENSON IS TO LIE IN STATE

Funeral To-morrow Afternoon at Bloomington, Ill.

CHICAGO — Adlai E. Stevenson, vice president during the second Cleveland administration, died here at the Presbyterian hospital. Mr. Stevenson had never recovered from the shock caused by the death of his wife five months ago, which ended a companionship of almost fifty years.

He was born in Christian county, Ky., Feb. 23, 1835. In 1852 he came to Illinois.

He was elected to congress in 1894 in the Bloomington district which hitherto had given a republican 3,000 plurality. Later President Cleveland selected Adlai Stevenson as first assistant postmaster general in his first administration. He was elected vice president in 1892.

CADILLAC, MICH. — Wayne Arnold, city engineer, was sent a check for $30 for salary up to the end of the week, and informed that his services were no longer needed. This is the result of an alleged assault on City Manager O. E. Card by Arnold following a dispute.

Motor Speeder Frightfully Hurt.

Culinary Notes

Nourishing Drinks.

Premature old age is often caused by not knowing how and when to take food. This extreme is as bad as that which loads the body with waste, causing food poisoning, but in the main, especially among women, the rasped nerves and the tired drawn lines in the face show the marks of a poorly balanced nutrition.

The following are a few recipes prepared and of a practical nature for making nutritious food drinks:

Egg and Milk.—Put a fresh egg and a glass of milk in a shaker. Shake thoroughly, sweeten and flavor to taste. This may be taken hot or cold.

Beef and Milk.—Add a teaspoonful of good beef extract to a cup of scalding milk.

Orange Tea.—Peel and take off all of the white skin from an orange. Put a slice in each cup and pour over it a light colored hot tea. A very refreshing drink.

Sentimental Punch.—For a hot beverage, melt six teaspoonfuls of grated chocolate in a saucepan. Add to it quickly six cupfuls of boiling milk. When the chocolate is thoroughly dissolved add a tablespoonful of sherry, a teaspoonful of vanilla extract and two tablespoonfuls of good clear coffee. Sweeten to taste and serve hot, with some whipped cream if desired.

Oatmeal Nectar.—Put four ounces of oatmeal into a porcelain kettle, add six ounces of white sugar and a lemon sliced thin. Mix with a little cold water; then pour on one gallon of boiling water. When served hot or cold it is a nourishing and refreshing drink.

The Sunday Dinner.

Why Sunday should be sacred to a midday dinner and the balance of the day devoted to digestion is not evident. It does seem rather material that so much must be sacrificed to mere feeding, when it is possible to have a good hot meal that will not require more than a half hour in its preparation.

If it must be a roast, a loin of veal, a leg of pork or a pair of chickens will be just as good if they are roasted on Saturday and set away in the dripping pan and given the last half hour in a good hot oven on the day of serving. A steak needs but little time and loin chops are better than the average leg of lamb.

Potatoes, if boiled for twenty minutes in their skins, can be finished in the oven during the same half hour, or cold boiled ones can be browned in the pan with the heating roast. If chops are the choice, the frying of the potatoes in deep fat is a matter of a few minutes.

Spaghetti, with cheese or tomato sauce, is a good substitute for potatoes, and the browning can be done in a few minutes. Any of the green vegetables can be boiled the day before, drained and reheated with butter. Cauliflower or onions can be rejuvenated with their cream dressing, and those vegetables that require long cooking can safely be simmering while the housekeeper is at church.

Herb Window Garden.

A few helps to the housekeeper in the shape of garnishes for various foods are acceptable when green things are at such a premium.

A pot of sprouting chives can be kept green on the kitchen window sill for weeks and with little care will grow nicely.

Pots of parsley grow well in cold weather, if started in a warm place. A box of parsley could easily be grown in a sunny sheltered window, and proves invaluable to the housekeeper.

A pot or two of mint, which grows so easily, is also a good hint for garnishing. These are only a few of the herbs that can be grown on the kitchen window sill.

It would really be a kindness to the cook to start some of these pretty green plants growing in her kitchen, as many cooks neglect to beautify the foods by decorating, simply because they do not have the materials at hand.

EXERCISE AT HOME

A Short Course In Body Building For Business Men.

NEW LIFE FOR THE MUSCLES.

This System Is Simple, Gives Help Where Help Is Needed, Takes but Ten Minutes Night and Morning and Increases Strength and Vitality.

This is a synopsis of the preliminary setting up exercises used by the trainers of the various athletic teams, which I tested personally when captain of the Yale athletic team, and which were approved by the late Mike Murphy. I have adapted them for use by business men.

SAMUEL SCOVILLE, JR.

Get up! That's the hardest part. Then cross a pair of two pound dumbbells, holding them with both hands up over the head, and swing them down between the outspread legs, then up until they are shoulder high and swing straight out to one side as far as possible, holding the arms stretched out straight and stiff. Go back again down between the legs and up and out the other side. If you don't have the dumbbells clasp the hands and do it without.

This is the famous "liver squeeze," which Sandow once said helped more muscles than any other single exercise. Moreover, it helps the muscles that need help.

Even the most sedentary man exercises his arms and legs somewhat. Few after middle age ever exercise the great trunk muscles that cover the vital parts of the body. That is the reason so many men past forty are ruptured and suffer so easily from strained or rheumatic backs and sides. That is one reason, too, for dyspepsia. The blood is never flowed across the stomach and back as it should be. The liver squeeze stretches and strengthens the muscles of the lower and upper back and the great flat muscles across the breast and abdomen, and, as its name implies, stimulates and increases the blood supply of the digestive organs underneath these vital muscles.

Do this exercise every morning and night five times, if you are over forty, ten times if under, for a week. Then add one a day to the number until it reaches thirty. That is enough for the average man. In two weeks you will find that your stomach and back are hardening, that your appetite has increased and that your digestion is better.

After the liver squeeze and after each exercise take five long, slow breaths, holding for a moment and breathing out slowly. Breathe right down to the bottom of the lungs or, rather, right up to the little upper corners that are so seldom inflated in everyday life and where the fatal tuberculosis bug always gets its first foothold.

Then lie down flat on the bed with the legs hanging over the side and slowly raise them, without bending, straight up and down again. Put one hand on the stomach and see how the abdominal muscles come up in hard ridges. This is the "melter," so called because it melts the fat off the stomach. Five times every morning and night is enough for the first two weeks. Then add one a day until it, too, runs up to thirty. This is the great weight reducer and is used by all athletes to get into condition and take off "slush," as the trainers call the fat that gathers so quickly and insidiously over the stomach.

After this exercise and the five deep breaths stand with the stomach in, chest out and arms straight out at right angles to the body, shoulder high, and make each dumbbell describe a small circle, kneading the shoulders back. This is part of the military setting up exercises to insure a good carriage. The average man works over a desk all day and long before he is fifty stoops at the shoulders. Twenty times every morning and night is enough for the first two weeks. Then increase it slowly up to a hundred.

The last of the exercises is for the neck muscles, which never get any exercise and often let the head sag forward. Clasp the hands back of the head and bend the head until the chin touches the breast. Then push the head back against the pull of the hands, keeping the chin down. Do it the same number of times as the setting up exercise, and in a few weeks you will be looking the world in the face again.

All of these exercises should, of course, be done before an open window or on a sleeping porch. If possible do them stripped. This gives the skin an air bath and hardens it so that it can resist cold and colds.

After these exercises take a cold sponge or tub bath and drink one glass of cold water. Get up early enough to walk at least a mile on your way to work and again on your way home. On either walk don't think of business. Relax your mind, watch the people you meet or, better still, get some friend to walk in and out with you. This prescription is to be mixed with eight hours of sleep daily.

These exercises take less than ten minutes, and you can't use twenty of the daily 1,440 to better advantage. Try this system for three weeks and see what an increase of power and vitality there is and how much easier it is to think and work and play with a helping instead of a hindering body.—New York Tribune.

A Man.

Such a busy man is he
  All the sunny hours,
Up and down the garden beds,
  Digging weeds and flowers.
Never man so bold and brave
  In the house would stay
When the sunshine and the earth
  Beckon him away.
See the dog, obedient
  To his every whim.
How the little chicks will fly
  At the sight of him!
How the geese will hiss
  When he gives them chase!
Chanticleer and Brindle, too,
  Join them in the race.
Every inch a valiant man
  In the broad daylight.
Search and find him if you can
  At the fall of night.
Folded close to mother's breast
  Lies the head of gold—
Just a little baby boy,
  Only four years old!

MRS. DEBORAH R. HARKNESS.

The funeral of Mrs. Deborah R. Harkness was held Friday June 12th. Short services were conducted at 1:30 at the house by Lewis G. and May B. Pim and the services at the Raisin Valley church at 3 o'clock were conducted by Rev. Merrill Coffin. Six of the seven children of the deceased attended the services, Richard J. Harkness of Boulder, Colorado being unable to come. There were also present seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, a nephew, Dr. A. W. Crane of Kalamazoo and his mother Mrs. Julia Crane. Other relatives were present from Adrian and Rollin. The bearers were relatives, and the burial took place at Raisin Valley cemetery. The following obituary was read at the funeral.

Deborah R. Harkness died at her home at Tecumseh, Mich., June 10, 1914, aged 91 years and 17 days. She was the daughter of Elijah and Mary Crane, and was born in New York city, May 24, 1823. She moved with her parents to Michigan when she was 16 years old, settling at Raisin Valley, near Adrian. She was united in marriage with Richard Harkness April 20, 1843. To this union were born 12 children, seven of whom are living: Mary C. Wood of Tecumseh, David Harkness of Spring Harbor, Richard J. Harkness of Boulder, Colorado, Lydia M. Causie of Jackson, Deborah H. Derbyshire of Manton, Nathan E. Harkness of Chicago, Hannah Abels of Tecumseh. Rev. Harkness died May 20, 1913.

Mrs. Harkness was a birthright member of the Friends church, but was converted in early years, and has thus spent a long life of usefulness as an earnest christian. She occupied the position of an elder in the church 55 years. Not only has her influence been exerted on her own family, but she often accompanied her husband in his work as a minister of the gospel.

Her own talents and her education fitted her for service in many ways, and she valued the work of the Raisin Valley Seminary, sometimes depriving herself of her children's help to keep them regularly in school, that they might be fitted for usefulness. Her friends cannot mourn her loss but rejoice that she has entered into rest, and as she said a short time ago, "If I should not live, I want to say that I place all my dependence for my salvation on the atoning blood of Christ."

On Friday evening at the church occured the Commencement exercises of the Ridgeway Public School. At 7:45 to the strains of the march by Mrs. Barnes at the pipe organ the class march in through an aisle made by the Juniors who formed an arch with spears bearing the class colors, green and white. The march consisted of: Rev. F. O. Jones, Prof. F. R. Atchison, Miss Mary Anderson and the six graduates Guy L. Hindes, Earl L. Harrison, David Berry, Dewey Berry, Raymond Shough and Jessie Shough. Each one did his part well. The program was interspersed with music by Mordens Orchestra of Adrian what was much enjoyed by all present. The church was well filled.

The center of the balcony was taken by the Juniors who had a handsome booth of their class colors, while on the right and left were the sophmores and freshmen with their respective colors as decorations. The auditorium of the church was handsomely decorated with branches and green foliage on either side of the room with festoons of white crepe paper for each window overhanging the branches which were gracefully plecd between each window. The whole west end of the room was a solid bank of foliage consisting of branches and the banner 'Ridgeway' on one side, while on the other, the large pipe organ was nearly concealed by the beautiful foliage and flowers while in in the corner to the north, just off the platform the piano was visible in a deep mass of foliage and ferns and beautiful flowers. Here the orchestra endered the sweet strains which seemed to come from some beautiful grove. The altar rail was draped with white and banked with beautiful ferns and at either side were beautiful flowers. The railing of the balcony was also latticed with yellow and blue and studded with beautiful roses. On the platform were easy chairs for each graduate and also the teachers. The address by Dr. Gray was fine. Prof. F. R. Atchison made the presentation speech in a very able way, with very good advice to the class. The class and each one in the march wore beautiful white roses. The decorations was arranged by Lester Heesen of Tecumseh.

THE Paige Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which it has to pay interest—it has no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends.

That enables it to put a full dollar of actual value into the car for every dollar of the selling price.

And this excess of real value creates a demand for Paige cars that cuts selling and advertising expense to the minimum.

And this in turn makes it possible to put still more value into the car.

Doesn't that look like sound reasoning?

Doesn't it make you want to investigate the Paige still further?

And just remember this—It is going to pay you to get your name on an order blank as quickly as possible—The Paige is going to sell a million dollars' worth of cars this year.

STORES CLOSED JULY 4

We wish to call the attention of our friends and readers to a local announcement appearing in this issue advertising the closing of about 40 of our stores all day July 4th next.

Our merchants and banks are to keep open Friday evening on the 3rd of July, so keep this in mind and do your Saturday night shopping Friday night and help make this holiday for our merchants a success.

Our merchant as well as ourselves are entitled to a holiday once in a while we are to much in the habit of expecting to find him behind the counter whenever we wish to call on him. He surely is intitled to a day off now and then so let us help to make this coming fourth a holiday and be sure and stock up with your needs for Saturday and Sunday on Friday.

The banks will not be open on Saturday or Saturday evening July 4th so plan to do your Saturday business with them on Friday. Let all pull together and make July 4th a real holiday in Tecumseh.

Worth Knowing.

Few people will say that Noah took more than two of each kind of animal and fowl into the Ark, yet here is what the Bible says on the subject (Gen. vii:2): "Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens the male and his female, and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female." (Gen. vii:3): "Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Harry K. Thaw was denied release on bail pending consideration by the supreme court of his extradition from New Hampshire to New York. The court also declined to grant the request that Thaw be taken to Pittsburgh in the custody of Sheriff Drew of Coos county, New Hampshire, to testify in the settlement of his father's estate.

Judge Aldrich of the federal court in New Hampshire ordered Thaw's release on habeas corpus proceedings. The supreme court will next pass upon that.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only: they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 6 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

It is hard to laugh at misfortune after you have run into a rocking chair in the dark.

Get Rid of the Torment of Rheumatism;

Remember how spry and active you were before you had rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles? Want to feel that way again? You can—just take Foley Kidney Pills. For they quickly clear the blood of poisons that cause your pain, misery and tormenting rheumatism. adv

Saves Companions in Water.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Scuffling for a pocketbook in a canoe at Coguac lake nearly cost the life of C. F. Alting, a Chicago salesman, when the craft capsized. H. E. Bettis, a companion, dragged him safely to a nearby launch.
